Henson To Fund New School of Science & Technology

A major gift of $2.5 million to establish a School of Science and Technology at Salisbury State was announced by Richard A. Henson, chairman and chief executive officer of Henson Aviation, Inc., and Dr. Bellavance, at a press conference held in May at the State House in Annapolis.

According to Bellavance, the new school will be called the Richard A. Henson School of Science and Technology and will offer programs leading to undergraduate science degrees. It will be housed in the University's Devilbiss Science Hall Building. Highlights include the creation of a unique curriculum with an emphasis on field applications, a major scholarship recruitment drive to attract highly motivated students and a commitment to the community at large with involvement of faculty in consulting roles, students in internship roles and cooperative programs with business, governmental agencies, local educational administrations and non-profit organizations.

At the announcement in Annapolis were, from the left, R. Clayton Mitchell (Speaker of the House); Dr. Thomas E. Bellavance; Sam Seidel (president of the SSC Foundation); Richard A. Henson (chairman of Henson Aviation); and Governor Wm. Donald Schaefer

"This is truly a great day in the history of Salisbury State University," said Bellavance in making the announcement. "Everyone associated with the University is deeply indebted to Mr. Henson not only for his generous financial support, but for his personal commitment to enhancing the quality of education in our region. We envision a vital role for the Henson School of Science and Technology within Maryland's higher education system.

"The gift," continued Bellavance, "will help us better prepare our students for careers that will take them into the scientifically advanced world of the 21st century. Thanks to Mr. Henson, we will now be able to make available more scholarships to our students, provide more funds for faculty research, upgrade scientific equipment and expand our national recruitment effort to attract faculty with experience in state-of-the-art science and technology."

Maryland Governor William Donald Schaefer said, "Mr. Henson has clearly demonstrated that he understands the value of higher education both to the Eastern Shore and to the State of Maryland. The public-private cooperation that this gift represents is essential if we are to improve the quality and accessibility of education in the state."

Describing his support for the project, Henson said, "I think we have a right to demand a tangible commitment of quality on our campuses

Eddie Money Concert

Eddie Money, whose bestselling album Can't Hold Back featured single hits "Take Me Home Tonight," "I Wanna Go Back" and "Endless Nights," appears in concert at the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center on Tuesday, Sept. 20, at 8 p.m. The concert is sponsored by the Salisbury State Program Board.

Money's first concert tour in three years last spring took him to Europe, South America and a host of American cities including Honolulu, Dallas, Kansas City and Minneapolis. Also last year, he released a striking black and white video of "Endless Nights." It portrays a dramatic Money, backdropped by the gritty mean streets of downtown Los Angeles at night, singing emotionally about a lost love.

When Money took himself out of the limelight a few years ago, rock and roll temporarily lost one of its most solid and sublime vocalists. The ex-New Yorker parked himself in his northern California home and, for the first time in his extraordinary career, he stayed put. But only long enough to recharge, regroup and eventually record his sixth album, Can't Hold Back.

Brooklyn-born, Money was drawn to rock and roll even during his stint with the NYPD. ("I was an undercover typist!") He moved west to San Francisco where living legend Bill Graham discovered him after winning a battle of the bands at the famed Winterland nightclub. Graham became Money's manager, and in 1977 his self-titled debut album rocked the music world with two smash singles, "Baby Hold On" and "Two Tickets to Paradise." That LP turned platinum as Money's biting, urgent style took hold. Over six subsequent years, he released Life For The Taking; Playing For Keeps; No Control, which contained the all-time Eddie Money anthem "Shakin"; and in 1983 Where's The Party?

Great Leader Series

With presidents and CEOs from several billion dollar companies, the second Great Leader Lecture Series, sponsored by The Franklin P. Perdue School of Business, will again bring to the area regionally and nationally prominent business leaders.

"It's a world class program," said Dr. Timothy S. Mescon, dean of the Perdue School. "Any business school in the country would be proud of our lineup of speakers," which includes such heavyweights as the presidents of Rite Aide, the Home Shopping Network and the Hershey Chocolate Company, and the chief executive officer for McCormick & Company, Inc.

"The theme of the series," said Mescon, "is to promote excellence, and all of the companies represented are first class operations. The series affords a great opportunity for students, faculty

Newsletter Deadline Change

The deadline for the weekly newsletter is changing. Effective immediately, the weekly deadline is Friday at 4 p.m. The SSU News will continue to be published on Thursdays. The volume of submissions for publication necessitated the change.

As always, submit your newsletter articles to the Public Relations Office, room 264 HH.

Pritchard Presents Program On Orientation In England

Dr. Florence F. Pritchard presented a paper in Cambridge, England this summer on the new orientation program which has been developed here to introduce incoming freshmen to college life.

The occasion was the Third International Conference on the First Year's Experience with representatives from 13 countries.

Pritchard, assistant vice president of Academic Affairs, coordinates an innovative orientation program developed by a leadership team representing the administration, faculty and students.

The concern of an international conference with the orientation of college freshmen is a recognition that the personal motivation and adjustment of students is as important as enhancing the curriculum to keep pace with new technology.

Pritchard said that the main issue to come up at the July conference was the increased access to higher education by students of all ages, races and economic levels. Many of today's college students, she pointed out, are the first generation in their families to attend college.

To help new students adjust to college life, Salisbury has a five phase program beginning with campus visits by prospective students and their families in the fall a year before they actually enter college.

The summer before entry, the new students return to the campus for testing to determine their levels of placement. This is a time crucial to their future success when they select their courses, determine their schedules and register. To assist them and get to know them individually, specially trained faculty advisors from each of the University's five schools and an equal number of advisors from the administration are on hand.

The third phase of the program is an orientation course meeting regularly through the first semester. This course, which has been required since 1982, informs new students about the resources of the college and attempts to deal with the demands of residence life and the values and mental discipline required for academic success.

The 805 incoming freshmen are divided into sections of no more than 25 so that they can more easily relate to their instructors and to each other.

Nevertheless, Pritchard conceded in her paper at the international conference that this phase of the orientation program needs more work to overcome student boredom and even resentment of the requirement.

A popular part of the program has been the "Wilderness Option" which was started in 1983. Incoming freshmen who can afford 10 days in August and about $300 are invited to go on a biking, sailing or canoeing trip led by other students and members of the University staff and thus enter college with close associations and friendships already formed.

The Fall Convocation which formally initiates the new semester, is also a requirement of freshmen orientation. A procession of administrators and faculty in full academic regalia and a speaker addressing the new class, set the tone of the academic life to come. It is a symbol of entry into the intellectual community.

A climactic event and perhaps the most popular phase of freshmen orientation is Parents/Spouses Day in October when the families of freshmen spend a weekend on campus attending sample classes, having meals in the dining hall, and being entertained at receptions.

As Salisbury University opens its new year the well-being of incoming freshmen will be a top priority.

BSU Meeting

The Black Student Union will hold a get-acquainted meeting in the Social Room of Holloway Hall on Wednesday, Sept. 7, at 7:30 p.m.

Officers of the organization for the 1988-89 school term will be introduced and the following individuals will speak briefly: Marcus Harley, president of the BSU; Terry Clay, newly employed counselor; Leon Burks, associate dean of Admissions and Financial Aid; Dr. Carol Williamson, Dean of Students; and Dr. O.J. Chapman, BSU advisor, who will announce the two public BSU programs for the fall, including a possible lecture by Frank Frobinson, manager of the Baltimore Orioles.

Swim Meeting

Men and women interested in swimming competively will have a mandatory meeting on Thursday, Sept. 15, at 4 p.m. at the pool.

If you cannot come to the meeting, you must contact the swim coach, Rosie Barretta, by Friday, Sept. 23, to participate. Practice will start on Monday, Oct. 3, at 3 p.m.

Volunteers Needed

Volunteers are needed for the Planned Parenthood of Maryland Clinic in the Health Center on campus. Hours are 4-8 p.m. on Wednesdays.

Contact Susan Yobst at 543-6265 prior to Wednesday, Sept. 21.

Code of Conduct

In order to better provide students with information on expectations for responsible citizenship and procedures for judicial proceedings, a written Student Code of Conduct is published along with a Judicial System Guide.

Topics in the Code of Conduct include academic and computer dishonesty, theft, possession, storage and use of firearms, drug and alcohol use, misuse of University property, false information, assault and verbal harrassment, violence and extremism, disruptive behavior, sexual harassment and hazing.

The Judicial Guide explains disciplinary proceedings in residence halls and campuswide, the function of student advocates, procedural and due process, sanctions and appeals.

The University Sexual Harassment Policy describes informal and formal procedures for handling complaints. Copies of all three brochures will be widely circulated to students and will be available from the University Center information desk and Dean of Students Office, 212 University Center.

Sympathy Appreciated

Gerald Patt, Jr. would like to thank the University community for its support and expressions of sympathy during the recent illness and death of his mother, Bette Jane Patt. A scholarship fund for high school students entering college has been established in her name and any contributions may be sent to Dr. John Lynch, Route 1, Box 305, Princess Anne, MD 21853.

Security Plan

Students and/or their dependents now have an opportunity to enroll in a flexible and convenient insurance plan, The Sentry Student Security Plan.

Any full- or part-time student who is registered and attending a state accredited college or university that formally authorizes the Sentry plan is eligible to enroll. There are no restrictions based on the number of credits or non-credit scholastic hours.

Coverage may also be maintained during the summer vacations and up to one term after graduation. The program offers several good options. Stop by the Health Center for a brochure or application. Salisbury State University has authorized this insurance program.

Fusaro in Europe

Dr. Ben Fusaro, who just returned to Salisbury State in June after spending a year as a visiting professor at the West Point Military Academy, is visiting Scotland and Italy this summer.

In late August he attended an industrial mathematics conference at the University of Strathclyde, Glasgow. In early September he will attend another industrial math conference at the Technopolis, Bari. At both conferences, Fusaro will give presentations on the Mathematical Contest in Modeling, a national college competition in applied math that he originated.

He will be accompanied by his wife Beth, a local potter, and daughter Amelia, a junior at Furman University.

Rogers To Intern At Kennedy Center

The Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council's publicity coordinator, Susan A. Rogers, has been chosen as an intern at the Kennedy Center for the fall.

A senior this year at Salisbury State, Rogers is working toward a B.A. degree in Communication Arts with a concentration in theatre and Arts Administration. Local audiences have seen her as Big Mama in "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof," Ruth in "Pirates of Penzance" and "Bellomy in "The Fantasticks." Last year she was president of the Sophanes Club, the student theatre association of Salisbury State.

Internships at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, the national cultural center, are designed to offer on-the-job experience for people interested in careers in arts administration, management and/or education. Rogers will be working in the communications branch of the Education Department, where she will have the opportunity to meet and work with noted professionals in the arts administration and arts education fields and to participate in the Kennedy Center Education Department's Arts Education Workshop Series.

In addition to the experience of working at the Kennedy Center, Rogers will earn academic credit at Salisbury State through the Communication Arts Department concentration of Arts Administration.

"I am honored to have been chosen for an internship at the Kennedy Center," said Rogers. "I look torward to learning about the various Arts in Education programs throughout the nation and sharpening my skills as I train to be an Arts Administrator and Arts in Education promoter. I hope the information and experience I gain can be brought back and utilized to better the Arts Enhanced Education program of Wicomico County."

Caruthers Parking

The renovation of the Caruthers Parking Lot will not be completed when classes start on September 7. The portion that may be complete will be used by faculty and staff first; remaining spaces may be used by junior and senior commuting students (green decals). The majority of the lot should be ready for use sometime in September.

There are plans for temporary parking at two locations with shuttle bus service available. The locations are Camden Avenue on the south side of Asbury Church and Wayne Avenue next to the football field. The shuttle buses will operate from 8:30 a.m. - 2:30 p.m.

When the parking lot is completed, there will be three entrances/exits. Access may be gained to the lot from Route 13 and from Bateman Street.

Egress from the lot south on Route 13 may be from any of the three exits. To go north from the exits, exit from the north and middle exits by driving south on Route 13 and then merging left to make a U-turn at one of the crossovers. The north exit is for right turns only; left turns are illegal. You may turn left at the traffic lot by Maggs.

The renovated portion of the Caruthers Lot will be used by faculty and staff and junior and senior commuting students. The new portion of the lot will be used primarily by resident students.

Until the lot is completed, everyone is urged to car pool, walk or use a bicycle to help alleviate some of the parking crunch.

The State Highway Administration will continue traffic studies of Route 13 to determine the best traffic patterns.

Pocket Calendars

Edna Quinn of the Nursing Department (543-6414) has two-year pocket calendars (1989-90) for $3. in a variety of styles. They make excellent gifts and "stocking-stuffers." Proceeds will go the the Maryland Nurses' Association, District IV. Call today to place your order.

Choir Members Sought

Sing with the Salisbury State University Choir. The SSU Choir is a non-auditioned ensemble of mixed SATB voices which performs a variety of choral literature from all musical periods and styles.

The choir's membership is open to all undergraduate and graduate students with vocal singing ability and who have some understanding of musical notation. Although membership does not require an advance audition, each singer is expected to sing (within the first week of classes) an informal and private voice placement interview with the director of the choir.

Attendance is required at all rehearsals, sectional rehearsals and concert performances.

The first rehearsal for the fall semester is Thursday, Sept. 8, from 3:30-5:30 p.m. in the Holloway Hall Annex Building, room 105. To register or add MUSA 100-001 Concert Choir (1-credit hour, which may be repeated), see Dr. Thomas G. Elliot, chairman of the Department of Music, on Tuesday, Sept. 6, during registration—drop/add.

For further information, contact Dr. Duane R. Karna, director of Choral Activities, in the Musical Arts Builidng, room 109, or call 543-6385 or 543-6386.

Join the SSU Choir as it prepares for the fall semester Christmas Concert scheduled for Friday, Dec. 2, and share your gifts and talents.

Layton Makes Contribution

Garrett S. Layton, a Salisbury stockbroker, has donated stock valued at $1100 to the Salisbury State University Foundation for the support of music programs and the purchase of library books on ancient Roman history.

A $500 gift to music becomes the first contribution toward purchase of a new concert grand piano for the Salisbury Symphony Orchestra at SSU, said Robert Gearhart, executive director of the SSU Foundation. He estimates the cost of such a piano at $35,000.

Layton long has been a supporter of both campus and community arts programs. A devoted symphony-goer, he served as treasurer and president of the Eastern Shore Symphony Society (ESSS) for over a decade and has attended all but one ESSS sponsored Salisbury performance of the Baltimore Symphony since he moved here 22 years ago. A patron of the recently founded Salisbury Symphony at Salisbury State, he also has attended the majority of its concerts.

He and his wife, Elizabeth, are founding members of WSCL Public Radio, which has a classical music format. WSCL broadcasts from studios at SSU.

The other part of his gift to the SSU Foundation goes to the library. "I give to things I have an interest in," said Layton. "When you think in terms of an academic institution, these extra things are important . . . concerts, lectures, academic books. I use the library all the time. I check books out (and) I decided I wanted to give something back."

According to University librarian James Thrash, "Gifts like those by Mr. Layton allow us to cover a subject in greater depth than our usual resources would permit. Ancient Roman history is not as esoteric as it may sound. It's popular with students; the books will be put to good use."

History gives the Salisbury stockbroker a perspective on world events that can be lost in the day to day rush of news. Recently at a bookstore near Trappe, he found an old National Geographic with a striking fold-out map of the Mediterranean in Roman times. On it, cites had both their Latin and current names. "During the times of Caesar there were as many problems (in the Middle East) as there are today," he noted. "For example, at one point Julius Caesar was kidnapped and held for ransom. Afterwards, the Roman general tracked down and killed his captors." Some 16 centuries later, Spanish novelist Migul de Cervantes also was kidnapped by Moorish pirates and held prisoner for five years, Layton added. "The more things change. . . ."

A confessed history aficionado, he has explored archaeological digs in southern Spain and northern England. Two years ago he and his wife hiked poritons of Hadrian's Wall, which marked the northern limits of the Roman Empire, between England and Scotland.

The Laytons' fondness for music has led to memberships in the Metropolitan and New York City Opera guilds, and they regularly attend performances in Washington, D.C., Baltimore, Philadlephia and New York. "It helps when your wife likes the same thing," Layton added. "We have an 18-year-old-son and (with him) it's all rock."

Said Dr. Thomas Elliot, director of the Salisbury Symphony, "Billions are spent on sports and general entertainment, but the arts wouldn't be around if it weren't for people like Garrett Layton. There are too, too few around. He is that rare individual who not only attends cultural events, but recognizes their need. His enthusiasm and verve catch on, attracting other people.

"Those of us in the arts are provided with a pleasant, two-sided coin. Not only are we receiving support, but we're encouraged to improve the quality (of our art) because we know Garrett and people like him also will know."

AIDS Course Offered

It has been said that AIDS represents a two-fold epidemic: the biological one caused by the HIV virus and the other caused by our own fear. A course titled "The AIDS Epidemic" will be offered this semester.

The course will be an interdisciplinary honors seminar focused on the disease which presents the major health crisis of our time. The approach of the course will be to investigate these two epidemics and their biological, epidemiological, sociological, psychological, political and ethical ramifications. The controversies of the epidemic such as confidentially issues, health costs, and education of children will be examined.

Also, a study of the literature written by gay men, such as And the Band Played On, a widely acclaimed work by Randy Shilts, and The Darker Proof, short stories written by Edmund White and Adam Mars-Jones, will provide personal insights.

Finally, the course will examine the health care, specifically the nursing care, that is needed to deal with the tremendous physical and psychological problems encountered by the 1 1/2 million Americans thought to be now infected with the HIV virus and those 70,000 already diagnosed with AIDS.

The 3-credit seminar which will include films and guest speakers will be coordinated by Mary Kane of the Nursing Department. Students will be required to give presentations and to write papers. The course will meet on Tuesday evenings. For further information contact Kane at 543-6420.

Eastern Shore Landscape Exhibit

The annual exhibit of "Eastern Shore Landscapes" will be shown at the Art Institute and Gallery through Sept. 23. These paintings are in pastels, oils, watercolor and other media. All will be original shown by artists 18 years and older, professional and amateur.

The Gallery is located on Rt. 50 at Lemmon Hill Lane in downtown Salisbury. Gallery hours are Monday through Saturday from noon to 4 p.m. For more information, call 546-4748 or Phyllis Billman at 546-0313.

Bus Trip to Outlets

There will be a bus trip sponsored by Salisbury State MCEA University Chapter 72 going to the Reading, PA outlets on Saturday, Nov. 12.

The one-day trip leaves at 7 a.m. from Maggs and returns at 9:30 p.m. The price is $8.75 for MCEA members and $13.75 for non-members.

Do your Christmas shopping at discount prices. Invite your relatives, friends and neighbors. There will be an all you can eat buffet dinner stop at the Village Inn at New Castle, DE which will cost $10.95. Call Barbara Keene (Campus Recreation, 543-6350) or Bobbi Tyler (Financial Services, 543-6065) to reserve a seat.

Mescon Book Covers Keys To Business Success

In the world of elaborate business theories, hostile takeovers and multinational conglomerates, it is often easy to overlook the basics of successful business. In his new book, Dr. Tim Mescon, dean of The Franklin P. Perdue School of Business, demonstrates that success starts with good people and good management, and not just in the boardroom. "The message in this potpourri is that people really do make the difference."

The book, entitled Showing Up For Work and Other Keys to Business Success, is co-authored with his father, Dr. Michael Mescon, dean of the College of Business Administration at Georgia State University and holder of the Bernard and Eugenia Ramsey Chair of Private Enterprize.

In the easy to read, no-nonsense book, the Mescons challenge the reader with thoughts including: Can you imagine expressing grave concern at overachieving? Can you imagine consternation at too much profit? Can you imagine management's being indignant at beating up on the opposition too badly? In the "real" world of work, in today's hyper-competitive business environment, the Mescons argue that there are winners and there are-runners-up, and in the book you will read hundreds of dynamic case histories that are at once both interesting and relevant to your company.

From where the buck stops to where it starts, from CEO to consumer and the new employee, support staff, sales reps, junior partners and senior partners in between, all can implement the kind of effective top-to-bottom, inside-out management that makes such theory a functioning reality for individuals and large organizations alike.

In addition to their own insights, the Mescons include essays from such national business leaders as Frank Perdue, Richard Henson, John L. Clendenin, chairman of BellSouth, Darryl Hartley-Leonard, president of Hyatt Hotels, James W. McLarmore, founder of Burger King, Robert Leitstein, CEO of Gump's, Samuel Turner, president of Life of Virginia, Karl D. Bays, chairman of IC Industries, Ronald W. Allen, chairman and CEO of Delta Airlines, and Joel R. Wells, Jr., chairman and CEO of SunTrust Banks, Inc.

Showing Up For Work and Other Keys to Business Success is filled with years of accumulated wisdom and experience, of thought and action-provoking encouragement, all tempered with a pleasant, often humorous, conversational tone. It is no wonder that both Mescons are in demand as lecturers and public speakers, for in this father-and-son team's collaborative body of work is evidenced the truly effective communication they advocate. As such, this becomes certainly one of the best business handbooks of the decade.

Tim Mescon also recently published Cases in Strategic Management: An Industry Approach (Harper & Row) and his father, Michael, has authored numerous textbooks including the bestselling introduction to business textbook in the world, Business Today (Random-House).

Heritage Weekend

The Snow Hill Heritage Weekend will host its third annual Antique Show and Sale on Sept. 24 and 25. Again this year the show will be held at the Snow Hill Middle School on Coulbourne Lane. There will be over 30 booths featuring antiques exhibitors from Delaware, Maryland, Pennsylvania and Virginia.

Show hours are 10 a.m. - 6 p.m. on Saturday, Sept. 24, and noon - 6 p.m. on Sunday, Sept. 25.

General admission is $2.50. Reduced price tickets are available in advance at the Julia A. Purnell Museum on Market Street in Snow Hill.

For further information call the Purnell Museum at (301) 632-0515 or the Snow Hill Area Chamber of Commerce at (301) 632-0908.

Certification Test Dates for Delaware Teachers

The Pre-Professional Skills Test (PPST) is required for individuals seeking teaching certification in Delaware. The Department of Public Instruction in Dover suggests that students take the test in their junior year so that retakes can be scheduled, if necessary, in the semester prior to graduation.

The PPST is a standardized examination that measures academic achievement and provides information about proficiency in comunciation and computation skills.

Information on test dates, fees and registration can be obtained from DPI at (302) 736-4686. Questions about the PPST should be discussed with Alvah Constantine, director of Field Experiences, Caruthers Hall, room 148-A.

Career Day

Plans are underway for the Salisbury State Alumni Association's first Career Day, on Thursday, Nov. 10, at the University Center.

The program will include seven panels, each consisting of five alumni. Panelists will discuss many aspects of their careers with students. After participating in these sessions students should have a better understanding of various careers and career paths. An informal reception following the panels will provide students with an opportunity to network with guest speakers.

Alumni have been recruited to represent professions from the following major areas: business administration, education, liberal arts, medicine, natural science and social science.

contacted expressed delight and are excited about participating in Career Day.

Students, staff and faculty are encouraged to take part in the day's activities. More information on Career Day will follow as the semester proceeds.

Pre-Nursing Students

The application deadline for enrollment in the Nursing major for spring semester is Monday, Oct. 3.

This applies to those pre-Nursing students anticipating registering for Nursing 300, Professional Nursing Concepts, for spring, as well as other students interested in the major. The application form may be obtained from the Department of Nursing.

Applications received after October 3 will be considered on a space available basis. The application deadline for the fall semester is March 1.

School of Education Competency Requirements

The School of Education requires that students who apply for admission to the Professional Teacher Education Program must complete specific tests in reading, writing, mathematics and speech.

Starting with the 1988 fall semester the tests used to satisfy the competency requirements will be two sections from the Core Battery of the National Teacher Examination (NTE). The two sections are the Test of Communication Skills and the Test of General Knowledge. Communicaiton Arts 250, Instructional Communication, will continue to satisfy the speech requirement.

If students wish to apply for admission to the Professional Teacher Education Program for spring 1989 and have not taken the current education competency tests, they must sign up for the October 22 NTE testing session. The registration is due by September 19.

To qualify for admission to the Professional Teacher Education Program, students must achieve a score on these tests equal to or better than the qualifying score for Maryland certification requirements. Students who do not achieve a satisfactory score may retake one or both of the tests at the next testing session.

If a student has passed some of the current education competency tests, the rest of the test must be completed in the Learning Center before spring 1989.

There will be an NTE Workshop on Thursday, Sept. 22, at 3:30 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the University Center for students who will be taking the Test of Communication Skills and the Test of General Knowledge in October. Test-taking strategies, test content and study materials will be discussed at the meeting.

Applications for the October 22 test can be obtained at the School of Education Office, CH-148. Questions about test requirements should be directed to Dr. Gerry Rossi, Literacy Task Force chair, in CH-154, or Al Constantine, director of Field Experiences, in CH-148A.

Sea Gull Crabfeast To Benefit Athletics

The Sea Gull Sports Crabfeast kicks off on Sunday, September 18, about 24 hours after the SSU gridders attempt to avenge one of last season's two losses, at Ferrum College. The event at Canal Woods Swim and Tennis Club in Salisbury at 3:00 p.m. is sponsored by Arby's, in conjunction with the Sea Gulls Booster Club. It benefits Salisbury State athletics.

Sea Gull athletes will act as waiters and waitresses, with the meal consisting of crabs, fried chicken, corn on the cob, tomatoes, french fried sweet potatoes, soda and beer. Cost of the feast is $15 a ticket for all you can eat.

The money raised at the crab feast goes to benefit athletics, including the new Hall of Fame Trophy Center and Nautilus room. Tickets can be purchased in advance through the Sea Gull Club by calling Jim Smith at 749-5903 or Ron Willey at 749-2008 or by contacting the Research and Development Office at 543-6175.

New Sprinkler Installed

"People have called us, asking what's happening on the front lawn. I tell them we're looking for groundhogs," said Salisbury State director of Horticulture, Les Lutz. Then he explains what's really happening.

The tunnels of earth in front of Holloway Hall do give the appearance that a colony of moles or groundhogs has struck. What really has moved in, however, is a sprinkler system—with the help of SSU students.

"We like working on a big project—to see something (of this size) that's going to be completed," said Frank Bowen, the student foreman. He and a handful of other SSU students have been laying the system for Holloway Hall's front lawn, which is about the size of two football fields, Lutz said.

For the students, who have used everything from a gasoline powered trencher and backhoe, to picks, shovels and rakes, there have been challenges—the greatest being the heat. "The heat's been rough," said Jonathan Bauer, a Pre-Engineering student who graduated from Parkside in 1987.

A five-gallon water cooler, frequent breaks and the option to quit early have helped him and others cope with the record temperatures.

Bauer used a motorized trencher to work up a two-foot depth of earth for an estimated 3500-4000 feet of piping—nearly three-fourths of a mile criscrossing the lawn. "I'd helped my father lay some irrigation before but this was my first big project," he said.

For Steve Messick, an SSU junior majoring in English and Philosophy who also graduated from Parkside, it was making sure the trenches were clear and level before the pipe went down. "The weather was awful. The best thing was the people. Spirits were good. The plumbers are great. They have a great sense of humor."

The irrigation project has been planned for three years, Lutz said. He did the initial design work in 1985-86; in 1987 a private company drilled an eight inch well near the library. This year digging started.

"The students are really amazing," Lutz said. "They're all good . . . and I think they really get into it. They dug and laid most of the piping in about a week. Holloway's lawn is home to many underground telephone and electric lines as well as gas pipes. They had to do hand digging around utility lines and use picks to dig through the sand." The drought added to their labor. "The sand is like concrete," Lutz noted.

For Bowen, also a Parkside alumnus, his challenges as foreman included dealing with the different personalities in the heat, getting work assignments done in a reasonable amount of time, and using a backhoe which was needed for digging the main lines. An SSU Business Management major, he has worked on the Salisbury State horticulture crew for three years. The experience has been valuable. Two and one-half years ago, he established his own part-time business in landscape installation and maintenance.

Holloway Hall's front lawn which faces Camden Ave., has been a traditional student spot, ranging from May Day celebrations in the early years of the University to ROTC exercises and frisbie today. The sprinkler heads are being buried half an inch below the earth so they won't interfere with use, Lutz said.

Across Rt. 13, University athletic fields also are being equipped with irrigation systems. All sports fields will be irrigated by the end of the summer, according to Lutz.

Students play a significant role in maintaining SSU's 105 acre, 40 building campus. "I think one reason the campus looks as good as it does," said Lutz, "is because the students have invested themselves in its maintenance, and they respect it."

Personal and Professional Development Center

During the summer, Counseling Services and the Office of Career Planning and Placement merged to become the Center for Personal and Professional Development (CPPD). CPPD, located on the second floor of the University Center, will provide students with personal counseling, career planning and job placement services.

In addition to a structural change, CPPD has experienced several personnel changes. Former director of counseling Services, Dr. Robert McBrien, is director of CPPD. Joe Andrade and newcomer Kathryn Reading (B.A., Davidson College; M.Ed., Harvard University) will serve as counselors for CPPD. In addition, Terry Clay (B.A., Howard University; M.Ed., Lesley College; C.A.G.S., New York University) was appointed career development specialist, and Linda Benson (B.A., Washington College; M.B.A., Salisbury State University) has assumed the post of placement coordinator.

CPPD is open 8:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m., Monday - Friday. Appointments can be made in person or by calling 543-6070. Walk-in hours are 1 - 3 p.m., Monday - Thursday. All counseling is confidential and free of charge to students of the University.

CLEP Test

The CLEP test will be given on Wednesday, Oct. 12. The deadline for registration is Monday, Sept. 12. Applications are available in the Admissions Office, HH 151.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Department of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or whereever you may reside. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep your first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away from alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit area or a place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you need an escort to or from your car, call the Department of Public Safety, 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Department of Public Safety, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

Rights, Privacy Act

Salisbury State will assume the right, under the provisions of the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act, to provide student directory information with prior consent of the student.

Directory information is defined as student's name, local address (if listed), date and place of birth, major field of study, participation in officially recognized activities and sports, weight and height of an athletic team member, dates of attendance, degrees and awards received, most recent previous educational agency or institution attended and listing of officers of student organizations (including names and addresses).

In the event a student wants more or less than directory information released, please notify the Office of the Dean of Students, 543-6080, or stop by room 212, University Center.

Grogan Keynote at Biting Fly Workshop

Dr. William Grogan, associate professor in the Department of Biological Sciences, presented the keynote address at the 1988 Biting Fly Workshop held recently at Auburn (AL) University.

Grogan's address was titled "A Synopsis of the Predaceous Midges," in which he detailed the characteristics that distinguish the various groups of these small biting flies that prey upon other insects.

This national meeting is held annually and gathers those scientists that specialize in the study of biting flies such as deer and horse flies, and biting midges which are also known as sand gnats, punkies or no-see-ums.

Grogan also conducted an Identification Workshop on Adult Predaceous Midges at this meeting where he assisted colleagues in identifying specimens that they had collected for research purposes. He also provided these specialists with a synoptic collection of identified predaceous midges to assist them with future research projects.

Grogan hosted the 1985 Biting Fly Workshop, which he convened during June of that year, at Salisbury State.

Employee Assistance Program

Do you know someone who has died from AIDS, or someone who is suffering from the disease? Are you a parent worried about your children's possible exposure to AIDS? Are these feelings of grief or anxiety about AIDS affecting you or your job performance?

If so, the Department of Personnel's Employee Assistance Program (EAP) provides services to state employees, their families and co-workers in coping with AIDS in the following ways: referral to community resources (medical, financial support services, etc.); assistance in coping with AIDS on the job; and information and training resources and referrals for employees at all levels.

These services are provided free or at low cost to the employee and family through the EAP program at 27 locations statewide. All referrals to the EAP are protected by the Federal Privacy Act and are treated in a strictly confidential manner. For more information or a confidential interview, call (301) 333-6418 or 333-2727 in Baltimore.

The Surgeon General issued a booklet to every household in June called "Understanding AIDS." If you did not receive a copy of this booklet, call AIDS Administration at (301-225-1255) for a copy. If you received your copy and still have some questions, call the Maryland AIDS Hotline at (301) 945-AIDS or 1-800-638-6252.

Drama Schedule Varied

reprinted with permission from the Salisbury News & Advertiser (7/14/88)

From the innocence of "Winnie the Pooh" to the madness of "Marat/Sade," from the comedy of "The Foreigner" to the dark humor of "Crimes of the Heart," Salisbury State promises a 1988-89 theater season that can best be described as eclectic.

"We try to deliberately go for as varied a season as possible," said Theatre Director Andy Hepburn. "We will do classics—we've done Greek tragedy, we've done Shakespeare—and will continue to do so, but we're trying to give our students a varied look at theater."

According to Hepburn, putting together the season line up is a matter of serving two masters: meeting the needs of the students, yet programming shows that will entice the community into the theater. "We believe that theater exists in the artistic and humanistic traditions of the liberal arts," explained Hepburn. "Secondly, we offer pre-professional training in the fundamentals and techniques of the craft of the art—acting, scene design, lighting, sound and direction.

"But we're also trying to entertain and enlighten the Salisbury community and the area beyond," he added.

The mainstage season will open in October with a comedy, "The Foreigner." Written by Larry Shue, author of the Broadway play "The Nerd," "The Foreigner" is about an almost pathologically shy young man who poses as a foreigner from an obscure country. The action takes place in the pine forests of Georgia and builds to a theatrical climax after the shy young man—who pretends not to speak English—overhears the machinations of a corrupt preacher. Hepburn will direct "The Foreigner."

In November "Mother Hicks," by Suzan Zeder, will come to Holloway Hall. Set in rural Illinois during the depression, the play centers on a strange woman believed to be a witch and an outcast young girl. While presented as a children's theater production, Hepburn points out that the production is actually "a more adult children's play.

"It's very much a family show," he commented, "suitable from third grade right on through adults." Highlighting the run of "Mother Hicks" will be a visit by the playwright. Susan Zeder will be in residence November 17-19. "Mother Hicks" will be directed by Robert Smith.

"Marat/Sade" is one of contemporary theater's most powerful plays. T. Paul Pfieffer will direct the production.

The season's final mainstage play, "Crimes of the Heart," will be presented by Sophanes, the Salisbury State University student theater club. The entirely student produced drama will be directed by senior theater student Craig Pettinati.

Children's theater has long been an important component of the Salisbury State drama program, and, according to Hepburn, will take on a more important role this coming season. In addition to touring two productions "Winnie the Pooh" and "Pinnochio"—to area elementary schools, the department plans to increase its outreach activities.

A season brochure will be mailed to everyone on the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council mailing list. Anyone not on the mailing list can request a copy of the schedule by calling the council at 543-ARTS.

SPSS Users

A new edition of the manual "SPSS On Vax" is available for campus users of the Statistical Package for the Social Sciences (SPSS).

It includes information on the new interactive mode for running SPSS, as well as instructions for using the EZSPSSX Manager, a simple user interface for working with SPSS.

The manual is being sold in the Book Rack, but a few complimentary copies are available for faculty. Contact Ed Steffes in the Department of Sociology and Anthropology, 543-6430.

Monster Book Sale

Blackwell Library's annual Monster Book Sale is on Tuesday, Sept. 13, from 9 a.m. - 3 p.m. on the library terrace.

Books will be available on a wide variety of subjects. At 35 cents each or three for $1, there should be something for everyone.

For those who are really tight with their pennies, there will be a "Freebie" table.

The rain date is Wednesday, Sept. 14.

and, in our state houses, a leadership with vision and a courage that says, 'Less than best is not enough.'

"Salisbury State has proven its commitment to such quality," continued Henson, "and Governor Schaefer has made it clear by word and deed that he has a vision regarding the importance of higher education to our economy and has had the courage to take that issue to the Legislature and move to invest in this partnership.

"I can only add that I appreciate the opportunity to participate in this venture," he said, "and I hope we will see more of this kind of cooperation between industry and government in the future."

Henson Aviation, Inc. was founded in Hagerstown in 1931. It began commuter flights from Salisbury-Wicomico Airport in 1968 and, in 1981, established its corporate headquarters in Salisbury.

Henson Aviation currently employs over 1,000 people, 370 of them in Salisbury, with a profit-sharing program that distributed approximately $1.2 million to its employees in 1987. This year's payroll will be about $19 million with revenues projected at $97 to $100 million.

Dr. John Molenda, dean of the existing School of Science, lauded the endowment as a landmark in the school's young history, now in its fourth year.

Currently the School of Science houses the departments of Biological Sciences, Computer Sciences, Geography and Regional Planning, Mathematical Sciences, Pre-Med, Chemistry and Physics. A quarter of all the courses taken by the student body as a whole are in the School of Science.

"The endowment will allow us," said Molenda, "to pursue new thrusts in science and technology—Molecular Biology, Genetic Engineering, Microelectronics—and to significantly upgrade our scientific instrumentation."

"However, the main thing the gift will accomplish," he added, "is to expose the Salisbury State student to state-of-the-art techniques and equipment so they can successfully compete in the scientific world of tommorrow."

Frank Perdue, founder of Perdue Farms, Inc., and a native of the Eastern Shore, established The Franklin P. Perdue School of Business in 1986 with a $2.45 million endowment.

He praised Henson's recent decision to make a similar gift to the School of Science. "I am an ardent believer in the need for quality education," said Perdue. "I can think of no better way to give something back to our community than to support higher education. I salute Dick Henson for doing just that, especially in such a substantial manner."

Following 1983's Where's The Party? album and tour, Money took that much needed break. He married, produced an LP by Eddie and the Tide for Atlantic Records, and continued writing new material. "I really write well when everything's on the line," he said. His return to the studio, however, was slow and careful. "This album was important to me, I wanted to make sure it was right."

Tickets for the concert are $11 for SSU students and can be purchased beginning Wednesday, Sept. 7, at the University Center information desk.

and local businessmen and businesswomen to meet with leaders in a variety of industries."

The first speaker will be Charles P. McCormick, chairman of the board and CEO of McCormick & Company, Inc., who will visit the University on Thursday, Sept. 22, at 11 a.m. McCormick is a diversified specialty food company and a worldwide leader in the marketing, manufacturing and distribution of seasoning, flavoring and food products to the food industry–retail outlets, food service and food processors. McCormicks' products are processed at 52 facilities throughout the world and are sold in 83 countries.

Following McCormick, the fall schedule features: Harlow Fullwood, Jr., president of Fullwood Foods, Inc. (Kentucky Fried Chicken fanchisee), Wednesday, Sept. 28, noon; John W. Hechinger, Sr., chairman of the board of Hechinger, Wednesday, Oct. 12, 11 a.m.; Joseph P. Vivian, president of Hershey Chocolate Company, Thursday, Oct. 27, 12:30 p.m.; John L. McElroy, Jr., chairman and CEO of Wheat First Securities, Inc., Monday, Oct. 31, time to be determined; and Lowell W. Paxon, founder and president of Home Shopping Network, Monday, Nov. 7, time to be determined.

Leading off the spring slate of lecturers will be Richard J. Otero, president of RJO, the so-called "Beltway Bandit" consulting firm. His presentation will be at 11 a.m. on Wednesday, Feb. 22.

Otero will be followed by: William B. Potter, CEO of Preston Corportation (Preston Trucking), Tuesday, March 7, 11 a.m.; Alex Grass, chairman of the board and president of Rite Aide, Thursday, March 30, time to be determined; James P. O'Connor, chairman of the board of O'Connor, Piper & Flynn Realtors, Tuesday, April 4, 11 a.m.; Raymond Mason, CEO of Legg Mason, Inc., Monday, April 17, noon; and John W. Jardine, Jr., president and CEO of Chesapeake Utilities Corportation, Tuesday, May 2.

Also scheduled during the spring at dates to be announced are Bradford R. Ross, chairman of A.T. Cross Company, and Thomas E. Smith, president and CEO of Food Lion.

Mescon said the lecture series will be videotaped so that students may draw on the information presented for future study and reference, creating an archive at the school.

All lectures are free and open to the public. They will be held in the Wicomico Room of the University Center.

The beauty, bounty and zest of the Chesapeake are revealingly captured in a photography exhibit by M.E. Warren, now on display at the University Center Gallery through September 30. Hours are 10 a.m. - 4 p.m.; the public is invited.

Warren will be present for a "Meet the Artist" session and informal talk in the University Center Gallery Tuesday, Sept. 20, at 4 p.m.

According to Warren, in his photographs of the Bay he seeks to provide a complete photographic record of the Chesapeake and its people: how they live and work; the environment—its problems and solutions and beauty; a life that is disappearing through the encroachment by housing, marina, boatyards and filling of wetlands. The purpose of this undertaking is to stimulate public awareness through seeing.

"Read between the lines of the photographs in this exhibit depicting the action of man and nature . . . their conflict and their strife to co-exist on this small but vital spot on earth . . . the Chesapeake Bay," said Warren. "Scrutinize each print, critically inquiring about its content, because these photographs are trustworthy evidence and your interpretation of these prints may help you to a better understanding of the Bay and its future."

A resident of Annapolis since 1947, Warren has gained an enviable reputation for his portrayal of the unique and picturesque charm and beauty of Maryland and the Bay.

Warren's photographs have been published in leading national magazines and other publications. His widely recognized camera artistry has been featured in numerous one-man shows regionally and nationally, including exhibits on Annapolis circulated by the Smithsonian and the Baltimore Museum of Art.

Gridders Post Dramatic Win

It was a football fanatic's fantasy; a coach's on-again, off again nightmare or dream; and not a game for the faint of heart.

Saturday, Salisbury State played its first football game as a University. And on the strength of the right arm of Kevin White, and the legs of Jerry Short and Donald Washington, the Sea Gulls capped a stunning afternoon of football, scoring the winning touchdown with 19 seconds left, beating C.W. Post, 27-24.

After dropping the initial two season openers between the two clubs, this was the third straight Salisbury State triumph. And, it was one that the packed gathering at Sea Gull stadium enjoyed immensely.

The opening stanza was quiet, goose eggs showing up on the scoreboard.

However, after an exchange of punts, the Gulls took over at their own 42. And with the aid of a 28-yard White to Duncan McLean pass completion, the Gulls took the lead when Washington scored from four yards out.

Post followed with a 67-yard, 15-play, 8 1/2 minute drive to take the lead on an 11-yard pass from Jeff Doyle to Eugene Evans.

With less than two minutes in the half, the Gulls took over at their own 20. It took the White and Short duo just 16 seconds to find the end zone, as the 80-yard pass play sent the Gulls into intermission up 13-7. The extra-point conversion by Billy Schmidt was the 4,000 point in Salisbury State football history.

It was all Post in the next 24 minutes, though, with the Pioneers scoring 10 points for a 17-13 advantage.

The final six minutes of the game will probably be permanently etched in the minds of everyone who was there.

From their own 26, a 9-yard pass from White to Mark Hubler set up a second and one for SSU from the Sea Gull 35. Washington then broke the next play down the near sideline 51 yards. A combination of carries by Short, Washington and White, including a quarterback sneak on fourth and inches, set up a second and goal from the two, where Washington took it in for a 20-17 lead.

Game over? Not quite.

Post took the ball at its own 21, and Doyle moved the Pioneers down the field with completions of 15, 19, 10 and 3 yards, along with a carry of 11, before giving Post an apparent win on a 19-yard pass to James Brooks with 45 seconds left. The PAT made it 24-20.

Game over? Not yet.

Brian Watson and Short combined on a reverse on the ensuing kickoff picking up 35 yards, giving the Gulls first down at their own 43. About 35 seconds remained and the Gulls had but one timeout to call. Ten seconds later, White found himself calling a first and goal from the Pioneer eight, following a 49-yard completion to Hubler. And on that first and goal, a timing pattern, that was worked on 24 hours

The 'Artist in Business' Seminar

Noted sculptor and lecturer Libby Platus will present a workshop/lecture titled "Artist in Business: Controlling Your Own Destiny" on Thursday, September 22. Sponsored by the Department of Art and the School of Business, the one-day seminar will be geared to visual artists and those devoted to the business of selling art.

For further information on the workshop/lecture, contact the Art Department at 543-6270.

Sea Gull Crabfeast To Benefit Athletics

The Sea Gull Sports Crabfeast kicks off on Sunday, September 18, about 24 hours after the SSU gridders attempt to avenge one of last season's two losses, at Ferrum College. The event at Canal Woods Swim and Tennis Club in Salisbury at 3:00 p.m. is sponsored by Arby's, in conjunction with the Sea Gulls Booster Club. It benefits Salisbury State athletics.

Sea Gull athletes will act as waiters and waitresses, with the meal consisting of crabs, fried chicken, corn on the cob, tomatoes, french fried sweet potatoes, soda and beer. Cost of the feast is $15 a ticket for all you can eat.

The money raised at the crab feast goes to benefit athletics, including the new Hall of Fame Trophy Center and Nautilus room. Tickets can be purchased in advance through the Sea Gull Club by calling Jim Smith at 749-5903 or Ron Willey at 749-2008 or by contacting the Research and Development Office at 543-6175.

Center for Personal and Professional Development

Need assistance in sorting out your career goals? The Center for Personal and Professional Development (CPPD) provides students with a variety of career planning and job placement services.

Counselors can help students make decisions regarding academic major, the development of a career plan or the changing of career directions. Career planning workshops, sponsored throughout the year, will focus on resume writing, interviewing skills, graduate schools and major selection. In addition, a career library is available for students to use when convenient. Once students have decided on general career goals, job placement counseling is provided, and students may participate in on-campus recruiting activities.

In addition to career planning and placement services, the CPPD provides personal counseling to help students resolve concerns which are interfering with academic work or personal growth.

The CPPD, located on the second floor of the University Center, is open 8:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m., Monday - Friday. Appointments can be made in person or by calling 543-6070. Walk-in hours are 1 - 3 p.m., Monday - Thursday. All counseling is confidential and free of charge to University students.

Campus Leadership Workshop

A representative from each student organization and its advisor is invited to participate in "Learn It Through the Grapevine," a campus leadership workshop, Sept. 30 - Oct. 2 at the University Center.

The workshop is designed to help student leaders develop leadership and programming skills and to facilitate communications between student orgzanizations.

Dr. Floyd Hoelting, director of Residential Life at Illinois State University, will conduct the workshop. Hoelting is nationally recognized, having conducted similar workshops at over 300 campuses. Registration forms for the workshop may be picked up in the University Center Office, room 222. The registration deadline is Wednesday, Sept. 28. Enrollment is limited.

For more information on "Learn It Through the Grapevine, call Barry King (543-6080) or Karen Kimpton (543-6102).

Part-time Layout/Typset Position

Publications Department seeks person with layout and typesetting experience to handle weekly newsletter production. Sundays and Mondays, 4 p.m. - midnight. No benefits. Salary based on experience. Call 543-6030 by September 19.

SSU is an equal opportunity affirmative action employer. Qualified women, minorities and disabled are encouraged to apply.

T'ai-chi Ch'uan Course

The Office of Continuing Education will sponsor a non-credit course on T'ai-chi Ch'uan from 7 - 8 p.m. on Mondays, Sept. 19 - Nov. 8, at Maggs. Tuition and fees are $34.

The course will be taught by Dr. Ben Fusaro, who has studied this form of Chinese physical culture both in the U.S. and Taiwan. He has been teaching T'ai-chi in Wicomico County since 1976.

For more information, call the Office of Continuing Education at 543-6170.

History Club Meeting

The History Club meets to organize for the new school year on Monday, Sept. 19, at 1 p.m. in the third floor, south lounge of Holloway Hall.

The club will hold elections for officers and plan the fall and spring trips. Last year's visit to Charlottesville, VA and to Monticello was a tremendous success.

All students and staff are welcome at the meeting. Even if you do not have time to be an active member, come to the meeting and let the club know some places of historical interest you would like to visit.

If you have questions, call Dr. Tim Miller at 543-6243 or 543-6245.

'Primadonna' in Concert

What has "a little of Carol Burnett, Anna Russell and Miss Piggy all in one?" The answer is the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council's fall fundraiser, a one-woman theatrical event called "Primdonna." This evening of comedy will be presented on one night only, Saturday, Oct. 15, at Parkside High School Auditorium.

"Primadonna" is the creation of Ms. Mary Lou Fallis, a Canadian singer and comediene. Her show blends high comedy, high art and high Cs while tracing Primadonna's singing career from her first public appearance at age two, through Kiwanis festivals in adolescence to her first big break and finally to starring roles.

Tickets for orchestra seats are $18 for dress circle. The event is black-tie optional or "artistically formal."

Tickets are available at all 11 Peninsula Bank locations during regular lobby hours or the two Salisbury locations of John Hanson Savings Bank. For more information contact the Arts Council at 543-ARTS.

Berry Presentation

Dr. Robert Berry, associate professor of History, has been invited to participate in the area studies program of the Foreign Service Institute in .Washington, D.C., on Sept. 21.

The Institute, part of the State Department, trains foreign service officers before placement in American consulates and embassies abroad. The title of Berry's presentation is "The Lands of Partitioned Poland, 1795-1918."

Holder of a Ph.D. in East European History from Indiana University, Berry's special area of interest is Polish diplomacy in the 19th century.

Pushcart Winner To Read Here Sept. 29

Award-winning story writer Lee K. Abbott reads from his own works on Thursday, Sept. 29, at 7:30 p.m. in Caruthers Hall Auditorium.

Abbott, winner of this year's Pushcart Prize for fiction and a 1987 Pulitzer Prize nominee for Strangers in Paradise, has had his stories appear everywhere from The Atlantic to The Georgia Review and StoryQuarterly to The Best American Short Stories (edited by John Updike).

Strangers in Paradise includes his O. Henry Award-winning "Living Alone in Iota," the Pushcart Prize-winning "X," as well as "Time and Fear and Somehow Love," which was selected for Volume II of The Editor's Choice.

The collection of 14 stories of seemingly ordinary lives is set in the American southwest. "There is a lot of inner generational tension, particularly between sons and fathers," said Dr. John Wenke, of the English Department. "Funny? Yes," Wenke said about Abbott's work.

"Mr. Abbott's stylized, hyperbolic prose and loopy humor steal the show," said The New York Times Book Review about Strangers.

Respected novelist Stanley Elkins called it "lyrical and generous."

His writing "packs the punch of a Smith & Wesson," added critic and author Max Apple.

Abbott's two earlier story collections are the highly praised Love Is the Crooked Thing and the St. Lawrence Award-winning The Heart Never Fits Its Wanting. A new collection, Martians, is scheduled to be published in February.

He also has written essays, articles and reviews for Rolling Stone, the Cleveland Plain Dealer, The Los Angeles Times and The New York Times Book Review, among others.

An associate professor of English at Case Western Reserve, Abbott was raised and educated in New Mexico. He recently has been awarded his second fellowship from the National Endowment for the Arts. He makes his home in Cleveland with his wife and two children.

"What we're trying to do at the University is bring in young writers like Lee Abbott and Richard Ford (who read last year) who are on the verge of becoming national figures," said Wenke. "Abbott also is an animated, entertaining reader," he added. Admission is free and the public is invited.

Man and Nature

There will be a meeting of the Man & Nature group at 1:30 p.m. on Friday in the Choptank Room of the University Center. This group has met several times over the summer and invites interested faculty, staff and students to attend.

From the start of civilization there has been a shift in the perception of how human beings relate to nature. The move has been from a cyclical, in-step-with-nature, systems view to a linear, anthropocentric, man-in-control view.

The Man & Nature group has a goal of re-emphasizing this traditional perception. An immediate goal is to organize a spring 1989 program of speakers and panels. Long-range goals call for infusing this perception into the curriculum.

For more information, call Ben Fusaro, 543-6470 (6471 for a message).

Assistant Director of Physical Plant for Project Management Sought

ROTC Fall Ceremony

An open invitation is extended to all interested faculty and students to attend the Wednesday, Sept. 21, ROTC Awards Ceremony from 4 - 5 p.m. in Red Square.

The cadet battalion will be formally activated for the '88/'89 academic year, and the chain of command will be announced. Seniors selected as Distinguished Military Students will be recognized and RECONDO badges will be awarded to the cadets who successfully completed that grueling phase of training at Advanced Camp this summer.

Each year the Office of Alumni Relations launches a campaign to raise unrestricted contributions from its 11,000 alumni.

The money is deposited in the SSU Foundation, Inc. Unrestricted contributions are necessary in order to fund projects deemed necessary by the University for which state money is not available. As at all institutions of higher education, a mark of the ability to provide a quality experience for its students is the availability of unrestricted private contributions.

Last year, alumni contributed $55,000 to SSU. The largest amount was generated during the Alumni Association's spring phonathon in which current students spent the evenings calling alumni. Some $33,000 of the $53,000 pledged had been received by June 30 with more still being received.

Some 2,000 alumni responded to the phonathon effort. Of them, 100 contributed at least $100 and 1,200 either increased their gift or pledged for the first time.

John Charrier, Class of '75, will head this year's fund drive. His emphasis will be on giving better recognition to donors through publishing an Honor Roll of Donors in the alumni news magazine, the Scene, and by establishing new gift clubs. The basis for gift clubs is to recognize alumni who contribute leadership gifts or who contributed consistently over a period of years.

Charrier's committee also includes Barry Tull, Class of '67, and Ed Baker, Class of '71. The committee kicks off this year's campaign in October. The goal for this year is $75,000 in pledges by June 30.

Speakers Bureau

Several staff and faculty made presentations to area civic and community organizations in the last few months. All were coordinated through the Speakers Bureau.

Dr. Harry Basehart, a member of the Political Science Department, addressed the Ocean City Rotary Club. The topic of his presentation was "The Presidential Primaries."

Ken Basile, director of Development at WSCL-FM, addressed the Delmar Lions Club. The topic of his presentation was "WSCL-FM."

Dean DeFino, a member of the Computer Science Department, addressed the Federalsburg Rotary Club. The topic of his presentation was "God and the New Machines."

Mark Handley, director of the Communications Center, addressed the Ocean City Rotary Club. The topic of his presentation was "WSCL-FM Public Radio."

Handley also addressed the Galestown Ruritan Club on the same topic.

Dr. Thomas W. Jones, chairman of the Biology Department, addressed the Federalsburg Rotary Club. The topic of his presentation was "The Chesapeake Bay."

Dr. Timothy S. Mescon, dean of The Franklin P. Perdue School of Business, addressed the Salisbury Jaycees at its annual Past President's Appreciation Banquet. The topic of his presentation was on the Jaycee's statement of purpose, "Leadership Training Through Community Service."

Dr. Andrew Pica, a member of the Chemistry/Physics Department, addressed the Federalsburg Rotary Club. The topic of his presentation was "New Discoveries in the Solar System."

Lisa Seldomridge, a member of the Nursing Department, addressed the Ocean Pines TOPS organization. The topic of her presentation was "Risk Factors of Cardiovascular Disease."

James Welsh, a member of the English Department, addressed the Salisbury Quota Club. The topic of his presentation was "Academy Awards and Movies in a Changing Society."

Dr. Robert Wesley, a member of the Communication Department, addressed the Federalsburg Rotary Club. The topic of his presentation was "Listening as the Orphan of Education."

Wesley also addressed the Greater Salisbury Ministerial Association. The topic of his presentation was "Everyone's Talking . . . Is Anyone Listening."

Any civic, service or educational organization desiring a speaker should contact Public Relations at 543-6030.

'Maryland Federalist' Displayed

The "Maryland Federalist," a replica of a square rigger sailing ship built in 1788 to celebrate Maryland's ratification of the Constitution, will make its southern Eastern Shore debut October 1 and 2 at the Ward Foundation's 21st annual Wildfowl Carving and Art Exhibition.

The 15-foot wooden ship will be on display in the lobby of the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center throughout the exhibition weekend as well as the following week.

The exhibition will showcase the work of more than 125 exhibitors, including Art LaMay, Fran Sweet, Louis Frisino and Walt Matia. It gets underway with Preview Night—a black tie optional reception held Friday evening, Sept. 30, 6:30-9:30 p.m. In addition to cocktails, hors d'oeuvres and musical entertainment, Preview Night guests will have the opportunity to bid on a selection of fine art during the annual widlfowl art auction.

Tickets to Preview Night are $25 per person. Admission to the Exhibition on Saturday and Sunday is $4 for adults and $3 for senior citizens and students. Children under 12 are free.

For more information contact the Ward Foundation at 742-4988.

earlier during a rainy Friday afternon practice, paid off as White and Short hooked up for the game-winner.

While this was a game to remember, the Gulls cannot rest on their laurels as this week they travel south for a battle with Ferrum College. There is a bit of revenge factor, as the Panthers beat the Gulls by one point, last year, in Salisbury. And while the Gulls were posting the 100th regular season triumph in SSU history over the weekend, Ferrum was beating the defending National Champions, Wagner, 41-13.

On Saturday, in Fredericksburg, VA, the soccer team dropped its opening game of the season, despite an outstanding first half effort, 2-0 to Mary Washington College. Andrew Kennedy came up with 11 saves for the Gulls, who open their home season, Saturday, in an Eastern States Athletic Conference match-up against Spring Garden. Game time is 2 p.m.

The cross country team opened its 1988 campaign by bringing home a first-place crown from the Essex Invitation on Saturday. The Gulls' Rich Williams took first, overall, with a time of 26:24 in the 5.2 mile race. The cross country team travels to the Delaware Invitational on Saturday.

From Policeman-of-the-Year to Five Star Franchisee

Fullwood Continues Great Leaders Series

Harlow Fullwood, Jr., president of Fullwood Foods, Inc., a Kentucky Fried Chicken franchise, addresses an audience of students, faculty and members of the area business community as the 1988-89 Great Leader Lecture Series continues on Wednesday, Sept. 28, at noon. Sponsored by The Franklin P. Perdue School of Business, the presentation will be in Holloway Hall Auditorium.

Once Baltimore's policeman-of-the-year and now the owner of two Kentucky Fried Chicken outlets, Fullwood has embarked on a second career with a trail of successes that would make any entrepreneur smile.

A graduate of Virginia Union University where he was an all CIAA tackle, Fullwood devoted over 20 years of his life to public service before confronting the problem of paying college tuition for his children.

Transforming hard work into success, in the past five years, Fullwood has built growing, award-winning businesses out of an uncertain start, which included having to convert an Arthur Treacher's Fish and Chips restaurant into a Kentucky Fried Chicken. More impressively, Fullwood had to convince Kentucky Fried Chicken management to waive their franchisee financial requirements and offer him the opportunity to display his managerial competence.

Bombarding Kentucky Fried Chicken with documentation of his volunteer work and police honors, and just when KFC was ready to say no, telephone calls from key public and private sector executives throughout Maryland urging approval of the application came into KFC headquarters. KFC took a chance and now his units are in the coveted Kentucky Fried Chicken Five Star Award category, reserved for the company's highest sales performers.

Fullwood is an embodiment of the great American dream.

For more information on the Great Leader Series, call the Perdue Schol at 543-6315.

Live Telecast of Keyboard Teachers Conference at SSU

"Is Independent Studio Teaching a Viable Career?" will be the question addressed at the third coast-to-coast Keyboard Teachers Videoconference (KTVIII). This four-hour live telecast will be held on Thursday, Oct. 27, 11 a.m. - 3 p.m., in Caruther's Auditorium. KTVIII will be broadcast live from Cincinnati, OH, and transmitted via satellite. Audiences at well over 100 sites throughout the country will participate simultaneously.

Linda Cockey, a faculty member in the SSU Department of Music and key organizer of the Eastern Shore site for KTU, realized the need for such a conference in this area. The workshop is for independent teachers, not just college and university keyboard teachers.

Linda Cockey

"Being an independent teacher is rough," said Cockey. "A lot of people work out of their homes during the day because they can't afford to make ends meet and are, therefore, isolated. It's been difficult to get everyone together in the past. I'm very excited about the program."

The Videoconference panel includes four successful independent piano teachers and films from their actual classes in session. Each teacher, representing a different level of involvement with keyboard group teaching, will discuss her teaching techniques and philosophies with other panelists. Showing how a career in group teaching can evolve, they also demonstrate different applications of other videoconference topics—group instruction, preschool teaching, electronic keyboards and master classes.

The broadcast format will allow participants the opportunity to receive the advice and guidance of the nation's leading clinicians and musicians. Audience have the opportunity to phone in questions, complete surveys and discuss and vote on issues related to the video conference theme.

Presented by Clavier magazine and produced by Baldwin Piano and Organ Company, KTVIII is a community effort co-sponsored by SSU, the University of Maryland Eastern Shore, Salisbury Instrument Repair, Salisbury Piano and Organ, Southern Chapter of the Delaware Music Teachers Association, B & B Music, Delaware Piano and Organ, and Lewes Piano and Organ.

Music Among Friends St. Paul Sunday Morning

Sunlight streams through the arched windows of Studio M at Minnesota Public Radio in St. Paul. Violinist Cho-Liang (Jimmy) Lin swings his tennis racket through the air. Pianist Yefim Bronfman smiles as Lin describes the nightmare he's had about someone washing his 1701 Stradivarius with soap and water. Bronfman, who says he's a little tired this morning from too much travel, is nibbling on grapes from the table full of breakfast rolls and fruit. Lin and Bronfman are guests on St. Paul Sunday Morning with host Bill McGlaughlin, a weekly program on WSCL-FM Delmarva Public Radio, which broadcasts on Sundays at 11 a.m. (This particular program will be broadcast on Sunday, Oct. 2.)

When Jimmy Lin and Yefim Bronfman begin warming up for this performance of sonatas by Schubert and Prokofiev, weariness and bad dreams are forgotten. They are smiling at each other, "We kid around a lot outside performance and I think this makes our music better," Lin says. "Of course, when we perform, there's no fooling around."

Bronfman and Lin, whom McGlaughlin refers to as two of the finest young musicians in the world, have been friends since their school days together at Juilliard. Lin was born in Taiwan 28 years ago and began his music study at the age of five. He found his way to Australia and then the United States, where he studied with Dorothy DeLay at Juilliard. Before graduation he was already involved in a heavy concert schedule.

Pushcart Winner To Read Here Sept. 29

Award-winning story writer Lee K. Abbott reads from his own works on Thursday, Sept. 29, at 7:30 p.m. in Caruthers Hall Auditorium.

Abbott, winner of this year's Pushcart Prize for fiction and a 1987 Pulitzer Prize nominee for Strangers in Paradise, has had his stories appear everywhere from The Atlantic to The Georgia Review and StoryQuarterly to The Best American Short Stories (edited by John Updike).

"Mr. Abbott's stylized, hyperbolic prose and loopy humor steal the show," said The New York Times Book Review about Strangers.

Respected novelist Stanley Elkins called it "lyrical and generous."

His writing "packs the punch of a Smith & Wesson," added critic and author Max Apple.

An associate professor of English at Case Western Reserve, Abbott was raised and educated in New Mexico. He recently has been awarded his second fellowship from the National Endowment for the Arts. He makes his home in Cleveland with his wife and two children.

"What we're trying to do at the University is bring in young writers like Lee Abbott and Richard Ford (who read last year) who are on the verge of becoming national figures," said Wenke. "Abbott also is an animated, entertaining reader," he added. Admission is free and the public is invited.

Sports Roundup

Cheryl Ish is quickly becoming as much of a household name to Salisbury State field hockey as Tracey Short and Jill Stewart.

On Saturday, the freshman Ish scored two more goals, increasing her total to four in two games. The Gulls won Saturday's game, played at Mary Washington College as part of a four-team doubleheader, beating Lynchburg 3-1. Sharon Montgomery tallied the other score for the Gulls. And Short came through in the clutch, making six saves on 12 Lynchburg shots, earning her and SSU's second win of the young season. The Gulls next play this weekend when they host the 6-team Sunfest Tournament.

As popular as the name Ish is to field hockey, Rich William is to cross country. The (freshman transfer) Williams won his second race in two starts on Saturday, as he conquered the University of Delaware course in a time of 26:02. The time was the fourth fastest in the history of the University course. In team standings, the Gulls placed seventh, finishing behind UMBC, Drexel, Haverford, Delaware, Catholic and Gettysburg.

Also getting off to a fast start was the SSU volleyball team, as they traveled to Gettysburg for matches with Mary Washington and Gettysburg. The first match, the Gulls handed the Eagles of MWC in straight games, 15-3 and 15-8. The Gulls followed that up with a 15-11, 8-15, 15-13 victory over host Gettysburg. Theresa Kelly, Michelle Hammond and Brenda Bowlin were all instrumental in giving the Gulls a 2-0 start before they head to the Mary Washington Invitational this weekend.

Mary Washington was also the site of the soccer team's first loss. That was followed by a 4-0 shutout at Wesley. In that game Kevin Goode, Kevin Jackson and Kevin Darcy (goal) accounted for the Sea Gull tallies. Eric Bonilla and Andrew Kennedy combined on the shutout. Bonilla also performed admirably in the two weekend games, a 1-0 loss to Spring Garden and a 2-0 loss at Rutger-Camden.

For the football team, the trip on Saturday to Ferrum, VA despite being a loss, showed the Gulls, their fans and others that they are still among the top teams in the nation. A break here or there, officiating and weatherwise, and the Gulls could have come away with the victory. Quarterback Kevin White was 11 for 25 for 129 yards while linebacker Dave Sposato was in on 16 tackles and two touchdowns, in the 24-13 defeat. This week, the Gulls face their number one opponent, Frostburg, in the ocean to the mountains rivalry. Last year SSU beat FSU 40-3.

'Maryland Federalist' Displayed

The "Maryland Federalist," a replica of a square rigger sailing ship built in 1788 to celebrate Maryland's ratification of the Constitution, will make its southern Eastern Shore debut October 1 and 2 at the Ward Foundation's 21st annual Wildfowl Carving and Art Exhibition.

The 15-foot wooden ship will be on display in the lobby of the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center throughout the exhibition weekend as well as the following week.

For more information contact the Ward Foundation at 742-4988.

Calling Artists

The Art Institute and Gallery announces that its next exhibit wil be "Wildlife" and "Still Life" to be shown Sept. 26 - Nov. 4. To qualify, paintings must be original, in pastels, oils, watercolor and other media by artists 18 years and older. Artists interested in exhibiting their works may deliver them to the Art Institute and Gallery Saturday, Sept. 24, from 9 a.m. - noon. Other arrangements may be made by calling in advance. Each artist is limited to three paintings per exhibit. Any work shown in a previous Art Institute exhibit, may not be shown again.

Artist and guests are invited to a reception on Sunday, Oct. 2, from 1 to 3 p.m. Awards for each exhibit will be presented at that time. (First place is a ribbon and $75; second place, a ribbon and $50; third place, a ribbon and $25; and honorable mention, a ribbon.)

The Art Institute is located on Route 50 at Lemmon Hill Lane in Downtown Salisbury. Gallery hours are Monday through Saturday from noon - 4 p.m. For further information, call 546-4748 or Phyllis Billman at 546-0313.

Salisbury State University Gallery—Fall Exhibition Schedule

September 17 - October 5—What Style Is It? On loan from the Smithsonian Institution, this exhibition uses photographs and drawings of important American buildings and their key architectural details, together with explanatory text panels, to show viewers how to recognize the principal styles of American architecture, from the Colonial period to the present.

The Gallery is located on the second floor of Blackwell Library and is open during the academic year Monday through Thursday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday and Wednesday evenings from 5 to 8 p.m., and Saturday and Sunday from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is free.

Women in Carving Featured In Gallery Exhibit

A special exhibit recognizing the work of six award-winning women carvers is on display at the Ward Foundation's North American Wildfowl Art Museum

"Women in Wildfowl Art," which will be at the museum's Herrington Gallery through November, features carvings by Sallie Bennett of Columbia; Gerri Butcher of Highstown, NJ; Rosalyn Leach Daisey of Newark, DE; Sina Patricia Jurman of Alloway, NJ; Penny Miller of Reston, VA; and Joan Seibert of South Dennis, NJ.

The exhibit brings together a variety of carving styles and includes song birds, waterfowl and upland game birds. Sallie Bennett's sculpture of black ducks carved in walnut recently won third place in the world class division at the Ward Foundation's World Championship Wildfowl Carving Competition.

Gerri Butcher's flying grouse is a highly realistic, finely detailed carving which won Best of Show in 1985 at Long Island and Virginia Beach. And, Sina Patricia Kurman's Canada Goose was a ribbon winner at the Ward Foundation's 1985 World Competition.

Rosalyn Leach Daisey, who has authored two books on songbird carving, is exhibiting a life-size tufted titmouse and a house wren. Rounding out the exhibit is a display of miniature carvings—achipping sparrow and a pair of Carolina wrens by Penny Miller and two murres on a cliff by Joan Seibert.

The "Women in Wildfowl Art" exhibit is open during all museum hours. The museum is located in Holloway Hall on the campus of Salisbury State University and is open Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday, 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is free to SSU students, faculty and staff.

Furnace Town Art Exhibit

Furnace Town will feature an exhibit of watercolors, photographs and scratchboard art in the Old Nazareth Church during the months of Sept. and Oct. Artists showing their works include Dick Adkins, Carmen Bailey and David Fegely.

The exhibit is open daily 11 a.m. - 5 p.m. Furnace Town, the 19th century industrial site in the Pocomoke Forest, is five miles north of Snow Hill and 16 miles south of Salisbury off Maryland Route 12. A small site admission fee will be charged. For more information about the art exhibit, please call 632-2032.

Quilters Compete

Furnace Town Foundation is completing plans for the second biannual Juried Quilt Show and Sale. Scheduled for Saturday, October 1, at Furnace Town, the event will run in conjunction with the Fall Festival.

The Juried Quilt Show and Sale will feature regional quiltmakers. Sallie Matthews, an expert in quilting certified by the National Quilting Association, will judge the entries at 10 a.m. on October 1. The quilts will be available to the public for viewing and purchase from noon until 5 p.m.

At 1 p.m., Ms. Matthews will conduct a lecture and slide show on quilting.

Furnace Town, the 19th century historic site in the heart of the Pocomoke Forest, is located 16 miles south of Salisbury and 5 miles north of Snow Hill just off Maryland Route 12. For further information call 632-2032.

Snow Hill Heritage Weekend

Snow Hill celebrates its second Heritage Weekend September 24 and 25.

Sturgis Park, located on the Pocomoke River waterfront in the heart of Snow Hill, will be the focus of many of its activities. Boat rides on the registered tug "Tillie," including canoe tours and musical entertainment (Banjo Dusters & Salisbury State's Brass Ensemble) will play.

Food, the staple of all Eastern Shore festivals, will be available in abundance. Crab cakes, oyster sandwiches, hamburgers, ice cream (made on the spot!), cold drinks and other foods will be available to satisfy hungry visitors.

The Snow Hill Middle School on Coulbourne Lane will be the site of the annual Antique Show and Sale.

Just across Coulbourne Lane at the Snow Hill Elementary School the annual Craft Show and Sale will present dozens of vendors and craftsmen. Horse and carriage rides, 4-H fair, antique automobiles, an AKC dog show and a working display of model railroads at the Sho-Wil Chevy Olds showroom add up to a weekend full of activities.

The Julia A. Purnell Museum of History, the Mt. Zion One Room School Museum, and the Furnace Town Museum all will be open with special weekend tours.

For further information contact the Purnell Museum at 632-0515.

The BSU meets the first and third Wednesdays of each month. The next meeting is September 21 at 6 p.m. in room 108 of Devilbiss Hall. The SSU Gospel Choir, affiliated with the BSU rehearses on Thursdays in the Holloway Hall Annex from 6:30 - 8:30 p.m.

According to faculty advisor, Dr. Oscar Chapman, planning is underway for traditional BSU activities. This year they include a return visit of the Morgan State University Choir, as part of SSU's Black History Week celebrations.

For more information on the BSU or Gospel Choir activities, contact Dr. Chapman in the University Center, room 256, or call 543-6188.

Personal and Professional Development Outreach

At some point during their college careers, most students experience concerns of a personal, interpersonal, academic or career planning nature. At SSU, students with such concerns can turn to the Center for Personal and Professional Development (CPPD) for personal counseling, career planning and job placement services.

In addition to providing in-office services, the CPPD has as part of its mission, involvement in a variety of outreach programs. For instance, on Saturday morning, Sept. 24, career development specialist Terry Clay and counselor Kathryn Reading will participate in a program entitled "Suceeding in College: Issues for the Non-Traditional Student." During this program, personal, career and academic concerns of non-traditional students will be discussed.

The CPPD, located in the University Center, is open 8:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m., Monday - Friday. Appointments may be made in person or by calling 543-6070. Walk-in hours are 1 - 3 p.m., Monday - Thursday. All counseling is confidential and free of charge to University students.

Personnel News

All employees take note—consider submitting your receipts for Heath Care and Dependent Spending Accounts and for Major Medical claims in a timely fashion to avoid an "end-of-the-year mad crunch." Contact the Personnel Office for forms if necessary.

Welcome to new employees: Robert Kehm, maintenance mechanic; Melvin Smullen, director of Custodial Services; Linda Ziegler, academic programmer in Data Processing; and David Brown, director of Recreation and Intramurals.

Research Assistant for Grants and Sponsored Programs

Salisbury State University is seeking an experienced person for the position of Director of Grants and Sponsored Programs. This person will report to the Vice President for Research and Development and will be expected to advance the University by obtaining grants and sponsors to support research efforts of faculty and administrators.

The responsibilities of this position include:

–Working with the academic administration and the faculty to identify areas of research.

–Identifying businesses, industries, foundations, and state and federal agencies which are sources of funds for sponsored research.

–Assisting faculty and academic administrators in preparing budgets for sponsored research they propose.

–Negotiating terms and conditions of research awards with sponsoring agencies.

–Notifying academic administrators and faculty of the terms and conditions of research awards and of the schedules for compliance with these terms and conditions.

–Assuring the existence of administrative structures and faculty procedures required by state and federal law relating to research with human and animal subjects.

–Supporting the development of faculty skills in research proposal writing through activities such as design and delivery of proposal writing workshops and development of a research resources library.

In addition to these responsibilities, the successful candidate will have demonstrated expertise in directly securing sponsors for research and will have significant experience in an agency which has demonstrated a high level of success in securing such sponsors. Salary range is $18,000-$20,000 plus full State benefits.

Applications will be accepted untill October 15 and should be sent in a letter accompanied by a resume which includes names, addresses and phone numbers of five references to: Dr. Gary Pielemeier, vice president of Research & Development, SSU.

Salisbury State University is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action employer. Qualified women, minorities and the disabled are encouraged to apply.

Fossilized Flies Named After Grogan

Dr. William Grogan, associate professor in the Department of Biological Sciences, was honored recently when a colleague named three new species of fossil insects for him.

The descriptions of these new fossil species appeared in a large monograph entitled "Biting Midges From Baltic Amber" which was published in the Entomological Bulletin of Poland by Dr. Ryszard Szadziewski of the Department of Invertebrate Zoology, University of Gdansk, Poland.

These new fossil forms are preserved in amber, fossilized tree resin and similar to pine tar in which the insects became trapped prior to the fossilization process. The resulting amber pieces containing the preserved insects became covered by sediments which later were eroded away by wave action in the Baltic Sea of northern Europe. The amber pieces washed up on beaches of countries in the Baltic region such as Poland and the Soviet Union where they were subsequently found by collectors and deposited in European museums for eventual study. These fossil insects are from the Eocene Epoch and are about 40 million years old.

Szadziewski named the new fossil species in recognition of Dr. Grogan's contributions to the study of biting midges, which are small biting flies, related to mosquitoes, blackflies and gnats. The new fossil biting midges are named Certaopogon grogani, Nannohelea grograni and Eohelea grogani. Two of these groups, Certaopogon and Nannohelea are still living today, but Eohelea is an extinct group of biting midges with apparently no living species.

According to Cockey, "Businesses will be working together and getting to know teachers. The program will show that the University is trying to be in tune . . . aware of what the people out in the community are doing and that we are sympathetic to their problems.

"The purpose of the conference is to try and upgrade the image of teachers as well. We hope to bring the community together—businesses and private teachers. We want it to be a good working relationship."

If the cooperation Cockey has already received from local businesses and professionals is any indication of the sort of community involvement she's aiming for, the program is already a success. Mike Adams of Delmarva Satellites is providing the use of a down link dish at a special rate; Audrey Sherrill, president of the Southern Chapter of Delaware Music Teachers, has been helpful in getting co-sponsors and in promoting the program in the Delaware area; UMES is donating the usage of TV monitors and will be helping Mike Adams with the equipment; Joel Smith of Salisbury Instrument Repair has furnished posters publicizing the event. Local piano teacher Mary Graham and Alma Gregg, professor of piano at UMES, have also supported Cockey's efforts. Mark Handley, director of the Communciations Center at SSU; David B. Ganoe, director of the University Center; Dr. Thomas G. Elliot, chairman of the Music Department; Dr. Nancy Cooper, instructor of Music; and Dr. Gerald Johnson, chairman of the Fine Arts Department at UMES, have all provided valuable guidance and resources.

The registration fee is $15 for teachers and $5 for students. The fee covers the cost of satellite downlinking and various other necessary equipment in addition to a business manual which each participant will receive. Although free refreshments will be provided, it is suggested that everyone bring a bag lunch. Registration started on Sept. 1, and should be received by Oct. 1 to ensure that workbook packets are available to everyone. Late registration, however, will be accepted.

For further information and registration information, please contact Linda Cockey at 543-6385 or Joel Smith of Salisbury Instrument Repair at 543-1200.

Yefim Bronfman, born in Russia 30 years ago, started his music lessons at the age of seven. When his family all musicians, moved to Israel, he caught the attention of Isaac Stern. Later, he was to perform with Stern. "An amazing experience," Bronfman says.

Bronfman and Lin now have busy concert and recording schedules, so it is a rare occasion when they get together, although they have recently formed a trio with cellist Gary Hoffman, and meet once or twice a year to play together.

"It's a real joy for me to be playing chamber music with friends," Bronfman says. Jimmy Lin says it's the give and take in a chamber performance with a strong colleague that makes the experience fulfilling. "I like to make music with the people around me. Chamber music is the easiest way to share in that way. It can be a tug of war. We work very hard. But, the joy overwhelms everything else and ultimately it is relaxing and entertaining."

The idea for this program came from Jimmy Lin, who has appeared on St. Paul Sunday Morning several times since the program began eight years ago. Last year he ran into McGlaughlin and suggested a program of sonatas. "I wanted to do chamber music, not just violin show pieces," Lin says. Then he discovered that his friend Yefim Bronfman was available, and the plan took shape. Bronfman and Lin had just played Prokofiev's Sonata No. 1 in f, Op. 80 at the Aspen Music Festival and were going to New York where they would play Franz Schubert's Sonata No. 2 in a, Opus 137 no. 2. Bronfman had just recorded Prokofiev's Sonata No. 7 in B, Op 80. "It was a matter of good luck and good timing that we were able to put these pieces together for St. Paul Sunday Morning" Lin says.

The easy style of host McGlaughlin adds to the comfort the performers find in Studio M. Bronfman and Lin have both worked with the conductor and trust him. During the program he turns pages for the pianist. "And they bring food," Bronfman says, laughing. "That was a surprise. Wonderful cakes and grapes!" More importantly, though, he says, "Audiences are entitled to know who we are as people, hear our voices and ideas. On this program we sit and chat about our music and ourselves and then we play. It's wonderful."

"It's also a change of pace from the solo concerts that Yefim and I have to give day in and day out," Lin adds. Both musicians agree that chamber performances require them to let go of ego and collaborate on the music in a way that ultimately enhances their solo work. "You learn to listen in a different way, and think of the solo as part of a whole, "Bronfman says. "Playing chamber music with other strong musicians teaches you compromise. And," he adds quietly, "it enriches you as a human being. I am on the road 10 months of the year alone playing recitals. In chamber music, the human contact becomes very important to me."

As he turns pages for Bronfman, McGlaughlin's face reflects the drama and sadness in the final work on the program, Prokofiev's Sonata No. 1 in f, Op. 80. When it ends, quietly and hauntingly, the normally ebullient Lin says he is speechless from the sadness of it. McGlaughlin says, "For me it is somehow calm, almost a resignation. It's not so sad for me." Pianist Bronfman just smiles.

WSCL Board of Directors Meeting

University Center Dedicated

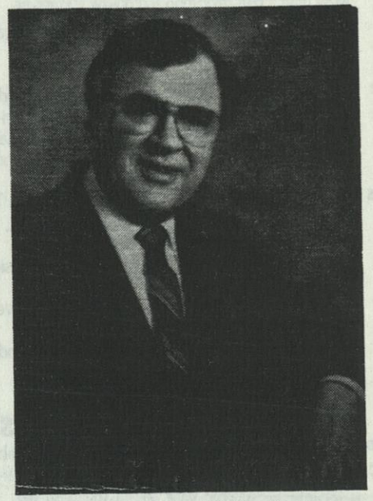
Maryland Lt. Gov. Melvin Steinberg will participate in the dedication of the recently completed University Center on Monday, October 3, at noon at the north end of the building.

Located on the southern edge of campus, the $13 million University Center will provide some 80,000 square feet of meeting and activity space for the entire campus community to utilize.

Inside the Center will not only bring all student organizations under one roof for the first time since the founding of the University, but also will house the offices of both the University Center director and the Dean of Students as well as the counseling center, thus providing a forum for student interaction with peers, teachers and administration.

A large multi-purpose room will be suitable for weekend dances, banquets, lectures, movies or theme parties. The snack bar features a new expanded menu and accomodates coffee houses, movies or live bands. An exhibit room for art and other displays is another added attraction.

A variety of commuter and conversation lounges gives students opportunities for both socializing and studying. "We want to provide students with as many different types of spaces to suit their moods as possible," Dr. Bellavance said. A spacious lounge for large gatherings of friends will contrast to a cozier space with fireplace suitable for personal and philosophic conversations. Study rooms designed for quiet and focused academic work will be nearby. The lounges also provide a common meeting place for students.



Maryland Lt. Gov. Melvin Steinberg

Other services housed in the Center are the campus post office, in which both commuter and resident students can receive mail, the bookstore and a large game room.

Steinberg, Maryland's fourth Lieutenant Governor since the office was reestablished in 1970, brings more than 20 years of legislative experience to the state's second highest elected office.

Steinberg began his career in public service in November 1966, when he won election to the State Senate. In January 1983, beginning his fifth successive term as Senator, Steinberg was chosen by his colleagues to serve as president of the Senate. Steinberg remained in this capacity until his election as Lieutenant Governor in November 1986.

Since that time, he has put to work for the citizens of Maryland the solid administrative and leadership experience he gained during his 20 years of service in the Maryland General Assembly.

Lieutenant Governor Steinberg has become an active participant in the formulation of government policy. Among his many duties, Steinberg is responsible for the coordination and development of the Administration's legislative agenda.

The Lieutenant Governor received his education in the public school system of Baltimore City. He attended the University of Baltimore and received his Associate Arts Degree in 1952. In 1955 he received a Juris Doctorate Degree from the University of Baltimore School of Law.

The public is invited to the official dedication ceremony. In case of inclement weather, the event will move inside the center.

The Foreigner by Larry Shue, winner of the Outer Critics Circle Award and selected one of the 10 best plays of 1984-85, opens this year's Salisbury State University Theatre season.

The Foreigner has its SSU premiere on Friday, October 14, in Holloway Hall on stage.

This comedy-farce is set in a rural Georgia inn where a meek, shy Englishman named Charlie is on holiday. Through a series of funny twists he finds himself surrounded by people who think he doesn't speak or understand English. 'The foreigner' soon becomes little more than a piece of furniture to the other inn residents and visitors; they discuss their most personal problems in front of him. He also overhears a nasty plot by a corrupt preacher. The unmasking of the villians and the rescuing of their victims makes for some suspense and much fun.

Reviewing the original production, critic Jay Joslyn wrote that Shue "has packed a veritable sermon on tolerance and the spirit of human kindness into a wonderfully funny evening." Critics also have praised the play for its combination of comedy and farce.

SSU theatre director Andrew Hepburn agrees. "The Foreigner is an unusual blend of verbal and physical comedy; melodrama and morality tale that's not preachy; and it's a love story to boot," he said.

The play's director has an interesting psychological perspective on the lead character, who because of his 'foreignness' is allowed to get away with some wild antics. In England, Charlie works as a science fiction proofreader. "I think he is drawn to fantasy," said Hepburn, "because of a repressive childhood. In the wilds of Georgia the childlike clown in him is allowed to express himself. I think The Foreigner speaks

Architecture Exhibit: 'What Style Is It?'

"What Style Is It?" Focusing on architecture, this is both the title and the subject of the University Gallery's current exhibition, which challenges viewers to learn how to answer this question for themselves.

The exhibition uses a combination of explanatory text panels, photographs, drawings and small-scale, cut-out models of actual buildings or simplified building shapes to document the characteristic features of 20 American architectural styles, from the Colonial period to the present.

It was organized by the United States Committee of the International Council on Monuments and Sites, the National Trust for Historic Preservation and the National Park Service, and is being circulated nationally by the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service with financial support from the Brown Foundation of Houston, TX.

According the Ursula Ehrhardt, the Gallery's director, "viewers visiting the exhibition not only learn what to look for in identifying the style of a building, but also learn many interesting facts about American society, culture and economic history."

As an example, Ehrhardt pointed out that the Italianate style of the mid-19th century, which was based on the rural architecture of Italy, coincided with the development of cast iron and pressed metal technology. As a result, columns

PE Workshop

The Physical Education Department sponsors an Eastern Shore Tri-county In-service program on Friday, October 7, from 8:30 a.m. - 3 p.m. at Maggs.

Some 50 physical education educators, representing grades kindergarten through 12, from Wicomico, Worcester and Somerset Counties are expected to attend.

A main thrust of the program is fitness testing. Dr. Chuck Dotson, chairman of the American Alliance Task Force for Physical Fitness Testing, will be the keynote speaker. He will compare three commonly used fitness tests: Physical Best, Super Fit and the IRA Test.

Another workshop leader is Caroline Stockham, an educational consultant, who will both lecture and demonstrate fitness activities. Jump rope progression is the main focus of her presentation.

The program also features several members of the SSU Physical Education Department: Dr. Terry Rupert, Youth Fitness Dilemma and What Physical Educators Can Do About It; Ward Lambert, How to Test Fitness; Deann Koehler, Weightlifting and Flexibility; and Holly Boda, Aerobic Dancing.

The Physical Education Majors Club will perform a variety of tests for participants including body fat percentage, cardiovascular endurance, strength and flexibility.

For more information, call the Physical Education Department at 543-6351 or 543-6347.

The Films Committee produces a film series each semester. The chairperson is a part of the selection, promotion and presentation of one of the most popular pastimes on campus.

Applications are available at the Dean of Students Office, Housing Office and the University Center Office. All applications should be turned in at the University Center Office, room 222, no later than Friday, September 30, at 4 p.m.

Man and Nature

There will be a meeting of the Man & Nature group at 3:30 p.m. on Thursday, October 6, in the Choptank Room of the University Center.

We invite interested faculty, staff and students to attend.

From the start of civilization there has been a shift in the perception of how human beings relate to nature. The move has been from a cyclical, in-step-with-nature, systems view to a linear, anthropocentric, man-in-control view.

The Man & Nature group has a goal of re-emphasizing this traditional perception. An immediate goal is to organize a spring 1989 program of speakers and panels. Long-range goals call for infusing this perception into the curriculum.

For more information, call Ben Fusaro, 543-6470 (6471 for a message).

Business Workshop for Vets

A one-day workshop on business start-ups for veterans, "Ideas into Action," will be offered on Thursday, September 29, from 8:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m.

Coordinated through the Institute at the Franklin P. Perdue School of Business, the course is geared to the needs of Vietnam-era and disabled veterans. It outlines how to start a business, either home-based or commercially located.

Participants will learn how to write both a business plan and a marketing plan. Legal forms of organization, including licensing, will be discussed, as well as record keeping for the small business. The program will also address how to finance the new venture.

The workshop is co-sponsored by the U.S. Small Business Administration, Maryland Vietnam and Disabled Veterans Resource Council, Service Corps of Retired Executives and the Maryland Department of Economic and Employment Development.

Conducted in Nanticoke Room A of the University Center, the fee of $10 includes lunch and materials.

For complete registration information, call the Perdue School at 543-6315 or 6323.

Collegium to Perform

The SSU Collegium, under the direction of Dr. Nancy Cooper, will sing for the opening ceremonies of the Newtown Festival on Saturday, October 1, at 11 a.m.

The group will perform Renaissance music appropriate to festivals and merry-making, after which the Newtown Festival will officially begin.

The Collegium is a select group of 17 singers drawn from the student body, staff and faculty dedicated to the performance of music written prior to 1750. Membership is by audition only.

This is the second year that the Collegium has performed in Newtown. Its next performance is scheduled for November 13, when it will be a part of a concert series at the Caroline Public Library.

Smoking Cessation Clinic

This fall a series of five seminars on developing a personal stop smoking program will be offered by the Center for Personal and Professional Development (CPPD). Topics to be covered during the series include: taking charge of your smoking habit; handling stress management through relaxation techniques; coping with the first 24 hours as a non-smoker; learning to cope with urges to smoke; and avoiding the "ex-smoker's 15" (weight gain).

The first of the five seminars will be on Monday, October 10, at noon in Nanticoke Room B in the University Center. Dr. Robert McBrien will teach the seminar series.

For more information, call the CPPD at 543-6070.

Throughout the year the CPPD will sponsor a variety of other workshops related to issues of personal development. The CPPD also provides students with personal counseling, career planning and job placement services.

Located in the University Center, the CPPD is open from 8:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m., Monday - Friday. Appointments can be made in person or by calling 543-6070. Walk-in hours are 1 - 3 p.m., Monday - Thursday. All counseling is confidential and free of charge to University students.

Financial Planning Workshop

"Introduction to Financial Planning," a required course for CLU and ChFC designation, is a 12-session course held on Tuesdays beginning October 4 from 9-11 a.m.

Coordinated by The Institute at The Franklin P. Perdue School of Business, the course is for anyone seeking professional designation as a Chartered Life Underwriter (CLU) or a Chartered Financial Consultant (ChFC). It explains the nature of the financial service professionals.

In addition to communication skills, computer capabilities and understanding financial statements, the course includes a discussion of the regulatory and professional environments in which financial planning is conducted.

The course is affiliated with The America College, Bryn Mawr, PA. The course is co-sponsored by the Delmarva Association of Life Underwriters, Sussex Life Underwriters Association and the Chesapeake Association of Life Underwriters. Conducted in Nanticoke Room B of the University Center, the fee of $450 includes all materials.

For complete registration information, call the Perdue School at 543-6315 or 543-6323.

Youth Entrepreneur Seminar

On October 22, SSU will be one of 100 sites nationwide offering day-long pre-business seminars for some 10,000 young people.

Youth Entrepreneur Seminar (YES), sponsored by the U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA), will introduce 16 to 30 year olds to careers in entrepreneurship and small business ownership. The seminars will include lectures, workshops, and question and answer periods covering topics such as getting started, developing a business plan, marketing and promotion, accounting and bookkeeping, franchising and owning a successful business.

Salisbury State and the Perdue School are also one of the national coordinating sponsors. The other coordinating sponsors are the Ohio State University National Center for Research in Vocational Education, the National Entrepreneurship Education Consortium, the Association of Collegiate Entrepreneurs, the Service Corps of Retired Executives, the Association of Small Business Development Centers, Students in Free Enterprise and Distributive Educations Clubs of America.

National corporate sponsors are A.L. Williams, Bell Atlantic, Southwestern Bell, Bell South and Southern New England Telephone.

"Youth Entrepreneurship is the lead mission of the SBA," said Dr. Tim Mescon, dean of The Franklin P. Perdue School of Business and a member of the YES steering committee. "Our goal is to attract participants from throughout the Shore."

Besides Salisbury State, YES seminars will be held at sites as geographically diverse as Boston College and the University of Puerto Rico, the University of Alaska-Anchorage and the University of Guam.

Coordinated through the Washington, D.C. headquarters of the SBA, the seminar and lunch are free to all participants.

According to Mescon, the seminars at Salisbury State will be conducted by "local entrepreneurs, SSU faculty, economic development staff of the state of Maryland—people who are close to the heart of entrepreneurship."

The day's agenda begins with registration between 8:00 - 8:40 a.m. and concludes 3:15 - 3:30 p.m.

For more information, contact the Perdue School at 543-6315.

Sea Gulls Splash to Victory

Everyone knows that in sports there is the home-field advantage. But, how about the weather advantage?

Well, seagulls seem to like rain. And Salisbury State Sea Gulls are no exception.

In a constant downpour, the football Gulls ran up a 24-3 halftime lead before holding on for the 24-17 win at Frostburg. The field hockey team played the Sunfest Tournament under similar conditions and came away with a 2-0-1 record in the two-day affair.

The volleyball team also participated in a weekend tournament, going 2-2 indoors at the Mary Washington College Invitational, while at the Christopher Newport Invitational, the men's cross country team took three of the top four places in winning the race by nine points over Christopher Newport.

Other weekend action saw the soccer team falling to Shenandoah in an Eastern States Athletic Conference matchup, while the women's tennis team opened its fall home season, dropping a decision to Washington College.

At Frostburg, Jerry Short accounted for 97 yards on the ground, including one carry for 53 yards and one of his two touchdowns of the day. He also added 37 yards to his all-purpose total on pass catches. Kevin White completed 7 of 10 passes for 91 yards, while Donald Washington added the other Gull score. Bill Schmidt kicked a 41-yard field goal. The defense cashed in on eight Bobcat turnovers, including two fumble recoveries by Robert McKenzie and two interceptions by John Baugher. Dave Sposato chipped in with his third straight double-figure game in tackles.

Jill Stewart tallied twice and Debe Clarke once, while goalie Tracey Short recorded yet another shutout, 3-0, in the Gull opener of the Sunfest Tournament over Swarthmore. The Gulls and Short, later in the afternoon, played to a scoreless stalemate, double-overtime style, against Millersville. Earlier in the day, Millersville dropped Indiana (PA) 7-0. On Sunday, Millersville beat Swarthmore 3-1, the same score the Gulls beat Bentley by. SSU got goals from Cheryl Ish, Sharon Montgomery and Heather Bair, and Short had a shutout for 68 of the first 70 minutes. However, by virtue of goal differential, Millersville won the Sunfest Crown with the Gulls second.

Second is where Doug Mock finished in his first race since breaking his leg in a car accident in June. Rich Williams finished first for the third time in three tries. The Gulls actually had four of the top six places as Chris Lesser finished fourth and Jeff Gray sixth.

In Fredericksburg, VA, the spikers went 2-2 as Phyllis Coleman was named to the all-tournament team. Kevin Darcy netted the only goal for the booters.

Heher Presentation

Rosemary Heher, mathematics instructor in the School of Education and Professional Studies, will make a presentation at the fourth annual Colloquium on Assisting Underprepared Students at Goldey-Beacom College in Wilmington, DE, on October 24.

The title of her topic is, "A Design for a Vertically Integrated Mathematics Curriculum for Underprepared College Students."

speaks to the importance of allowing the child in each of us to emerge."

Before his untimely death in a Virginia planecrash in 1985, 39-year-old Shue was enjoying a skyrocketing career. For seven years he had been actor, then resident playwright at the Milwaukee Repertory Theatre, where all his major works had premiered. In 1984, The Foreigner opened at the Astor Place Theatre, off-Broadway, where after a shaky start, it began packing the houses.

An earlier work of his, The Nerd, had become the biggest grossing play of the 1984-85 season in London's West End, the equivalent of New York's Broadway. That put him a notch up on Neil Simon, America's most popular playright who has never scored a comedy smash in England. Shortly after his death, Shue's third full-length play, Wenceslas Square, about his experiences during a visit to Czechoslovakia, opened at the Kennedy Center. Shue was writing a screenplay of The Foreigner for Disney Productions and also was working on a musical at the time of his death.

Leading the SSU production are Will Shupe as Charlie; Michele Ennis as Catherine, an ex-debutante; Steve Collins as Ellard, her slow-learning brother; Heather Campbell as Betty Meeks, the struggling inn owner; James Hornsby as Rev. David Lee, Catherine's fiance; Christopher R. Cox as a friend of the reverend; and David Cherry as Froggy Leseur, a friend of Charlie.

Costumes are by Paul Pfeiffer with set and lighting by Gerald Patt. D.J. Forsthoffer is production stage manager.

Performances are Friday and Saturday, October 14 and 15, and Thursday through Saturday, October 20-22, at 8 p.m. with a matinee on Sunday, October 16, at 2 p.m.

Admission is $5; senior citizens and students $3. Season subscriptions, which offer a 30 percent savings on tickets, are now on sale. Other plays this academic year include a family production, Mother Hicks by Susan Zeder. Marat/Sade by Peter Weiss, and the student theatre club's production of Crimes of the Heart by Beth Henley. Call the theatre box office at 543-6228 for reservations and information.

This entrance from the Jeremiah Sullivan House (1818) in Madison, IN, documents one of the most common features of the Federal style—a glazed "fanlight" over the door and framing "sidelights." It is one of over 100 photographs, drawings and cut-out models in an exhibition at the University Gallery which shows visitors how to identify some 20 American styles of architecture, from the Colonial period to the 1950s. The exhibition closes October 5.

and ornate architectural details, which would formerly have been carved in wood or stone, could not be produced relatively cheaply in cast iron.

"The fronts of entire buildings, especially stores and row houses, were sometimes of cast iron, assembled at the building site from modular components," Ehrhardt said.

Silhouette models of buildings help to clarify the differences between closely related styles, such as the Jeffersonian and Greek Revival styles, both based on classical sources. Popularized by Thomas Jefferson, the style which bears his name was based principally on ancient Roman architecture, unlike the somewhat later Greek Revival, which was based on the Greek temple form. According the Ehrhardt, the earliest classic revival style building in this country was Jefferson's design for the State Capitol of Virginia in Richmond, which was directly inspired by an ancient Roman temple he had seen in southern France.

The exhibition will be on display in the SSU Gallery, located on the second floor of Blackwell Library, through October 5. Gallery hours are Monday and Wednesday from 10 a.m. - 8 p.m., Tuesday and Thursday from 10 a.m. - 5 p.m., and Saturday and Sunday from 1 - 5 p.m.

Regularly scheduled gallery talks on the exhibition, given by Karen Mitchell, the Gallery's education coordinator, take place each Tuesday at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. Admission is free.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Department of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or whereever you may reside. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep your first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away from alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit area or a place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you need an escort to or from your car, call the Department of Public Safety, 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Department of Public Safety, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

Art Exhibition and Sale

A special exhibition and sale of original graphic art will be presented on Friday, October 7, from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Saturday, October 8, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the SSU Gallery (next to the Book Rack in the University Center).

Marson Galleries Ltd. of Baltimore specializes in exhibiting for sale a distinguished collection of original etchings, woodcuts, lithographs, serigraphs and watercolors by old and modern masters. The collection consists of some 500 pieces of original graphic art by leading American, European and Oriental artists.

Represented in the collection are antique works by Hiroshige, Kuniyoshi, Daumier, Goya, Hogarth and others. Also included is a selection of Indian miniature paintings and manuscripts.

There is a large group of works by such renown contemporary artists as Altman, Amano, Azechi, Baskin, Calder, Chagall, Ebgi, Fink, Gantner, Maki, Miro, Rayburn, Tajima and Saito. Additionally, there are numerous contemporary Chinese paintings, watercolors, embroideries, batiks, rubbings and folk art. A comprehensive collection of 20th century impressions of the Ukiyo-E prints are also included.

A representative will be present to discuss the collection and to answer questions about the work, the artists and the various graphic techniques employed. The prints are shown in an informal atmosphere and the public is invited to browse. Marson Galleries Ltd. is the largest firm in the nation specializing in arranging exhibitions and sales of original graphic art at colleges, universities, museums, hospitals and art centers throughout the U.S.

Johnson and Bosserman Voted Distinguished Faculty Award

Two professors who bring a global view to their teaching and scholarship are recipients of the 1988 Salisbury State University Distinguished Faculty Award.

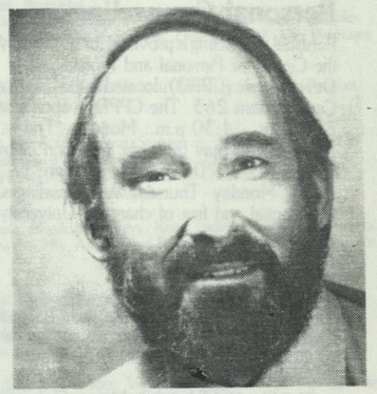
The two also represent a balancing of the professions and the humanities on the SSU campus. They are Dr. Karin Johnson, chair of the graduate nursing program, and Dr. Phillip Bosserman, professor of sociology.

This, the University's most prestigious faculty award, honors outstanding contributions in teaching, scholarship and community service. Winners, who must show excellence in all three, are selected by the University's Faculty Welfare committee, following nominations from SSU's 240-member teaching community.

In 1984 Karin Johnson became chair of the new graduate program in nursing. Since then, enrollments have more than tripled; the program has been accredited by the National League for Nursing on the league's first visit—a coup; and has been saluted by the Maryland Association for Higher Education with its Distinguished Program Award, the only SSU graduate program to be so honored to date.

An on-going concern for family health is evident in her work. She has authored or co-authored four major proposals including the Family Nursing Grant, which resulted in more than $200,000 in support for her department. Hers is one of the few graduate programs nationwide geared to the health needs of rural families.

Dr. Karin Johnson



Dr. Phillip Bosserman

In neighboring Somerset County, she has worked with the Health Department and school system on the sensitive problem of adolescent pregnancy. At the Johns Hopkins University School of Hygiene and Public Health, she also is collaborating in a three year study of adolescent health.

This past June she journeyed to Nairobi, Kenya, in east Africa as a maternal and child health consultant for the prestigious African Medical and Research Foundation (AMREF), an organization with international backing and a 30-year tradition of effectively helping the native populations. In January she hopes to return to write an historical evaluation of maternal and child health services by AMREF for the Carnegie Foundation for World Peace.

In both the SSU graduate and undergraduate programs, many of her students are practicing nurses with families of their own. "Having completed my doctorate only recently myself, I understand the challenges of trying to work, raise a family and go to school," said Johnson. "But at the same time I try to push students to

Alumni Helping Students First Career Day Here

"The Sky is the Limit" will be the theme of the University's first annual Career Day, sponsored by the Alumni Association, to be held Thursday, November 10, in the new University Center.

Based on a proposal by Judy Pielemeier, director of Alumni Relations, Career Day was developed from advice canvassed from other universities with career days already in place.

"We were looking for a way alumni could help current students," said Judy Pielemeier, "and decided their most valuable resource was the experience they had gained since embarking on their own careers. When I graduated in the mid '60s very little information was available about the options open to graduates, or the mechanics of pursuing a chosen career. We tended to prepare for existing careers, relying on the advice of friends and relatives already in them.

"Since then," said Pielemeier, "the job market has broadened to such an extent that there now exist careers which weren't even heard of then. We want our graduates to be fully prepared for every option open to them and are working with the Placement Services Department at the University to make sure that happens.

Paul Rendine, senior vice president of Wheat, First Securities, Inc., is chairman of the Career Day Committee which consists of SSU graduates living in the area. Together they have contacted alumni working in the areas of business administration eduction, liberal arts, health, natural science, social science—and a group whose subsequent careers differ from their graduating major (undeclaired majors).

"Graduates of Salisbury State University enter the career market with an education that is top of the line, nationwide," said Rendine, "and we want to give them the opportunity to meet with alumni who have been very successful very quickly. The response has been tremendous. Not one of those we contacted has turned us down, and people have volunteered to come from as far away as Oklahoma, Florida and Vermont."

Career Day will commence with lunch, served from 11:30 a.m. - 1 p.m. in Nanticoke Hall at the University Center. Lunch will be followed by the keynote address given by Dr. Timothy Drehmer, a 1980 graduate of Salisbury State and an Air Force physician, recently with the Aerospace Development Department.

There will follow two one-hour panel sessions during which five to seven professionals from each of the seven career areas will give overviews of their field, followed by question and answer sessions involving students, giving

Valedictorians Salute SSU

This fall SSU enrolled seven high school valedictorians. These high achievers, the target of recruitment efforts by many colleges and universities, selected Salisbury over other schools because of the University's programs, attractive campus and personal attention.

Graduating first in a class of 320 from the C. Milton Wright High School, Bel Air, in Harford County, Rebecca Hurley considered several Maryland private schools before choosing Salisbury State. Both her brother and sister had disliked the impersonal atmosphere at larger, prestigious universities and Hurley, who plans to be a pharmacist, was looking for a university where she wouldn't get lost in the crowd. A Presidential Scholar and Maryland Distinguished Scholar, Hurley hasn't been disappointed. She finds her classes at the Richard A Henson School of Science and Technology stimulating and particularly enjoys the thought-provoking Honors program.

"I like the way my professors take the time to get to know each student and, coming from further away, feel both the University and city of Salisbury have a lot to offer the student away from home " she said.

Pre-Nursing Students

The application deadline for enrollment in the Nursing major for spring semester is Monday, Oct. 3.

This applies to those pre-Nursing students anticipating registering for Nursing 300, Professional Nursing Concepts, for spring, as well as other students interested in the major. The application form may be obtained from the Department of Nursing.

Applications received after October 3 will be considered on a space available basis. The application deadline for the fall semester is March 1.

Personal Counseling

Personal counseling is provided for students by the Center for Personal and Professional Development (CPPD), located in the University Center, room 263. The CPPD is open from 8:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m., Monday - Friday. Appointments may be made in person or by calling 543-6070. Walk-in hours are 1 - 3 p.m., Monday - Thursday. All counseling is confidential and free of charge to University students.

PE Workshop

The Physical Education Department sponsors an Eastern Shore Tri-county In-service program on Friday, October 7, from 8:30 a.m. - 3 p.m. at Maggs.

The Physical Education Majors Club will perform a variety of tests for participants including body fat percentage, cardiovascular endurance, strength and flexibility.

For more information, call the Physical Education Department at 543-6351 or 543-6347.

Man and Nature

There will be a meeting of the Man & Nature group at 3:30 p.m. on Thursday, October 6, in the Choptank Room of the University Center.

We invite interested faculty, staff and students to attend.

From the start of civilization there has been a shift in the perception of how human beings relate to nature. The move has been from a cyclical, in-step-with-nature, systems view to a linear, anthropocentric, man-in-control view.

The Man & Nature group has a goal of re-emphasizing this traditional perception. An immediate goal is to organize a spring 1989 program of speakers and panels. Long-range goals call for infusing this perception into the curriculum.

For more information, call Ben Fusaro, 543-6470 (6471 for a message).

University Forum Meeting

The Forum's Executive Committee has established the calendar of Forum meetings for the coming academic year. As in the past, all meetings will be on Tuesdays at 3:30 p.m. in DSH 149. The dates are as follows: Nov. 1 and Dec. 6. Spring Semester: Feb. 14, Mar. 7, Apr. 4 and May 2.

The agenda for each of these meetings will be compiled by the Executive Committee eight days beforehand. If you wish to have an item placed on an agenda, you can do so by submitting the item in writing by the morning of the following Mondays: Oct. 24, Nov. 28, Feb. 6, Feb. 27, Mar. 27, Apr. 24.

Any member of the Executive Committee will be happy to receive your agenda items. They are Tom Jones, Forum chair (Biology), Dave Parker (Computer Science), John Tyvoll (Chemistry and Physics), Nayland Page (History), and Jim Thrash (Library).

P.E. Workshop

Dr. William E. Lide, Dr. Terry Rupert and DeAnn Koehler of the Physical Education Department will conduct an inservice workshop on "Trends and Methods in the field of Physical Education and Health" to the Indian River School District on Monday, October 10, at 9 a.m. in Millsboro, DE, at Sussex Central Junior High School.

Financial Planning Workshop

"Introduction to Financial Planning," a required course for CLU and ChFC designation, is a 12-session course held on Tuesdays beginning October 4 from 9-11 a.m.

For complete registration information, call the Perdue School at 543-6315 or 543-6323.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Department of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or whereever you may reside. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep your first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away from alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit area or a place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you need an escort to or from your car, call the Department of Public Safety, 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Department of Public Safety, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

Art Exhibition and Sale

A special exhibition and sale of original graphic art will be presented on Friday, October 7, from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Saturday, October 8, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the SSU Gallery (next to the Book Rack in the University Center).

Marson Galleries Ltd. of Baltimore specializes in exhibiting for sale a distinguished collection of original etchings, woodcuts, lithographs, serigraphs and watercolors by old and modern masters. The collection consists of some 500 pieces of original graphic art by leading American, European and Oriental artists.

A representative will be present to discuss the collection and to answer questions about the work, the artists and the various graphic techniques employed. The prints are shown in an informal atmosphere and the public is invited to browse. Marson Galleries Ltd. is the largest firm in the nation specializing in arranging exhibitions and sales of original graphic art at colleges, universities, museums, hospitals and art centers throughout the U.S.

Stop Smoking

Dr. Robert McBrien, director of the Center for Personal and Professional Development (CPPD), will conduct a smoking cessation clinic this fall. The clinic will consist of a series ofseminars on developing a personal stop smoking program. The clinic will focus on: taking charge of your smoking habit; handling stress through relaxation techniques; coping with the first 24 hours as a nonsmoker; learning to cope with urges to smoke; and avoiding the "ex-smoker's 15" (weight gain).

The first of the five seminars will be held on Monday, October 10, at noon in Nanticoke Room B of the University Center. For more information, call CPPD at 543-6070.

Tennis Tournament Adds Local Events

The 10th Annual Hecht Co. Open Tennis Tournament will be held this weekend, October 7-9, at the SSU Tennis Center. In addition to the U.S.T.A. sanctioned events of men and women's singles and double play, two new events are now offered—mixed doubles and doubles for local community players. These two events should prove popular to Salisbury State faculty, staff and students. The cost is $6. See Dean Burroughs, tournament director, for more details, or call 543-6344.

Youth Entrepreneur Seminar

On October 22, SSU will be one of 100 sites nationwide offering day-long pre-business seminars for some 10,000 young people.

Youth Entrepreneur Seminar (YES), sponsored by the U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA), will introduce 16 to 30 year olds to careers in entrepreneurship and small business ownership. The seminars will include lectures, workshops, and question and answer periods covering topics such as getting started, developing a business plan, marketing and promotion, accounting and bookkeeping, franchising and owning a successful business.

Salisbury State and the Perdue School are also one of the national coordinating sponsors. The other coordinating sponsors are the Ohio State University National Center for Research in Vocational Education, the National Entrepreneurship Education Consortium, the Association of Collegiate Entrepreneurs, the Service Corps of Retired Executives, the Association of Small Business Development Centers, Students in Free Enterprise and Distributive Educations Clubs of America.

National corporate sponsors are A.L. Williams, Bell Atlantic, Southwestern Bell, Bell South and Southern New England Telephone.

"Youth Entrepreneurship is the lead mission of the SBA," said Dr. Tim Mescon, dean of The Franklin P. Perdue School of Business and a member of the YES steering committee. "Our goal is to attract participants from throughout the Shore."

Besides Salisbury State, YES seminars will be held at sites as geographically diverse as Boston College and the University of Puerto Rico, the University of Alaska-Anchorage and the University of Guam.

Coordinated through the Washington, D.C. headquarters of the SBA, the seminar and lunch are free to all participants.

According to Mescon, the seminars at Salisbury State will be conducted by "local entrepreneurs, SSU faculty, economic development staff of the state of Maryland—people who are close to the heart of entrepreneurship."

The day's agenda begins with registration between 8:00 - 8:40 a.m. and concludes 3:15 - 3:30 p.m.

For more information, contact the Perdue School at 543-6315.

National Fire Prevention Week

National Fire Prevention Week is October 9-15. In observance of this anniversary of the Great Chicago Fire, the Department of Public Safety would like everyone to think about fire safety.

Fire exit drills will be conducted in all campus buildings. The purpose of these drills will be to familiarize everyone with what to do in the event of an actual fire. An emphasis will be placed on the orderly evacuation under proper control rather than on speed. You will become accustomed to the sound of the fire alarm, the location of the nearest exit and the route to that exit. Everyone is asked to participate in the drill and leave the building when the alarm sounds. You will not know if the alarm is a drill or an actual fire.

When the alarm sounds, you should:

1. Close all windows in the room that you are in.
2. Turn off all electrical equipment.
3. Close the room door as you leave.
4. Walk to the nearest exit. DO NOT RUN AND DO NOT USE THE ELEVATORS.
5. If the nearest exit is blocked due to fire or obstruction, proceed to an alternate exit.
6. Exit the building and move a safe distance from the building.
7. Do not re-enter the building until an officer signals that it is safe.

National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week Schedule

Oct. 17—Opening Kickoff, Mocktail Happy Hour, 3:30-5:30 p.m., University Center

Oct. 18—Waiter/Waitress Race 2 p.m., Red Square

Oct. 19—Alcohol Awareness Demonstration 7 p.m., Tawes Gym

Oct. 20—Go Bananas Night, (Fun without Alcohol), 7 p.m., Tawes Gym

Throughout the week the Health Center will be presenting videos on a daily basis. Information tables will be set up in the University Center by the Center for Personal and Professional Development and the Lower Shore Prevention Resource Center

Graduate Assistant Athletic Trainers

Salisbury State University is seeking two graduate assistant athletic trainers. Desirable applicants should possess or be eligible for N.A.T.A. Certification, CPR Instructor Certification and Red Cross Certification. Salary or stipends will be commensurate with qualifications.

The Department of Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics services the University through instruction, recreation and athletics programs encompassing 18 varisty sports. Salisbury State University is a member of the NCAA-Division III, has an excellent internship program and is committed to academic integrity and personal growth among student-athletes. The campus recreation program services over 1500 students annually.

To apply, please send a letter of recommendation to: Athletic Training Search, Department of Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics, Salisbury State University, Salisbury, MD 21801.

The application deadline is December 15. In person interviews are optional, but desirable. Salisbury State University is an affirmative action, equal opportunity employer. Qualified women, minorities and the disabled are encouraged to apply.

Sports Roundup by Barry Packer

As the interception by SSU's Tony Phillips blossomed from an ordinary pick-off into one of fruition, it became reminiscent of the play run by California, at the end of the Stanford game a few years ago, with the six laterals and all.

Phillips picked off the ball at the University of the District of Columbia's 25 and ran for five yards. He then lateraled the ball to Mike Voorhees who picked up another 10 before lateraling it to John Baugher who took it in to the end zone for his second touchdown of the day in the Sea Gulls 52-20 demolition of the Firebirds on Saturday. Baugher also returned an interception, by himself, for 75 yards and six points.

Also accounting for the Gull scores were Jerry Short and Duncan McLean on passes from Kevin White and Short, Donald Washington and Paul Williams on the ground, while Bill Schmidt added a 43-yard field goal.

The Gulls are now 3-1 and take on Glassboro State this Saturday in the first of four straight home games over a five week period.

On the other hand, the field hockey team has just finished up having five of their last six games at home, and are almost perfect, at 7-0-1 overall, including a 5-0 destruction of Wesley on Friday and a 3-0 whitewash of Johns Hopkins on Saturday. In the Wesley game, Debbie Walker came off the bench to score twice, while Michele Ghezzi, Sharon Montgomery and Cheryl Ish scored in Saturday's game and Tracey Short recorded her fifth and sixth shutouts of the season. This weekend the Gulls travel to Frostburg and Ithaca for a pair of important games.

Also on the road this weekend is the volleyball team, which upped its record to 6-2 with a sweep of Shenandoah and Marywood in a pair of Eastern States Athletic Conferences matches behind clutch serving of Brenda Bowlin and Shelly Conaway. This weekend the Gulls are at the Washington College Tournament. Joining the field hockey and volley ball teams in weekend road trips is the soccer team, also in an ESAC match at Allentown. The Gulls and Eastern played to a 2-2 deadlock in an ESAC match on Saturday, with Kevin Jackson and Mark Henkle scoring for the Gulls.

Rich Wiliams and Doug Mock again scored big for the Sea Gull cross country team, on Saturday at UMBC. Williams took first and Mock third, while the Gulls finished second overall. For Williams, it was his fourth successive win. This weekend, the Gulls host their lone home meet of the season, Saturday at 11 a.m.

And, the women's tennis team will be playing in the Hecht's Company Invitational, this weekend, at home, following an 8-1 loss at Catholic. The doubles team of Karolyn Bonewitz and Lisa Liberatore came away with the Gull victory.

Clay Address

Psi Chi and the Psychology Club will present Terry Clay, Career Development Specialist, to speak on job opportunities in psychology. The talk will center on B.A., M.A. and Ph.D. degree potentials. All are invited to attend the talk on Monday, October 17, at 3:30 p.m. in the Naticoke B room at the University Center.

Dillon in Dallas

Tom Dillon, a member of the Computer Science Department, presents his paper titled, "Evaluating the Individual From Within the Systems Development Project Team," at the seventh annual Information Systems Education Conference (ISECON) in Dallas, TX.

The ISECON Conference is sponsored by the Data Processing Management Association Education Foundation (DPMA-EF) and takes place on October 29-30. Some 400 Computer Science and Information Systems educators will attend the conference from the U.S. and Canada.

Expenses for the trip were awarded by the SSU Foundation.

Winder Publishes

Dr. Robert C. Winder, associate professor of Economics with The Franklin P. Perdue School of Business, has published articles on Jerry L. Jordan and Marina von N. Whitman in Biographical Directory of the Council of Economic Advisors, recently released by Greenwood Press.

These are interpretive essays on the contributions of Jordan and Whitman while members of the Council of Economic Advisors and their impacts on the economics disciplines. Winder's article on Lawrence Klein will be released later this year as part of The Nobel Prize Laureates in Economics, Garland Publishing.

Also, Winder's article, "The Reality of the New CEO in a Changing External Environment," will appear in the November-December issue of Business Horizons. The article was previously presented at the 1988 annual meeting of the Eastern Economic Association in Boston.

Frank Presenter

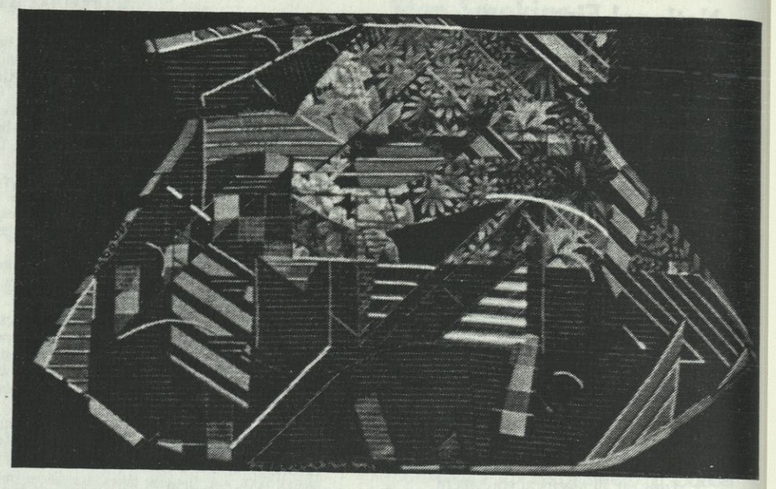
Dr. R.G. "Ron" Frank of the School of Education and Professional Studies will be a presenter at the "Super In-Service Day" for public school teachers on the Eastern Shore.

Frank will speak Friday, October 7, at 9 a.m. on the topic "Teaching for the Future in the Social Studies Classroom." In addition to discussing some major trends that will affect graduates in the year 2000 (today's first graders), Frank will show specific classroom activities that teachers can use today.

Frank's background includes teaching at the junior and senior high school level and serving as a high school principal and as a university professor.

Barbershoppers

Wanted: Men interested in singing barbershop harmony. The Peninsulaires Chorus of Salisbury is seeking tenors, baritones, leads and bass singers to join them Tuesday evenings at 8 o'clock in the Flanders Room of the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center. Have an enjoyable evening while learning four-part harmony barbershop style! For further information, contact Art Ward at 749-8123 or Joe Andrews at 742-6680.



"Mellusina," a textile piece by Mary Snyder Behrens of Cincinnati, OH, is one of over 40 works in the exhibition, "Pieceworks," which opens Saturday at the University Gallery with a reception from 7 to 9 p.m. The exhibition on display through November 10, includes quilts, textiles, ceramics, baskets, glass, and handmade paper, all of which were influenced in design or technique by traditional quilts. The Gallery is located on the second floor of Blackwell Library and is open Monday though Thursday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday and Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m., and Monday and Wednesday evenings from 5 to 8 p.m.

ABQ Season Announced

For the 1988-89 season the Annapolis Brass Quintet performance season will combine the very best in chamber music with scrumptious food and a gentle way to ease from the freedom of the weekend into the routine of the work weekday.

Sponsored again by the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council, the Annapolis Brass Quintet's 1988-89 season's major change is that two of the four concerts will be held at the Salisbury Sheraton at 6:30 p.m. on Sundays. "After reviewing the past seasons, a concert planning committee felt that early Sunday evening concerts might prove enticing for our audiences," said Davina Grace Hill, executive director of the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council. The 6:30 p.m. concert time gives concert attenders the chance to have a full Sunday afternoon for family activities, enjoy an early evening concert, and, not have a late Sunday night out before thinking about Monday and work again.

To make the arrangement even more "appetizing," the Salisbury Sheraton has a special incentive for Annapolis Brass ticket holders: A Sunday buffet will be served both before and after the concerts and those showing an ABQ ticket to the waitresses at Harper's Restaurant in the hotel will receive 20 percent off the price of their dinner.

As ever, the Annapolis Brass will be offering a diverse season of musical enjoyment. "Theatrical Brass," a concert collaboration between the Annapolis Brass and actor John McDonough, will feature narrated musical works such as Aesop Suite and Oil of the Dog, by Walter Ross and based on a short story by Ambrose Bierce. This season opening concert will be held on Monday, October 10, at 8 p.m. at Trinity United Methodist Church.

Sunday, December 4, sees the concert series move to the Sheraton for its first concert there, the traditional Christmas concert, "Holidays Brassed."

On Monday, February 20, at 8 p.m. at Trinity United Methodist Church, "Brass Winds" will join the Annapolis Brass and the New York Woodwind Ensemble for a concert that will feature a special new composition for brass and wind quintets.

And, as a rousing finale to the season, returning to the Sheraton on Sunday, April 16, the Annapolis Brass will be joined by Annapolis's other great music ensemble, Charlie Byrd and his Trio.

Season and single tickets to all Annapolis Brass Quintet concerts are now available through the Arts Council office and all its bank ticket outlets. Adult season tickets are $35.00 each (a savings of 30 percent over the price of single tickets). Season tickets for full time students under 25 are specially priced at $20. Single tickets for each concert are $12 each ($10 for SWAC members). Students may also avail themselves of special student rush tickets for $6 each. These student rush tickets are available only on concert days at the door if tickets still remain.

For more information on tickets call 543-ARTS.

Nureyev and the Paris Ballet

The Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council announces that its first bus trip of the 1988-89 fall season will be to the Morris Mechanic Theatre in Baltimore to see a special performance by the legendary Rudolf Nureyev and members of the Paris Ballet.

The trip is planned for Saturday, October 29. The bus will leave Salisbury approximately at 3:30 p.m. for an 8 p.m. performance and will return around midnight.

The cost of the bus trip and ticket to see Rudolf Nureyev dance is $50 ($48 SWAC members). There will be a lunch stop that is not included in the cost of the ticket. All reservations and money can be sent to: Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council (SWAC), P.O. Box 884, Salisbury, MD 21801 and must be received no later than October 6. For more information contact the Arts Council at 543-ARTS.

undergraduates an in-depth look at career directions.

An hour-long reception will allow students and panel members to mix freely and attend the open house in the Center for Personal and Professional Development. This will be followed by a reception for alumni and faculty in the Wicomico Room. The day will be rounded off by dinner from 7:30 - 9 p.m.

"The Alumni Association has always been very supportive of our efforts," said Linda Benson, Placement Services coordinator and Career Day Committee member, "and we look forward to 'The Sky is the Limit' and future Career Days providing an arena where students can make informed choices from informed graduates of Salisbury State University."

The Career Day Committee consists of the following alumni and University officials: Rendine, chairman, class of '74; Ed Baker, class of '71; David Ennis, class of '75; Ann Suthowski, class of '62; Sally Johnson, class of '80; George Benedict, Jr., class of '73; Terry Clay, Career Development specialist; Linda Benson, Placement Services coordinator; Debra Panicucci, class of '74; Pielemeier; Peggy Bagley, class of '79; and Brian Veditz, class of '73.

For further information call Judy Pielemeier at 543-6042.

Philosophy Opening

The Philosophy Department is now accepting applications for a full-time, tenure-track faculty position at the Assistant Professor level, beginning in the fall of 1989.

The position involves teaching four undergraduate courses each semester. A passion for teaching, profound commitment to liberal education, and an appreciation for the plurality of philosophical methods are the primary prerequisites. We are seeking a generalist with a strong background in the history of philosophy. Areas of competence should include some of the following: theory of knowledge, metaphysics, cosmology, philosophy of science, feminist theory, the relationbship between Anglo-American and recent continental thought, history of modern philosphy.

Non-teaching duties include working with the student Philosophical Society and normal committee work.

We prefer applicants who have the doctorate in hand; and applicant who has not completed the dissertation would enter at the Instructor level. Salary is competitive. Applicants should send dossier and syllabi for an Introduction course and for the upper level course they would most enjoy teaching to Dr. Jerry Miller, Department of Philosophy, Salisbury State University, Salisbury, MD 21801. Candidates will be interviewed at Eastern meeting of the American Philosophical Association and no applications will be accepted after that time.

Salisbury State University is an affirmative action/equal opportunity employer. Qualified women, minorities and disabled persons are encouraged to apply.

University Center Is Dedicated

The new University Center was dedicated Monday with a delegation of dignitaries, led by Maryland Lieutenant Governor Melvin A. Steinberg in attendance. The most inviting building on campus, the center is also the newest. A path at the south end of campus winds under a canopy of pines to the new facility. True to its name, this is a cornucopia of activities which flow together nicely in this comfortable setting.

Joe Gilbert, vice president of Administration, says that the Center is living up to the goals set for it when the planning began several years ago. A magnet for campus activity, the building is reminiscent of Holloway Hall in looks, yet also represents some of the best in contemporary architecture. The grand, sweeping facade, its arched windows and faux chimney stacks maintaining the image of the university gives way to an open, sunny interior.

The movement inside is at once exciting and inviting. Although this is a two-story building, traffic inside flows on several different levels that serve a variety of purposes all in harmony.

On the first floor, students walk up a ramp to their post office boxes to check for a message from home; a staff member waits for the elevator to her second-floor office and two friends emerge headed for the bookstore. At the center of all this bustle is a small forest of ficus trees and other attractive flora in a brick planter, thriving in sun from the skylight above.

A corridor opens up to the information desk, where on a given evening, the attendant quizzes her friend, translating Spanish verbs. At the donut-shaped information desk, with its wooden counter comfortably set at elbow height, the newcomer can get directions to his classroom or just pick up a candy bar.

Rounding the corner from the desk is a little like coming home. The Gulls Nest snack bar on the left serves up soft drinks and pizza in a cozy setting, with intimate booths, small tables, even a courtyard "bistro." Across from the Gulls Nest is the family living room, only larger. An open room, with high ceilings, is furnished with couches, end tables and lamps which are arranged to accommodate conversation. Someone has left a morning paper next to one couch, while on another, closer to the fireplace, a student relaxes with a book.

The University Center is full of nooks and crannies like the one this reader has discovered. At the top of a staircase a couch is tucked into a spot by a large, round window. In the Gulls Nest, a pair of steps and brass rail set off a cluster of tables.

Above the lounge and living room you'll find one of the best examples of the harmony that the University Center achieves. Across a hallway from one another are a small, glass-enclosed living room, where a study group gathers, and the game room. And the game room crowd, laughing, chatting, racking up the balls for another game of pool, carries on undisturbed by the study group's quiet concentration.

Offices in the University Center vary. Some are more finished: they are tastefully furnished and benefit from borrowed light that interior windows have been designed to admit. Others are more austere and will likely develop their own character over time. Some additional meeting rooms are unremarkable but certainly serve their purpose. A collection of student organizations has offices or partitioned desks on the second floor above the post office and bookstore. On the first floor there is a large room that is still unfinished but seems ideal for dances or dinners.

Gilbert says the $11 million Center was designed to provide space for lots of small-group discussions and some larger meetings. The Center has been open only five months, but already the idea has caught on. This is an easy place to bump into friends, teachers and classmates. It is quickly becoming the place to go for activity. Gilbert hopes that ultimately the campus will have its two most popular buildings, Holloway Hall and the new Center, linked by the campus mall so that their roles as magnets of the campus community will be more readily accommodated.

The University Center is busy serving not only the SSU community but the Salisbury community as a whole. The meeting rooms are quickly being booked and enjoyed as the business community becomes aware of the new facility in town. Beyond serving this need, however, the University has risen to the occasion by offering Salisbury an architectural jewel. The building has a very modern feel, without sacrificing human scale and the more conservative image of the University.

Gilbert says that the response from on and off campus has been positive. The most obvious evidence of this is that students have quickly adopted the building and are keeping the place busy. The 80,000 square foot University Center is taking over for the 18,000 square foot college center and the difference between the two are more than the size indicated. Time was taken to ensure that the new center makes the students feel at home and is suited to the institution's new university status.

a level of performance beyond that which they think they are capable of...to encourage students to take a broader view of the world and the role nursing has in it."

Her students are grateful for the push. They give her excellent classroom evaluations and while teaching in the undergraduate program, she twice received the Outstanding Faculty Award presented by graduating seniors.

Johnson also challenges herself. Said dean of the School of Nursing and Health Sciences, Dr. Elizabeth Barfield, "Karin is the most active and productive member of the school...in scholarship." Besides her grant proposals, she has written and presented papers at numerous professional meetings (she is active in five professional societies). She recently co-authored a chapter in the highly-respected, Annual Review of Nursing Research.

Her public service includes membership on the Board of Trustees of the Peninsula General Hospital Medical Center, and the Salisbury State Board of Visitors.

Said Barfield about her colleague, "...her activities have made a clear impact on the University, on nursing education and health care in this community. It is rare for a faculty member to be outstanding in teaching, scholarship and public service. Karin is that rare individual."

This past weekend, Phillip Bosserman toured a product of Glasnost: the joint Canadian-Soviet-U.S. exhibition, "Crossroads of Continents." It is about the peoples of the Bering Sea, who include the Eskimos. This exhibit is now on display at the Smithsonian Institution and eventually travels to both Ottawa and the U.S.S.R. Each country has contributed artifacts never seen outside its borders. Said Bosserman, "It's not only a history-making exhibition, the displays are magnificent (it took 10 years to put together)."

Bosserman's guide was the director of the Russian portion Serghi Arutyunov, who heads the Department of Ethnographic Studies of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, and is director of the Ethnographic Museum in Leningrad.

Bosserman and Arutyunov met this summer in Budapest, Hungary, at a conference there. After the day's sessions, they would spend long hours talking about the Armenian uprisings in the U.S.S.R. Like Afghanistan and Viet Nam, the parallels between the Armenian riots and the U.S. civil rights struggles are striking. They have a particular meaning for Arutyunov who is of Armenian descent. He and his colleagues were eager to talk to Bosserman and he has been asked to speak in Moscow next year, and in Armenia in 1990.

The SSU sociology professor's scholarship is recognized internationally. Over the past year he has had a soon-to-be published paper on modernity and tradition in 20th century America presented at the University of Paris, where he studied. A few weeks ago he delivered papers to the Hungarian Academy of Sciences and the Warsaw Polish Academy on American sociology. He has just completed one book about working, unemployment and free time. He is co-authoring another with Joffre Dumazedier contrasting leisure and work patterns in France and the U.S. He also serves on the editorial board for the international periodical, Leisure and Society, published in Montreal.

In short, he lives what he teaches his students: that we now are all global citizens. "In each of my courses I emphasize how we relate to the world," said Bosserman. A former director in the Peace Corps, he has organized student trips to African and Eastern culture museums at the Smithsonian, to the World Bank, and to the United Nations. Visiting friends and colleagues from abroad are routinely introduced to his classes. His goal: to give young minds a more complete perspective on their world, and themselves.

His students "do sociology" with research projects, case studies and journals. "I am a learner like each student in class," he said. "We are all learning from the materials and from each other...(Thus) my philosophy of teaching is to get away from the lecture method as much as possible. Through dialogue, truth becomes the authority, not one man or woman."

A global perspective does not mean an interest in what's happening half way around the world, and indifference to your next door neighbor. "A bumper sticker seems to say it best," said Bosserman. "Think globally, act locally." He has: as a founding father and officer of SSU's chapter of the American Association of University Professors, adviser to the student Sociological Society, and as an officer in the United Methodist Church, the Peace Alliance of the Lower Shore, and the League of Women Voters.

"He excels as a teacher, adviser, scholar and colleague," said Dr. Ed Steffes, chair of the Sociology Department. "Phil is a model of what a teacher at Salisbury State should be."

Foreigner Cast: Learning the Language of Comedy

"Comedy relates to the incongruous in life. The audience has to believe in the reality of the characters on stage, and their relationships to one another. If these relationships seem contrived, the audience will feel it is being manipulated and the situation will not be funny," said Dr. Andrew Hepburn, director of the comedy, The Foreigner, which opens Friday, October 14.

"I'm particularly pleased with the truthfulness in the portrayal of the character relationships in the play," he said. "I'm pleased with the progress we've made. It's a young cast and a strong cast."

The play has a southern, rural setting and several of the characters are types one might see in the Salisbury Mall on a Saturday evening.

"I wanted to choose a play that's closer to home," said Hepburn. "I wanted something more here and now and immediate. . . ."

Set in a rural Georgia inn, a shy Englishman named Charlie is there on holiday. Through a series of funny twists, he finds himself surrounded by people who think he doesn't speak or understand English. He soon becomes little more than a piece of furniture to the other inn residents and visitors; they discuss their most personal problems in front of him. He also overhears a nasty plot by a corrupt preacher. The unmasking of the villians and the rescuing of their victims makes for some suspense and much fun.

The most experienced member of the cast is David Cherry, a junior majoring in Communication Arts. He plays the role of Froggy Leseur, a robust English soldier on assignment in the states. Cherry is a member of the Salisbury State Concert Choir and Sophanes (the University theatre club). At James M. Bennett Senior High School, where he was recipient of the Best Actor Award, his credits included Oklahoma, Arsenic and Old Lace and Mame. At SSU he won an award for Best Children's Theatre performer, and appeared in Cabaret, Of Mice and Men, The Pirates of Penzance and The Fantasticks. At the Parker Playhouse in Ocean City he has acted in Fiddler on the Roof and South Pacific.

Christopher R. Cox is also a junior majoring in Communication Arts. He plays the ominous Owen Musser. A member of Sophanes, he too is a graduate of James M. Bennett Senior High. At Bennett he acted in a variety of plays and musicals. He has performed in SSU productions of You Know I Can't Hear You When The Water's Running, Of Mice and Men and Tartuffe.

Michele A. Ennis is a freshman majoring in Theatre and Communication Arts. She plays the role of Catherine, the unhappy ex-debutante. A 1988 graduate of Bennett, she performed in such productions as Everybody's Crazy and A Ghost of a Story.

A junior majoring in Communication Arts, James Roy Hornsby is playing the role of Reverend David Lee, Catherine's fiance. He has acted in the Salisbury State production of Of Mice and Men, and is active with the SSU Children's Theatre. He is a 1986 Parkside High School graduate.

Heather Campbell is appearing in the play as Betty Meeks the struggling inn owner. She is a freshman majoring in Communication Arts at SSU. A 1988 graduate of Glenelg Senior High School where she performed in The Mouse That Roared, she spent her junior high school year in New Zealand as an American Field Service student.

Steve Collins, who played the role of Mortimer in last year's SSU production of The Fantastiks, will be appearing in The Foreigner as Ellard Simms, Catherine's younger brother. He is a junior majoring in Communication Arts, and a 1986 graduate of Severna Park Senior High School.

Last, but not least is William Shupe, II, who plays the leading role of Charlie. A 1987 graduate of Queen Anne's County High School, he is a sophomore majoring in Communication Arts. He played the roles of a pirate and a constable in last year's The Pirates of Penzance.

Performances are Friday and Saturday, October 14 and 15, and Thursday through Saturday, October 20-22, at 8 p.m., with a matinee on Sunday, October 16, at 2 p.m., in Holloway Hall Auditorium on stage.

Admission is free to SSU students, faculty and staff. Call the theatre box office at 543-6228 for reservations and information. The box office, located in Caruthers Hall, is now open Saturdays, from 2 - 5 p.m. for ticket pickup and information.

Society, SADD, the Math League and other high school activities demonstrate her eagerness to participate in her school as a whole, and she anticipates involvement in intramural sports and the flag football team.

For Kathleen Elliott from Snow Hill High School, Salisbury State University seemed a natural choice. Her closest friends were already there and enjoying it. But Elliott also considered attending two private women's colleges in Maryland. Salisbury State, with its smaller classes and attractive, friendly campus won out and Elliott is now majoring in accounting at The Franklin P. Perdue School of Business.

Kelly-Snow Jones, of Lake Forest High School, Felton, DE said, "It has the advantages of a university with the friendliness and faculty availability associated with small colleges." Kelly-Snow is majoring in Biology at the Henson School.

"I was impressed by the one-on-one interaction with the dean of Admissions when he visited my school," said Kelly O'Mara, who graduated first in her class of 261 at Aberdeen High School, Harford County. That individual attention was followed up by University staff when she narrowed her choice to Salisbury State. She is now following a degree course in economics at the Perdue School.

As a future computer programmer, Allison Chance has found Salisbury State the perfect place to gain the education she needs. "The friendly, helpful atmosphere made it easy to settle in," said the graduate of Arcadia High School in Oak Hall, VA, "and the University Center is beautiful—a good place to study."

"I had heard how good the Perdue School of Business was," said Willard Massey of North Dorchester High School. He hopes to attain a master's degree after graduating and plans a career in marketing.

Graduating first in her class of 345 from Queen Anne's County High School, Tracy Hayman also found time to edit the school newspaper and be active in the National Honor Society. She is looking forward to being involved in University activities while she majors in mathematics. Like many of her fellow honor students, Hayman won a Presidential Scholarship and is a Maryland Distinguished Scholar.

At a time when many outstanding high school seniors leave Maryland to attend out-of-state schools, this year's group of high achievers attests to the growing awareness that high quality education is available at home, and at reasonable cost.

"At Salisbury State University we pride ourselves in the high standard of education and attention given to each student's needs," said University president, Dr. Thomas E. Bellavance. "I am pleased to welcome these outstanding scholars and know they will rise to the challenge our University offers."

Five students have been elected officers of the SSU Student Senate for the 1988-89 academic year. The Student Senate is the primary governance organization of the university and serves as liaison between the faculty and administration and the student body. Left to right, the students are: Holly Baker of New Castle, vice president of student affairs and a senior majoring in English Literature; Kelli A. Rogers of Galesville, president, and a junior majoring in Psychology; Lisa Michelle Toni of Monrovia, vice president of academic affairs and a senior majoring in Liberal Studies; and Robyn Lynn Love of LaPlata, vice president of senate affairs and a senior majoring in Communication Arts. Not pictured is Robert Heid, who was elected vice president of community affairs.

Go Bananas Night

The Student Health Advisory Committee (SHAC) along with the support of the SSU Athletic Department will hold its fourth annual "Go Bananas Night," Thursday, October 20, in Tawes Gym beginning at 7 p.m.

"Go Bananas" is a night of games such as "Dizzy Izzy," pin the dole on the banana, a banana eating contest and others all for one purpose—to have fun!

SHAC urges student organizations, faculty, administrators and dorm groups to compete. At least 10 teams with 10 members each per team are needed. Prizes will be provided to the winning team, as well as free refreshments to all participants and free t-shirts. The music is courtesy of WSUR; admission is free.

All interested groups should contact SHAC, through the Health Center or pick up a sign-up sheet in the University Center from the "Go Bananas" display.

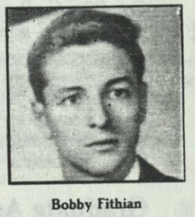
Hall of Fame Inductees

Lee Burton, Jr.

Bob Lockerman

Marshall Moore



Bobby Fithian

Pat Gardner

Ruth Sara Nielsen Scott

Ina Ray Calloway Foskey

Carole Kirkwood Bozman

Charlie Muir

Beth Reid Morris

Martin Davis

Carol Hench Hawkins

The names like Goldy Tyler and Sandy Greer, Alethea Whitney and Benn Maggs bring to mind greatness in athletics at Salisbury State University.

They, along with Andy Hall, Phil Slacum, Joyce Bennett Allen, Louise Holbrook Bassett and Barbara Streett Davis are the nine members of the Salisbury State Athletic Hall of Fame—the names which have become synonymous with the rich tradition that is Salisbury State athletics.

On Friday, October 21, these nine individuals will be joined by 12 more people who have contributed greatly to the athletic heritage at Salisbury State.

Lee Burton was a member of the soccer, basketball and baseball teams for all four years he was at Salisbury State, and was both a starter and captain. He was also a member of the group of gymnasts who traveled to local high schools with Maggs, and was a member of the intramural track.

Marshall Moore played and lettered in three varsity sports, soccer, basketball and basketball, in both his junior and senior years. His athletic career at Salisbury State was highlighted by his selection as the Best Male Athlete in 1947. He has gone on to support and serve Salisbury State in a variety of ways and was awarded the Honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters at this spring's Commencement.

Bob Lockerman was a four-year letterman in soccer, basketball and baseball during his junior and senior years, and was the Best Male Athlete during his junior year.

Bobby Fithian played soccer and ran cross

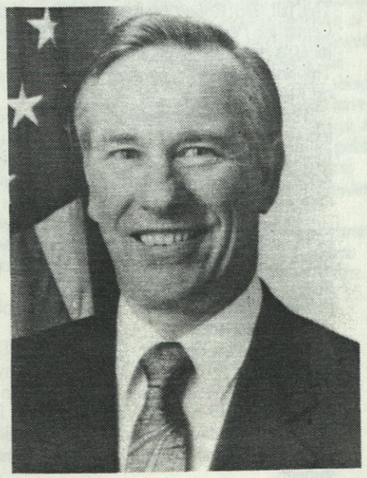
Wright Next Riall Lecturer

One of the nation's leading educators who worked closely with William Bennett during the latter's stormy tenure as U.S. Secretary of Education is the next E. Pauline Riall lecturer.

Linus Wright, who is U.S. under secretary of Education, speaks on Friday, October 28, at 8 p.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium. A reception follows. Admission is free and the public is invited.

The under secretary advises the secretary of Education on all major program and management issues. As the agency's second highest official, he oversees the daily operations of the Education Department's 4,500 employees.



Since his appointment a year ago, Wright has worked with Bennett, who recently resigned, and with Bennett's successor, Lauro F. Cavazos.

Wright was named by Executive Educator magazine as one of the nation's "Top 100 Educators." He has served on the 32-member Urban Superintendents Network of the U.S. Department of Education and as a member of the Governor's Advisory Committe on Education in his native Texas.

From 1978 until his appointment as under secretary, Wright served as superintendent of the Dallas Independent School District—one of the nation's largest, with 130,000 students, 184 schools and 14,000 employees. Wright had a reputation in Dallas as a consensus builder, with an ability to get along with all segments of the community, as well as one of the premier experts on school finance in Texas.

While superintendent in Dallas, Wright improved student test scores, involved 15,000 volunteers and more than 2,000 groups in school programs and partnerships, provided state leadership in school finance and program reform, gained citizen support for the largest school construction bond issue ever approved in Dallas, and initiated and expanded employee relations programs for the school district.

Wright was superintendent for administration for the Houston school system from 1974 to 1978 and chief financial officer from 1971 to 1974. He began his education career in 1949 in Denison, TX, as a coach and eighth grade teacher. He became a principal in 1953, and was with the Sherman, TX, school system from 1954 to 1960. From 1960 to 1963, he was business administrator for the San Angelo Public Schools in Texas, and from 1963 to 1971

Dyson & Gilchrest To Debate On Campus

Congressman Roy Dyson (Democrat First District) and Republican Wayne Gilchrest will debate on campus Sunday, October 16, from 8-9:30 p.m. The debate will be held in Caruthers Auditorium (seating capacity 175). The public is invited; doors open at 7:30 p.m.

Sponsored by the students and faculty of the Political Science Department, the debate will feature four panelists from the media. The audience may also submit questions to the panelists to ask the candidates.

Personal Counseling

Personal counseling is provided for students by the Center for Personal and Professional Development (CPPD), located in the University Center, room 263. The CPPD is open from 8:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m., Monday - Friday. Appointments may be made in person or by calling 543-6070. Walk-in hours are 1 - 3 p.m., Monday - Thursday. All counseling is confidential and free of charge to University students.

University Forum Meeting

The Forum's Executive Committee has established the calendar of Forum meetings for the coming academic year. As in the past, all meetings will be on Tuesdays at 3:30 p.m. in DSH 149. The dates are as follows: Nov. 1 and Dec. 6. Spring Semester: Feb. 14, Mar. 7, Apr. 4 and May 2.

The agenda for each of these meetings will be compiled by the Executive Committee eight days beforehand. If you wish to have an item placed on an agenda, you can do so by submitting the item in writing by the morning of the following Mondays: Oct. 24, Nov. 28, Feb. 6, Feb. 27, Mar. 27, Apr. 24.

Any member of the Executive Committee will be happy to receive your agenda items. They are Tom Jones, Forum chair (Biology), Dave Parker (Computer Science), John Tyvoll (Chemistry and Physics), Nayland Page (History), and Jim Thrash (Library).

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Department of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever you may reside. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep your first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away from alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit area or a place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.

Go Bananas Night

The Student Health Advisory Committee (SHAC) along with the support of the SSU Athletic Department will hold its fourth annual "Go Bananas Night," Thursday, October 20, in Tawes Gym beginning at 7 p.m.

"Go Bananas" is a night of games such as "Dizzy Izzy," pin the dole on the banana, a banana eating contest and others all for one purpose—to have fun!

SHAC urges student organizations, faculty, administrators and dorm groups to compete. At least 10 teams with 10 members each per team are needed. Prizes will be provided to the winning team, as well as free refreshments to all participants and free t-shirts. The music is courtesy of WSUR; admission is free.

All interested groups should contact SHAC, through the Health Center or pick up a sign-up sheet in the University Center from the "Go Bananas" display.

Excess Material, Equipment

As a result of the recent move of classrooms and offices from Holloway Hall to Potomac Hall several different types of items were deemed excess to the needs of the departments making the move.

These items have temporarily been stored in Holloway Hall east wing 101, 102 and 103. Also in Holloway Hall 222, Language Lab has tape decks/desks and control equipment that has been deemed excess equipment.

Campus faculty and staff are invited to visit these rooms on Tuesday and Wednesday, October 25 - 26, from 10 a.m. - noon and indicate to Marie Neal if you want any of these items for use on campus. If so a work order will be written to transfer the items from the temporary storage area to the place you designate.

Any items not requested will be offered to other Maryland institutions. Any questions, call Marie Neal at 543-6055.

Health Insurance Info

Packets containing health insurance information will be delivered to all state employees at their home address by United Parcel Service (UPS) the week of October 10.

There are some important changes in the Blue Cross/Blue Shield plans. The standard plan will now be called "comprehensive" and has very minimal coverage. However, the premium is very low.

The high plan will be called "traditional" keeping the same high coverage, but the premium is almost twice as high as before.

All participants in both standard and high will automatically be put into the traditional (high) plan unless they fill out a new application for another plan.

Read the brochure carefully and contact the Personnel Office if you have any questions. Please be sure to keep the booklet as no additional copies will be available.

Business Database in Library

ABI/INFORM, an on-line business database on compact disc (CD-ROM), has recently been installed in Blackwell Library and will be on demonstration loan for 60 days. It is located in the reference room.

With ABI/INFORM students/faculty can conduct their own interactive searches from a database indexing over 800 business and management publications. A printed abstract of each article cited is available for each user.

Faculty and students are encouraged to visit the library to conduct their searches.

Stop Smoking Clinic

This fall, Dr. Robert McBrien, director of the Center for Personal and Professional Development, is conducting a smoking cessation clinic. The first session in a series of five was offered on Monday, October 10.

Though the clinic has already begun, it is not too late to get involved. The second session is Monday, October 17, at noon in Nanticoke Room B of the University Center. For more information, call the CPPD at 543-6070.

Throughout the year, McBrien and other CPPD staff members will offer a variety of other workshops related to issues of personal development. CPPD also provides students with personal counseling, career planning and job placement services.

Located in the University Center, the CPPD is open from 8:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m., Monday - Friday. Appointments can be made in person or by calling 543-6070. Walk-in hours are 1 - 3 p.m., Monday - Thursday. All counseling is confidential and free of charge to University students.

country for one year each. He also participated in track and field for two years and and baseball and basketball for three years. Like Burton, he was involved in gymnastic exhibitions. During 1951, he was awarded the Best Male Athlete.

Pat Gardner lettered in basketball, volleyball and field hockey all four years at Salisbury. She was president of the Women's Athletic Association and was voted the Best Woman Athlete during her senior year of 1954-55.

Ruth Sarah Nielsen-Scott played field hockey for the Gulls for two years as well as basketball for four. She was co-captain of the basketball team twice and was a member of the gymnastics team for a year. She also played two years of intramural volleyball and softball, was an officer in the Women's Athletic Association for two years, won a hockey award each year and won the Highest Athletic Award in 1956-57.

Carole Kirkwood Bozman was a fullback on the field hockey team during the 1956, '57, '58 and '59 seasons. In 1956 she played intramural basketball and varsity in 1957-59. She also played varsity volleyball in 1956, 1957 and 1959 and was a co-manager during the 1958 season.

Charlie Muir played soccer and basketball from 1954-56. He played baseball in 1957 and was an assistant coach for Salisbury baseball in 1957, the same year he was voted Best Male Athlete.

Ina Ray Calloway Foskey played field hockey and basketball in 1954, 1955 and 1957 and was co-captain of both teams during the 1955 season. In 1954 and 1955, she was also a member of the cheerleaders and the gymnastics group, and was captain of the cheerleaders during both years.

She was also a member of the Women's Athletic Association in 1954, 1955 (secretary), 1957 (president) and 1958, and was a winner of the Best Woman Athlete Award. Beth Reid Morris and Martin Davis were both members of the class of 1963. Morris played both field hockey and basketball here at Salisbury State.

Davis played varsity basketball during all four years and was captain during his sophomore, junior and senior seasons. In 1963 he played varsity soccer and tennis and played intramural football, softball and basketball all four years. In 1963 he was voted Best Male Athlete.

Carol Hench Hawkins played varsity field hockey from 1962-65, varsity basketball in 1962-63 and varsity volleyball from 1963-66. She was captain of the field hockey and volleyball teams in her final season of each, was the Most Valuable Player for volleyball in 1966 and the Most Athletic Woman that same year.

These 12 individuals were selected from a list of close to 100 candidates, all of whom were very deserving. And all of whom have over five decades represented Salisbury State University in the best way possible, as students and athletes.

The class of '88 inductees will be honored in a banquet on the Friday night of Homecoming, October 21. Tickets are $20 each and can be obtained thorugh the Alumni Office. Deadline for reservations is Monday, October 17. Call 5543-6042 for details.

New Ward Chief

Ralph Bufano has been named executive director of the Ward Foundation, effective November 1.

Prior to his Ward Foundation appointment, Bufano was a museum consultant. His latest project was working with the Wings of Freedom Museum in Philadelphia. As president of the Kansas City Museum from 1987 to 1988, Bufano was responsible for developing a new concept for the facility incorporating history, technology, science, a Children's Discovery Museum and a Lifelong Learning Center.

Epilepsy Meeting

The next meeting of the Salisbury Epilepsy Self-help Group is Wednesday, October 19, at 7 p.m. in the Wicomico County Library. The guest speaker is Chris Bosies, a job coach.

For more information, call Edward Simonoff at 543-0665.

Outdoor Club News

Upcoming Outdoor Club meeting will feature a screening and discussion of the film Deliverance on Monday, October 17, a speaker from the Nature Conservancy on Monday, October 24, a presentation and clinic on rock climbing by a representative from REI on Monday, October 31, and a slide presentation by Appalachian Trail thru-hiker Warren Doyle on Tuesday, November 8. Meetings begin at 6 p.m. in Nanticoke A of the University Center.

Upcoming trips will be canoeing (and clean-up) on the Pocomoke River on the weekend of October 29-31, rock climbing at Great Falls, VA, Saturday, November 5, a ropes course at Camp Nanticoke on November 11-13 and horse packing in Shenandoah National Park on November 18-20.

Students who wish to go on any trip must attend the meeting on the Monday preceding the trip.

Multicultural Meeting

The Multicultural Education Association meets on Thursday, October 20, at 8 p.m. in Nanticoke A and B of the University Center.

The purpose of the initial meeting is to establish definitive directions for the new organization. Please come prepared to voice ideas, opinions and concerns.

Multicultural education involves two or more ethnic groups and is designed to help participants clarify their own ethnic identity and appreciate that of others, reduce prejudice and stereotyping, and promote cultural pluralism and equal participation.

Larry Watson, a graduate student, is the organizer of MEA.

Bands Rebuild

The University Bands, under the new direction of Richard L. Johnson, are hoping to rebuild its ranks primarily from the University students and faculty who are interested in continuing their performance experience.

The University Band, formerly titled Concert Band, is open to all faculty and students. No auditions are required for membership. It is not the ability that is the major consideration for membership but the desire to perform a variety of good band literature. Academic credit is available.

Johnson is attempting to reinstate the University Pep Band in order to provide musical support for the football and basketball games. The Pep Band is also open to all students and faculty and maintains no audition requirements. Being enthusiastic and willing to build school spirit are the only two criteria for the Pep Band. Johnson encourages all suggestions.

The University Jazz Band presently functions as an auditioned ensemble, but vacancies in the organization need to be filled. Each instrumental section has one or two openings. Academic credit is available.

The fall semester rehearsal schedule is: Band—Monday and Wednesday, 3:25 - 4:30 p.m.; Pep Band—Monday and Wednesday, 4:30 - 5 p.m.; and Jazz Band—Wednesday, 7 - 9 p.m.

Interested students and faculty are encouraged to contact University Bands at 543-6387 or the Department of Music at 543-6385.

Alumni Homecoming Slate

The Alumni Association presents a full slate of exciting events in conjunction with this year's Homecoming on Friday and Saturday, October 21-22.

The second Athletic Hall of Fame dinner and induction ceremonies kicks off the weekend on Friday at 6 p.m. in the Ruth Powell Dining Hall. Twelve greats from the SSU playing fields will be feted that evening. The public is invited. Tickets are $20 each and can be obtained by calling 543-6042.

An All-Alumni Get Together will follow at 9 p.m. in the Nanticoke Room of the University Center.

Saturday's smorgasbord of activities leads off with the annual meeting and the dedication of the student lounge at the University Center at 11 a.m. At the same time, sports fans can take in the Sea Gull soccer game against cross-state rival Frostburg State University at the soccer field.

JITTERBUGS! During halftime of the SSU-Wesley College football game on Saturday, October 15, the Dance Company and the Mardela High School Band will recreate a '50s high school sock hop. Twenty-one dancers choreographed by Holly Boda will be jitterbugging to a Glen Miller melody played by 35 musicians, directed by Howard Snow. The game, in Sea Gull Stadium, begins at 1:30 p.m. Pictured, from left to right, are: Carol Perkins, Willie Ibarra, Brigette Tenor, Susan Watson, Randy Ashcraft, Timothy Bowman and Tisha Garber.

'Special' Gift Received

The old Wicomico School for Special Children has passed on its remaining assets to a new generation of teachers studying this specialized field of education at Salisbury State.

The school, though no longer in operation, had assets of over $76,000 accumulating interest in a local bank. The surviving trustees have turned this money over to the Salisbury State University Foundation to use for scholarships and for workshops, seminars and guest lecturers for students preparing to work with the mentally handicapped.

Dr. John May, one of the directors on the old school's board, said that the decision was made because the University "has the stability" which will assure that the money will be well used far into the future. The old school's board will now be dissolved.

The privately run school for the mentally handicapped, known in the community as the Emerson Street School, closed its doors in 1980. By that time the public school system had taken over the education of all handicapped children and Holly Center, the Eastern Shore Mental Retardation Center, had been established in Salisbury.

The Emerson Street School had served the community well for 20 years. At the time it closed, its principal was Mrs. Anna Mae Liston, now retired and living near Salisbury. There were 30 students in the school at the time it closed, she recalled.

May, a former psychology professor at Salisbury State, said that before the Emerson Street School was built, mentally handicapped children were taught by one teacher in facilities provided by Bethany Lutheran Church on Camden Avenue and South Blvd.

Money for their education was provided by the Maryland Mental Retardation Commission.

The school at Emerson Street came about, May said, because of the efforts of the Coastal Realtors Association and specifically one member, the late Fred Flowers.

The Coastal Relators gave the lot and on Thanksgiving Day 1959, members and volunteers enlisted from the community put up the framework for the building. The school moved in that May, in 1960.

The school was supported by the state commission and private gifts and the Wicomico public school system contributed some help and supplies.

When the school disbanded eight years ago the board gave the building and grounds to the Lower Shore Sheltered Workshop, now called Lower Shore Industries. That organization has since sold the building and moved into a new one.

With no claim by the state on the remaining money, it had continued to earn interest and increased considerably through the years.

The Salisbury State University Foundation will administer the endowment, selecting, with aid of students, faculty and staff, the scholarship and grant recipients. The SSU Foundation, established for the encouragement and enrichment of education at the University, is incorporated as a voluntary association of community leaders solely for educational, charitable and scientific purposes.

Robert M. Gearhart, the executive director of the Salisbury State University Foundation, said that to him what is important about the gift is that it shows "the people of the community are behind this institution. The board (of the old school) knows that we will take care of their endowment in perpetuity."

Special reunion luncheons for the classes of '28, '38 and '43 will be held at 1 p.m. in the Nanticoke Room of the University Center.

The centerpiece of the day for many alumni is certainly the football game at 1:30 p.m. at Sea Gull Stadium, this against nationally ranked Montclair State University.

The Annual Tea to honor the reunion class of '28, '38 and '43 will be held at 2:30 p.m. in the Social Room of Holloway Hall.

At 4:30 p.m., everyone is invited to the postgame Gull Buster Bull Roast at the Nanticoke Room in the University Center. For $12 each, alumni and guests can enjoy all the food they can eat, music, a cash bar and special reunions for the classes of '48, '53, '58, '63, '73, '78 and '83.

That evening at 7, Grand Reunions for the aforementioned classes will be held at the Nanticoke Room.

Throughout the day an information booth will be staffed on the first floor of the University Center.

For more details on Salisbury State Homecoming plans for alumni, call Judy Pielemeier, executive director of the SSU Alumni Association, at 543-6042.

Local Quilts

"Quilts from Delmarva" will be on display in the University Center Gallery from Sunday, October 16, to Thursday, November 10. Hours are Sunday, 1 - 5 p.m., Monday - Thursday, noon - 3 p.m., and Wednesday, 5-8 p.m.

Philosophy Opening

The Philosophy Department is now accepting applications for a full-time, tenure-track faculty position at the Assistant Professor level, beginning in the fall of 1989.

The position involves teaching four undergraduate courses each semester. A passion for teaching, profound commitment to liberal education, and an appreciation for the plurality of philosophical methods are the primary prerequisites. We are seeking a generalist with a strong background in the history of philosophy. Areas of competence should include some of the following: theory of knowledge, metaphysics, cosmology, philosophy of science, feminist theory, the relationbship between Anglo-American and recent continental thought, history of modern philosphy.

Non-teaching duties include working with the student Philosophical Society and normal committee work.

We prefer applicants who have the doctorate in hand; and applicant who has not completed the dissertation would enter at the Instructor level. Salary is competitive. Applicants should send dossier and syllabi for an Introduction course and for the upper level course they would most enjoy teaching to Dr. Jerry Miller, Department of Philosophy, Salisbury State University, Salisbury, MD 21801. Candidates will be interviewed at Eastern meeting of the American Philosophical Association and no applications will be accepted after that time.

Salisbury State University is an affirmative action/equal opportunity employer. Qualified women, minorities and disabled persons are encouraged to apply.

Police Vacancy

State University/College police private: candidates must be on State Eligible List. Submit resume to Personnel Office, Holloway Hall, room 205, no later than Thursday, October 20.

History and Pizza

The History Club is sponsoring a pizza night, Thursday, October 20, at the La Roma Restaurant. History Club members as well as all SSU students and staff are welcome. The party begins at 8 p.m.

Contact Dr. Tim Miller in the History Department at 543-6243 for information.

Nautilus Hours

The Nautilus Center is open Sunday from 2-6 p.m.

University Retirees

Leroy Harper

Five Salisbury State University employees retired and were recently recognized for their years of outstanding service here.

Dorothy Newcomb of the library worked at SSU from September 1969 until her retirement in July. Her husband, Ed, had worked in Custodial Services since June 1980 until his retirement.

Allen Jones, Leroy Harper and John Collier, all of Custoidal Services, recently left the University after many years of considerable service. Jones came to SSU in April 1971, Harper in January 1971 and Collier in May 1976.

University Homecoming This Weekend

Salisbury State celebrates its first "University" homecoming this weekend with food, reunions of friends, and a special "Hall of Fame" salute. A full slate of activities throughout the preceding week build up to Friday and Saturday's events, which are open to the public.

The weekend festivities begin on Friday, October 21, with students showing their "University" spirit by wearing maroon & gold. The Athletic Department sponsors a "Hall of Fame" press conference at 4 p.m. in the Holloway Hall Social Room followed by the Hall of Fame Social Hour at 6 p.m. in the Salisbury Room of the Ruth Powell Dining Hall. The Hall of Fame Dinner and Inductee Ceremony begin at 7 p.m. in the Salisbury Room. The event is sponsored by the SSU Alumni Association and the Athletic Department. Tickets are $20 per person and may be purchased by calling the Alumni Office at 543-6042.

The Communication Arts Department presents the comedy The Foreigner, in Holloway Hall Auditorium on stage at 8 p.m. An All-Alumni-Get-Together sponsored by the Alumni Association is at 9 p.m. in Nanticoke Rooms A, B, and C at the new University Center.

Saturday kicks off with an Open House from 9 a.m.-1 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the University Center. At 11 a.m. the annual Alumni Association meeting and this year, dedication of the Student Lounge, will be held in the University Center. Also, at 11 a.m. the Sea Gull soccer team plays the Frostburg Bobcats. A Car Decorating Contest, sponsored by the Student Activities Committee, will be held at 12:30 p.m. at the Sea Gull Stadium; Reunion lunches for the Classes of '28, '38 and '43 are at 1 p.m. in the Nanticoke Rooms of the University Center.

The Homecoming football pregame activities begin at 1:15 p.m. in Sea Gull Stadium with the Maryland National Guard Sports Parachute team delivering two game footballs; Following the singing of the National Anthem the Sea Gulls will square off against rival Montclair at 1:30 p.m.

The halftime ceremonies begin at approximately 2:30 p.m. with the introduction of the Homecoming King and Queen, Hall of Fame inductees, the SSU cheerleaders, announcement of the winners of the car decorating and banner contests and Sammy the Sea Gull/balloon liftoff.

Saturday's events continue with the Alumni Association Annual Tea at 2:30 p.m. in the Social Room. A a postgame Gull Buster Bull Roast, sponsored by the Alumni Association is at 4 p.m. in Nanticoke Rooms A,B,C in the University Center-cost is $12 per person. The Foreigner continues on stage at 8 p.m. The evening concludes with the Homecoming Dance sponsored by the Salisbury State Program Board at 9 p.m. in the Maggs Gym. Music is by the Horizons.

Art exhibits at both the University and University Center Gallerys will be on display throughout the weekend.

For more details on Homecoming contact the Alumni Association at 543-6042.

Homecoming Sports: Fun, Fame and Football

by Barry Packer

Homecoming weekend is upon us for the first time as a University. And, as usual, during Homecoming weekend, the three-day affair is filled with sports.

It all taps off on Friday afternoon and evening with a dedication. For the second time in the history of Salisbury State, new members will be inducted into the SSU Athletic Hall of Fame. Twelve new inductees will join the nine who have already assumed their place in the historic Sea Gull roster.

On Friday afternoon, the inductees will be introduced at a 4 p.m. press conference in the Social Room of Holloway Hall. They will then go to Ruth Powell Dining Hall for their official induction ceremony, during which they will be introduced by current members of the Hall of Fame. After being so honored on Friday night, they will be recognized on Saturday afternoon at the SSU-Montclair football game.

The Gulls, after simply destroying (for lack of a better word) Wesley, on Saturday, 75-6, enter this Saturday's 1:30 p.m. clash with the Montclair Indians with a 4-2 record. The guests from New Jersey come in with a 5-1 record, that only loss being a thrashing at the hands of Wagner, last year's National Champion.

In 1987, the Gulls were upended by Montclair, 30-22, on the road. On Saturday, the Gulls will attempt to avenge that loss by continuing their awesome offensive display, an offense which has produced an average of 35.1 points over the season and an average of 49 points, or seven touchdowns per outing, over the last three weeks.

Before co-captains Kevin White and Jeff Cranford hit the center of the gridiron for the ceremonial coin toss on Saturday, two other home events will already be underway.

Gerry DiBartolo's soccer team, winners of their last two games, including a 2-1 upset victory over Cabrini on Saturday, hosts archrival Frostburg in an 11 a.m. Eastern States Athletic Conference tilt. The Gulls, with a win, would end up with a 4-3-1 conference record, and with a little help from other conference teams, could watch divisional rival Shenandoah fall to 4-4.

In between the soccer and football games, sports buffs have an opportunity at the Maggs Physical Activities Center to catch a 1 p.m. match-up between the Gulls and the Captains of Christopher Newport on the volleyball court. Ellen Doxtater's team, led by Brenda Bowlin, Sandy Jankevicius and Amy Geppi, come into the contest with a 17-4 record, fresh off of a second-place finish at the Gallaudet Tournament.

While these three teams entertain their opposition at home, not to be forgotten are the women's tennis team that will be playing at Marywood in the Eastern States Athletic Conference Championship, and the field hockey team, that has three crucial contests left—one on Thursday, October 20, at Shippensburg, Saturday at Kutztown's Homecoming and Wednesday, October 26, at home, against Mary Washington, before embarking to the ESAC playoffs.

Wright Next Riall Lecturer

One of the nation's leading educators who worked closely with William Bennett during the latter's stormy tenure as U.S. Secretary of Education is the next E. Pauline Riall lecturer.

Linus Wright, who is U.S. under secretary of Education, speaks on Friday, October 28, at 8 p.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium. A reception follows. Admission is free and the public is invited.

The under secretary advises the secretary of Education on all major program and management issues. As the agency's second highest official, he oversees the daily operations of the Education Department's 4,500 employees.

Since his appointment a year ago, Wright has worked with Bennett, who recently resigned, and with Bennett's successor, Lauro F. Cavazos.

Wright was named by Executive Educator magazine as one of the nation's "Top 100 Educators." He has served on the 32-member Urban Superintendents Network of the U.S. Department of Education and as a member of the Governor's Advisory Committe on Education in his native Texas.

Graduate Assistant Athletic Trainers

Salisbury State University is seeking two graduate assistant athletic trainers. Desirable applicants should possess or be eligible for N.A.T.A. Certification, CPR Instructor Certification and Red Cross Certification. Salary or stipends will be commensurate with qualifications.

The Department of Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics services the University through instruction, recreation and athletics programs encompassing 18 varisty sports. Salisbury State University is a member of the NCAA-Division III, has an excellent internship program and is committed to academic integrity and personal growth among student-athletes. The campus recreation program services over 1500 students annually.

To apply, please send a letter of application, resume and three letters of recommendation to: Athletic Training Search, Department of Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics, Salisbury State University, Salisbury, MD 21801.

The application deadline is December 15. In person inteviews are optional, but desirable. Salisbury State University is an affirmative action, equal opportunity employer. Qualified women, minorities and the disabled are encouraged to apply.

Go Bananas Night

The Student Health Advisory Committee (SHAC) along with the support of the SSU Athletic Department will hold its fourth annual "Go Bananas Night," Thursday, October 20, in Tawes Gym beginning at 7 p.m.

"Go Bananas" is a night of games such as "Dizzy Izzy," pin the dole on the banana, a banana eating contest and others all for one purpose—to have fun!

SHAC urges student organizations, faculty, administrators and dorm groups to compete. At least 10 teams with 10 members each per team are needed. Prizes will be provided to the winning team, as well as free refreshments to all participants and free t-shirts. The music is courtesy of WSUR; admission is free.

All interested groups should contact SHAC, through the Health Center or pick up a sign-up sheet in the University Center from the "Go Bananas" display.

Excess Material, Equipment

As a result of the recent move of classrooms and offices from Holloway Hall to Potomac Hall several different types of items were deemed excess to the needs of the departments making the move.

These items have temporarily been stored in Holloway Hall east wing 101, 102 and 103. Also in Holloway Hall 222, Language Lab has tape decks/desks and control equipment that has been deemed excess equipment.

Campus faculty and staff are invited to visit these rooms on Tuesday and Wednesday, October 25 - 26, from 10 a.m. - noon and indicate to Marie Neal if you want any of these items for use on campus. If so a work order will be written to transfer the items from the temporary storage area to the place you designate.

Any items not requested will be offered to other Maryland institutions. Any questions, call Marie Neal at 543-6055.

Health Insurance Info

Packets containing health insurance information will be delivered to all state employees at their home address by United Parcel Service (UPS) the week of October 10.

There are some important changes in the Blue Cross/Blue Shield plans. The standard plan will now be called "comprehensive" and has very minimal coverage. However, the premium is very low.

The high plan will be called "traditional" keeping the same high coverage, but the premium is almost twice as high as before.

All participants in both standard and high will automatically be put into the traditional (high) plan unless they fill out a new application for another plan.

Read the brochure carefully and contact the Personnel Office if you have any questions. Please be sure to keep the booklet as no additional copies will be available.

Business Database in Library

ABI/INFORM, an on-line business database on compact disc (CD-ROM), has recently been installed in Blackwell Library and will be on demonstration loan for 60 days. It is located in the reference room.

With ABI/INFORM students/faculty can conduct their own interactive searches from a database indexing over 800 business and management publications. A printed abstract of each article cited is available for each user.

Faculty and students are encouraged to visit the library to conduct their searches.

1989 Honors Convocation

The 1989 Honors Convocation will have as its speaker a graduate of Salisbury State. The Committee is seeking nominations of prospective alumni speakers who could serve as appropriate role models and who will be selected based upon the following criteria: must have graduated at least five or more years ago from Salisbury State University in an approved program of study; must currently be successfully employed in a career or business which reflects the standards and goals of Salisbury State; should be active in community activities; should have been active in campus events as a student at Salisbury State; should possess skills in public speaking; and should be an advocate and supporter of academic excellence and student involvement.

Letters of nominations may be sent to Honors Convocation Committee, c/o Dr. Carolyn Bowden or to the Dean of Students Office. Deadline for nominations is November 15.

Personal Counseling

Personal counseling is provided for students by the Center for Personal and Professional Development (CPPD), located in the University Center, room 263. The CPPD is open from 8:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m., Monday - Friday. Appointments may be made in person or by calling 543-6070. Walk-in hours are 1 - 3 p.m., Monday - Thursday. All counseling is confidential and free of charge to University students.

University Forum Meeting

The Forum's Executive Committee has established the calendar of Forum meetings for the coming academic year. As in the past, all meetings will be on Tuesdays at 3:30 p.m. in DSH 149. The dates are as follows: Nov. 1 and Dec. 6. Spring Semester: Feb. 14, Mar. 7, Apr. 4 and May 2.

The agenda for each of these meetings will be compiled by the Executive Committee eight days beforehand. If you wish to have an item placed on an agenda, you can do so by submitting the item in writing by the morning of the following Mondays: Oct. 24, Nov. 28, Feb. 6, Feb. 27, Mar. 27, Apr. 24.

Any member of the Executive Committee will be happy to receive your agenda items. They are Tom Jones, Forum chair (Biology), Dave Parker (Computer Science), John Tyvoll (Chemistry and Physics), Nayland Page (History), and Jim Thrash (Library).

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Department of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever you may reside. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep your first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away from alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit area or a place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you need an escort to or from your car, call the Department of Public Safety, 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Department of Public Safety, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

Local Quilts

"Quilts from Delmarva" will be on display in the University Center Gallery from Sunday, October 16, to Thursday, November 10. Hours are Sunday, 1 - 5 p.m., Monday - Thursday, noon - 3 p.m., and Wednesday, 5 - 8 p.m.

Multicultural Meeting

The Multicultural Education Association meets on Thursday, October 20, at 8 p.m. in Nanticoke A and B of the University Center.

The purpose of the initial meeting is to establish definitive directions for the new organization. Please come prepared to voice ideas, opinions and concerns.

Multicultural education involves two or more ethnic groups and is designed to help participants clarify their own ethnic identity and appreciate that of others, reduce prejudice and stereotyping, and promote cultural pluralism and equal participation.

Larry Watson, a graduate student, is the organizer of MEA.

Bands Rebuild

The University Bands, under the new direction of Richard L. Johnson, are hoping to rebuild its ranks primarily from the University students and faculty who are interested in continuing their performance experience.

The University Band, formerly titled Concert Band, is open to all faculty and students. No auditions are required for membership. It is not the ability that is the major consideration for membership but the desire to perform a variety of good band literature. Academic credit is available.

Johnson is attempting to reinstate the University Pep Band in order to provide musical support for the football and basketball games. The Pep Band is also open to all students and faculty and maintains no audition requirements. Being enthusiastic and willing to build school spirit are the only two criteria for the Pep Band. Johnson encourages all suggestions.

The University Jazz Band presently functions as an auditioned ensemble, but vacancies in the organization need to be filled. Each instrumental section has one or two openings. Academic credit is available.

The fall semester rehearsal schedule is:

Band—Monday and Wednesday, 3:25 - 4:30 p.m.; Pep Band—Monday and Wednesday, 4:30 - 5 p.m.; and Jazz Band—Wednesday, 7 - 9 p.m.

Interested students and faculty are encouraged to contact University Bands at 543-6387 or the Department of Music at 543-6385.

Police Vacancy

State University/College police private: candidates must be on State Eligible List. Submit resume to Personnel Office, Holloway Hall, room 205, no later than Thursday, October 20.

Bach is Back!

"Bach's Lunch", a free noontime recital series at St. Peter's Church, Salisbury, has returned for its third season. The series of half-hour informal concerts began October 18 and continue on consecutive Tuesdays through November 22. Each recital runs from 12:15 to 12:45 p.m., allowing local listeners to attend during their lunch hour.

Several members of the SSU music faculty will be featured on the series: Ray Zeigler will be the guest artist on November 1, Nancy Cooper and Katherine Turner, with Doug Smith from the UMES faculty, will perform an "Election Day Extravaganza" on November 8, Taylor Harvey will be joined by flutist Jim Andrews on November 15, and Duane Karna will close out the "season" on November 22.

The "Bach's Lunch" series is free and open to the public. St. Peter's is located on the Downtown Plaza in Salisbury. Further information may be obtained by calling the Church Office at 742-5118.

Philosophy Opening

The Philosophy Department is now accepting applications for a full-time, tenure-track faculty position at the Assistant Professor level, beginning in the fall of 1989.

The position involves teaching four undergraduate courses each semester. A passion for teaching, profound commitment to liberal education, and an appreciation for the plurality of philosophical methods are the primary prerequisites. We are seeking a generalist with a strong background in the history of philosophy. Areas of competence should include some of the following: theory of knowledge, metaphysics, cosmology, philosophy of science, feminist theory, the relationship between Anglo-American and recent continental thought, history of modern philosophy.

Non-teaching duties include working with the student Philosophical Society and normal committee work.

We prefer applicants who have the doctorate in hand; and applicant who has not completed the dissertation would enter at the Instructor level. Salary is competitive. Applicants should send dossier and syllabi for an Introduction course and for the upper level course they would most enjoy teaching to Dr. Jerry Miller, Department of Philosophy, Salisbury State University, Salisbury, MD 21801. Candidates will be interviewed at Eastern meeting of the American Philosophical Association and no applications will be accepted after that time.

Salisbury State University is an affirmative action/equal opportunity employer. Qualified women, minorities and disabled persons are encouraged to apply.

A brochure, which lists all participating agencies, will be mailed to all faculty/staff. This agency listing is helpful if you wish to designate a specific agency to receive your contribution or if you require the services of one of the agencies.

This year as an incentive for you to support this important campaign, the SSU Foundation has donated a Video Casseette Recorder (VCR) which you will be eligible to win if you give at least $1.50 per pay period. If you wish to see the VCR, it is located in HH, room 202. The campaign ends Friday, November 11. The drawing for the VCR takes place on Monday, November 14; the winner will be contacted immediately.

While considering whether or not you wish to contribute, please bear in mind that the agencies which receive funds from United Way Charities depend on your generous support to continue to function. Emergency assistance, vocational training for the handicapped and disabled, counseling and educational programs are just a few of the services offered.

Perhaps that which you give today may some day come back to you. Be as generous as you can be.

Campaign coordinators at the University this year are Debbie Merryweather (543-6050) and Gains Hawkins (543-6030). Call one of them if you have any questions.

Minority Conference at Hood for Students & Staff

A conference entitled, "Retaining Your Culture At Predominantly White Institutions" will be held at Hood College in Frederick, on Saturday, November 12.

This conference is primarily for black students who attend predominantly white colleges, and interested staff members. However, we strongly encourage majority students to attend in a effort to enhance the understanding and awareness of a diverse student population.

By focusing on identity, credibility and self-esteem, students will learn to cope with and possibly alleviate alienation and isolation, develop leadership skills, organize time and resources, minimize stress and anxiety, and optimize productivity and performance. Students and staff who attended last year were very impressed by the conference's content and highly recommend attendance. Transportation will be provided by the Dean of Students office. Registration fee for staff is approximately $25. The Dean of Students office will pay the registration fee for students.

Sign-up for this conference is in the Dean of Students Office, room 212, University Center or by calling 543-6080. Deadline for sign-up is Tuesday, November 1.

Hayes Gives Workshop

Diane Hayes, instructor of medical technology, and R. Neill Carey, Ph.D., clinical associate professor of medical technology at Peninsula General Hospital Medical Center, presented a workshop, "Improving Statistical Quality Control in the Laboratory," at the annual meeting of the Maryland Society for Medical Technology in Baltimore on October 8.

The workshop described techniques by which laboratory professionals can develop statistical quality control procedures to improve the quality of medical laboratory test results and ensure that laboratory test results will be reliable for medical use.

Hayes was previously senior technologist in the Special Chemistry Laboratory at Peninsula General.

The "Pieceworks" of Women's Lives Inspire Art Exhibits

"Pieceworks," a national juried exhibition of contemporary art whose design, materials, or workmanship shows the influence of traditional quilts, will be on display at the University Gallery through November 10.

The exhibition includes quilts, textiles, ceramics, baskets, handmade paper, prints, paintings, and works in mixed media. It was organized by Georgia Mountain Crafts and is being circulated nationally by the Southern Arts Federation. Its showing at Salisbury State is made possible, in part, by a grant from the Maryland State Arts Council.

The jurors were Jonathan Fairbanks, curator of American Decorative Arts and Sculpture at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts; Alfred Ward, director of the Appalachian Center for Crafts in Smithville, TN; and Andy Naisee, professor of Art at the University of Georgia, who proposed the idea for the exhibition.

Ursula Ehrhardt, SSU's Gallery director, stated that most of the works in the exhibition were not functional objects, despite the artists' use of material and techniques generally associated with the crafts or applied arts. "Most of these objects are not intended for use, but as art objects in their own right," Ehrhardt said. All of the quilts, for example, were "art quilts," made for display as wall hangings, rather than to cover a bed or to provide warmth.

Karen Mitchell, the Gallery's education coordinator, noted that traditional quilt patterns are actually more prevalent in the non-textile pieces, appearing in ceramics, paintings, prints, collages, and handmade paper. Most of the artists in the exhibition are women, Mitchell said, for whom "the imagery and piecing technique of quilting takes on symbolic meaning." A number of the artists in their statements for the exhibition's catalogue discussed this issue. Lee Warner, for example, whose "Indian Summer Sampler" contains myriad brightly colored patterns, wrote that she chose the quilt and comforter motif because these "evoke a sense of love, security, belonging and friendship." Loretha Riales, whose paper constructions of printed patterns are stitched together, stated that the imagery of pieced quilts "speaks directly about the fragmentation of time, thought and energy experienced by a family woman who makes art."

Because of the prevalence of quilts and textile pieces in the exhibition, the SSU Gallery has organized a number of special events on this subject. An exhibition of traditional quilts, "Quilts from Delmarva," will be on display in the Chesapeake Room of the University Center through November 10. It was curated by Joan Hook, president of the Delmarvelous Quilters' Guild, and includes 30 quilts which were made either by members of the guild or their relatives. Most of the quilts are from Delmarva but a few, said Ehrhardt, are antique quilts inherited by the present owners from relatives in other states.

In connection with this exhibition of local quilts, the University Gallery will show the award-winning film, "Quilts in Women's Lives," in Nanticoke Rooms A and B of the University Center on Tuesday, November 1, at 7:30 p.m. The film focuses on seven women from different backgrounds who discuss their art in relation to their lives. A panel discussion with several members of the Delmarvelous Quilters' Guild and Joan Hook as moderator takes place after the screening, followed by a reception in Nanticoke Room C.

The final event will be a slide-lecture on contemporary quilts by Dr. Arlette Klaric, associate director of the Boston University Art Gallery, which will take place in Caruthers Hall Auditorium on November 7 at 7:30 p.m. Dr. Klaric curated the 1987 national juried exhibition, "Contemporary Quilts," which will tour a number of European countries under the auspices of the United States Information Agency beginning in the Spring of 1989.

The University Gallery is located on the second floor of Blackwell Library and is open Monday and Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., Tuesday and Thursday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Saturday and Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m. Regularly scheduled gallery talks, given by Karen Mitchell, the Gallery's education coordinators, take place every Tuesday at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m.

The Chesapeake Room in the University Center, where "Quilts from Delmarva," will be on display, is open Monday through Thursday from noon to 3 p.m., Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m., and Wednesday evenings from 5 to 8 p.m. Admission to both galleries and other events is free.

Policy on Smoking

To protect the health, comfort and safety of everyone associated with SSU, the following policy is to be observed by all employees, students and visitors on campus.

Mandatory Non-Smoking Areas—The following areas have been designated as no smoking areas: classrooms, stairwells, elevators, auditoriums, gymnasiums, health center, conference rooms, restrooms, public access areas of the library, meeting areas and work areas open to the public and public access lobbies. Other areas not covered above, where smoking is not permissible, will be designated by having signs posted.

Smoking Areas—Areas where smoking is permissible are the following: the designated area in the snack bar, the designated area in the cafeteria and designated lounges.

Discretionary Smoking/Non-Smoking Areas—Offices: Whether smoking is or is not permissible in private and shared offices will be determined by the occupant(s). When a difference of opinion about smoking occurs between the occupants of a shared office, the office will be designated as a no smoking area.

Cars and vans—Whether smoking is or is not permissible in state-owned cars and vans will be determined on each trip by the riders. When a difference of opinion about smoking occurs between the occupants, the rights of the non-smoker(s) prevail.

Exceptions to public access non-smoking areas—For special event groups utilizing campus facilities, each individual event may be designated as an event where smoking is permissible. Publicity advertising special events should designate the event as a smoking or smokeless event.

The entire University community is responsible for implementing and enforcing this policy. Respect for the smoker is the right to smoke. Respect for the non-smoker is the right to a smoke-free environment. When these rights conflict at SSU, the administration will attempt to find a reasonable solution. Grievances from students, faculty, and staff will be handled, respectively, by the Dean of Students' Office, the Faculty Welfare Committe, and immediate supervisors. When a compromise is not possible, however, the rights of the non-smoker will prevail.

Let Your Love Light Shine

MAC, Inc., area agency on aging, will be the first non-profit agency to participate in the "Winter Wonderland" lights display. MAC's involvement in this annual Wicomico County Visitors Bureau project will benefit frail, elderly residents on the lower Shore. This venture known as MAC's Love Light Tree will entail the decoration of a 30-foot tree in front of the Wicomico Civic Center. The tree will be decorated with lights donated by individuals and corporate sponsors.

For a donation of $5 or more, you may have a light placed on the tree in honor or in memory of someone special to you. A card will be sent to announce your gift, and the honored name will be placed in a book displayed in the Wicomico Visitors Bureau lobby. Your tax-deductible donation will be used to help MAC Home Aide Program.

The Home Aide Program provides in-home supportive care to frail, older people in Wicomico, Somerset and Worcester counties. This care which includes assistance with bathing, housekeeping and meals, helps the older person remain at home and avoid or delay placement in a long-term care facility. Currently, this program cannot serve all of the elderly in the community who require assistance. Your donation will help brighten the season as well as brighten the life of a frail, older person.

User Services Coordinator

Salisbury State University has an immediate opening for a User Services Coordinator in the Department of Computer Services. This position will be responsible for developing and maintaining office automation systems throughout the University. These systems consist both of microcomputers and VAX minicomputers. Assisting and training users of these systems will also be required. Primary responsibilities will be microcomputer based applications, both local and networked.

The University is expanding rapidly and is looking for a dynamic person to grow along with it. Currently, Computer Services is expanding the microcomputer resources, including the addition of LAN's and gateways to the VAX minicomputers.

The successful applicant must have good verbal and written communication skills. A minimum of 1 year of computer related work experience is preferred. Experience with microcomputers is required and VAX minicomputers is preferred. A knowledge of LOTUS 1-2-3, dBase III+, WordPerfect, and networking is required. The applicant must have a Bachelor's degree in a computer related field. This is a permanent State position with benefits. Starting salary range $23,000 - $28,000. All applicants must submit a letter of application, resume, and a list with addresses and telephone numbers of at least three references, no later than October 28, to: Department of Computer Services, ATTN: Maxine Fox, Salisbury State University, Salisbury, MD 21801.

Salisbury State University is an Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer. Qualified women, minorities and the disabled are encouraged to apply.

Eating Concerns Support Group

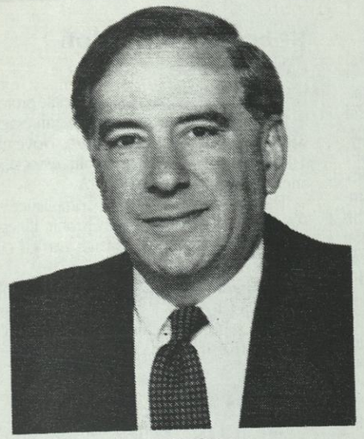
The Center for Personal and Professional Development is in the process of organizing a support group for students suffering from bulimia and/or anorexia nervosa. Counselor Kathryn Reading will serve as facilitator for the group. For more information on the group, including time and location of the initial organizational meeting, contact the Center for Personal and Professional Development at 543-6070.

Throughout the year, the CPPD will sponsor support groups, workshops and presentations related to issues of personal development and academic progress. The CPPD also provides students with personal counseling, career planning and job placement services.

Located on the second floor of the University Center, the CPPD is open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday - Friday. Appointments may be made in person or by calling 543-6070. Walk-in hours are 1 - 3 p.m., Monday - Thursday. All counseling is confidential and free of charge to university students.

Health Insurance Open Enrollment Meeting

Friday, November 4, University Center, Nanticoke Room. Meeting times are 8, 9, 10, 11 a.m., noon and 1 p.m. Representatives from Blue Cross/Blue Shield and the Delmarva Health Plan will be available to answer questions. You are urged to attend one of the sessions and learn more about your particular plan and how it has or has not changed for the coming year.



Joseph P. Viviano

Hershey Chocolate President Speaks Here October 27

Joseph P. Viviano, president of Hershey Chocolate U.S.A., is the next Great Leaders Lecture Series speaker at Salisbury State University. His presentation is Thursday, October 27, at 9:30 a.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium. Sponsored by The Franklin P. Perdue School of Business, admission is free and the public is invited. Hershey Chocolate U.S.A. is the largest division of Hershey Foods. Viviano has been its president since January, 1985.

He began his career in 1960 when he joined his family pasta business, Delmonico Foods, Inc., in Louisville, KY. Hershey Foods acquired Delmonico in 1966. Viviano was named vice president of Operations in 1968 and promoted to president in 1972.

Following the merger of Delmonico with San Giorgio, Inc. in 1975, he was apppointed president of the combined companies. In 1980, the pasta division was again enlarged with the acquisition of Skinner Macaroni Company and Viviano became president of the newly-formed San Giorgio-Skinner Company. In 1984, he was promoted to senior vice-president of Hershey Foods, responsible for several operating divisions plus Corporate Human Resources, Administration and Productivity.

A director of Hershey Foods, Viviano also is a member of the National Confectioners Association Board of Directors, a member of the Chesapeake Corporation Board of Directors and is a member of the National Board for the Children's Miracle Network Telethon.

He is chairman of the Hershey Medical Center Corporate Committee for the Children's Miracle Network Telethon, a member of the Philadelphia Chapter of the Young President's Organization, and the National Association of Manufacturers of America. He is a former chairman of the National Pasta Association.

A native of Louisville, KY, Viviano received his bachelors degree in business administration from Xavier University. He served six years of combined duty for the Army Reserve and the Air Force Reserve.

Two more Great Leader speakers follow Viviano this semester. On Monday, October 31, at 1:15 p.m. is John L. McElroy, Jr., chairman and CEO of Wheat First Securities, Inc., and on Monday, November 7, at 10 p.m. is Lowell W. Paxson, president of the Home Shopping Network. Their lectures also will be in Holloway Hall Auditorium.

SSU Expands Research Center for Delmarva History and Culture

An archive for Delmarva related historical documents at SSU is expanding this year with new space, major donations and increasing use.

The co-directors of the project, Dr. Ray Thompson and Mrs. Sylvia Bradley, have announced that the archive will be officially known as the Research Center for Delmarva History and Culture.

The Center has recently been given its biggest collection so far by Mrs. Frank L. Holloway of Pinehurst Avenue. Mrs. Holloway said she spent 37 years doing extensive genealogical research into the Holloway family.

Her research resulted in a 500-page book which included several branches of the family overlapping in the lower Shore, Sussex County, DE, and North Carolina.

The collection turned over to the Research Center at Salisbury State includes 5,000 items such as documents, maps, books, journals and notes which Mrs. Holloway collected in the course of her research.

Mrs. Holloway and her husband, a construction engineer, are about to return to Raleigh, NC, where they lived when they were married over 50 years ago. They have lived in Salisbury for over 30 years while his work took him around the world to over 30 countries, she said.

She said that the genealogical project began when she tried to fill out the family section in her oldest daughter's baby book. The state archives in Raleigh had asked for the documents, she said, but Salisbury seemed more appropriate.

The Holloway documents and other material which has been turned over to the Center are now stored in newly designated quarters in Holloway Hall.

The Center's new location is on the second floor directly in back of the North American Wildfowl Art Museum. It is a former counseling office which has been equipped with a climate control system, steel shelving and acid-free cardboard boxes for the preservation of old and fragile documents.

The collection is growing as fast as it can be catalogued.

With the help of volunteer students it will be open to researchers several hours every weekday. However, the documents must be perused on the spot. Nothing is allowed to leave the Center.

Joining the staff of the Center this year along with Thompson and Bradley is Donald M. Whaley, an instructor in social and cultural American history at the University. Whaley said that his students will both help out at the Center and use it in their course work.

His courses, he said, deal with the lives and experiences of ordinary people in various periods rather than governments and great events.

His students will use the records in the Research Center for insights into average households such as the size of families and their possessions, or how and why life expectancy, the average age for marriage or the number of slaves or free black men and women varied from region to region.

Thompson and Bradley started the Delmarva Archives in 1982 as part of an effort to develop a local history program.

The Salisbury State University Foundation has been the parent organization, helping to keep the venture going with grants and a committment to continuing sponsorship and support.

Salisbury State University Foundation support has enabled the Center to copy or put on microfilm the oldest records in the country at the courthouse in Eastville on the Virginia Eastern Shore and other records related to Delmarva in the Hall of Records in Annapolis and the Delaware State Archives in Dover.

Thompson said that some of the most used of the documents they have collected are the surveyor records of Ballard Miles turned over to the Center by his sons, George K. and William B. Miles, and the surveyor records of William Shockley which were given by Richard W. Cooper.

These records go back into the 19th Century and are still used in official title searches.

Another major gift was from Mr. and Mrs. T.J. Mumford who found a cache of 19th Century business records, ledgers and tax lists related to the western part of Wicomico County in a home they bought near Hebron.

John Jacob, a local historian, has turned over to the Center a collection of 19th century medical and business journals, election results and maps.

The Center has acquired some Old Home Prize essays from Eastern Shore high schools and taped interviews for the beginning of an oral history section. It has also been given a collection of about 300 photographs of schools and students in Wicomico County from the period between 1900 and 1920.

The directors hope to increase the collection in each of these categories.

Thompson and Bradley explained that the Center will treat the Maryland, Virginia and Delaware counties on this Peninsula as a cultural unit. The region has had a unified social, economic and religious history apart from the arbitrary state boundary lines, they said.

They do not insist on original documents, but will make copies of valuable records.

They also plan to create a records index so that researchers can use the Center to find out whether the records they seek are held in Wilmington, Dover, Richmond, Annapolis or any of 14 county seats or historical society libraries. The Center is open to the public, Monday-Thursday, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., beginning October 10, and Fridays from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. It is also open by appointment.

The Center can be contacted by phoning 543-6246 or 543-6245.

Employee Wellness Program

The Physical Education Department will continue the Employee Wellness Program beginning Monday, October 24. Aerobic exercise will be offered on Monday, Wednesday and Friday noon - 1 p.m. and Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday from 5 - 6 p.m. Nautilus and circuit training supervision will be available MWF, noon - 1 p.m. and M - R, 5 - 6 p.m. Nautilus User Certifications will be a part of the total program.

Pre-test examinations will be on Wednesday - Friday October 19 - 21 from 4 - 6 p.m. All interested participants may pick-up registration forms in the Physical Education main office beginning Friday, October 14 through Wednesday, October 19. All participants must have the forms completed before their pre-test exam.

If these times are inconvenient for you, we offer personalized exercise prescriptions that can be completed at your convenience.

For more information contact: Dr. Bob Cross, program administrator, at 543-6352 or DeAnn Koehler, activity director, at 543-6340, 543-6359, or 543-6337.

Maryland Mathematics Teachers Conference

The Maryland Council of Teachers of Mathematics Fall Conference entitled "Mathematics: Meeting the Challenge of the Future" will be held on Thursday and Friday, October 27 and 28. There will be more than 70 sessions on at Westminster High School. Several themes will be highlighted. One theme standards for school mathematics, will be addressed in the opening session on Thursday evening, October 27, and will also be discussed in sessions on Friday.

Several SSU faculty are participating in this year's program. Dr. Homer Austin, Mathematical Science Department, will be presenting a talk entitled "Advanced Topics for High School Mathematics Students." Cindy Langrall, Literacy Task Force, School of Education and Professional Studies, will be presenting a talk entitled "Cooperative Problem Solving." Dr. Don Cathcart, Mathematical Science Department, and Rosemary Heher, Literacy Task Force, School of Education and Professional Studies, will each be a presider at a session held on Friday. Dr. Geraldine Rossi, Literacy Task Force, School of Education and Professional Studies, is the fall conference program chair and the first vice-president of the Maryland Council of Teachers of Mathematics. Last year approximately 800 Maryland teachers of mathematics at the elementary, middle, high school, community college and university level attended this conference. Advanced registrations indicate that a number of teachers may be attending this year. For further information, contact Dr. Geraldine Rossi, Literacy Task Force, School of Education and Professional Studies, at 543-6285.

The keynote address will be given by Dr. Carole Greenes, Boston University, a nationally known mathematics educator. Her talk is entitled "Number Sense, Analytical Reading and Mathematical Problem Solving." Besides having been an editor for The Mathematics Teacher, she has published many articles and workbooks on problem solving and mathematics for the gifted student. Dr. Greenes is also a co-author for an elementary school mathematics textbook series published by McGraw-Hill Book Company.

Roberson at Boston Conference

Dr. Mildred H.B. Roberson, associate professor in the School of Nursing and Health Sciences, will present a paper on Monday, November 14, at the American Public Health Association annual meeting in Boston, MA.

The paper titled, "Patient Compliance: Emic Perspectives of Adults with Chronic Illness," is based on ethnographic research carried out by Roberson in South Carolina.

The research focused on the context of compliance with a therapeutic regimen from the perspective of adult rural Afro-Americans living with chronic health problems.

It's a Boy

Christopher James Morrison Parker is the newest addition to the David and Dee Parker family. Christopher was born Saturday, October 8, and weighed in at seven pounds, one ounce. Height is 20 inches. David Parker is chair of the computer science department. Congratulations!

Alumni Homecoming Slate

The Alumni Association presents a full slate of exciting events in conjunction with this year's Homecoming on Friday and Saturday, October 21-22.

The second Athletic Hall of Fame dinner and induction ceremonies kicks off the weekend on Friday at 6 p.m. in the Ruth Powell Dining Hall. Twelve greats from the SSU playing fields will be feted that evening. The public is invited. Tickets are $20 each and can be obtained by calling 543-6042.

An All-Alumni Get Together will follow at 9 p.m. in the Nanticoke Room of the University Center.

Saturday's smorgasbord of activities leads off with the annual meeting and the dedication of the student lounge at the University Center at 11 a.m. At the same time, sports fans can take in the Sea Gull soccer game against cross-state rival Frostburg State University at the soccer field.

Special reunion luncheons for the classes of '28, '38 and '43 will be held at 1 p.m. in the Nanticoke Room of the University Center.

The centerpiece of the day for many alumni is certainly the football game at 1:30 p.m. at Sea Gull Stadium, this against nationally ranked Montclair State University.

The Annual Tea to honor the reunion class of '28, '38 and '43 will be held at 2:30 p.m. in the Social Room of Holloway Hall.

At 4:30 p.m., everyone is invited to the postgame Gull Buster Bull Roast at the Nanticoke Room in the University Center. For $12 each, alumni and guests can enjoy all the food they can eat, music, a cash bar and special reunions for the classes of '48, '53, '58, '63, '73, '78 and '83.

That evening at 7, Grand Reunions for the aforementioned classes will be held at the Nanticoke Room.

Throughout the day an information booth will be staffed on the first floor of the University Center.

For more details on Salisbury State Homecoming plans for alumni, call Judy Pielemeier, executive director of the SSU Alumni Association, at 543-6042.

McElroy Great Leader

John L. McElroy, Jr., chairman and chief executive officer of Wheat First Securities, Inc., makes a Great Leaders Lecture Series presentation on Monday, October 31, at 1:15 p.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium. Sponsored by The Franklin P. Perdue School of Business, admission is free and open to the public.

After graduating from the University of Virginia, McElroy served in the United States Coast Guard for two years as a Lieutenant (j.g.) From 1955 to 1958 he worked as a securities analyst in the Investment Department of the State Planters Bank in Richmond.

McElroy joined Wheat, First Securities, Inc. in 1958 as a stockbroker. In 1963 he was promoted to manager of the Richmond office and named a partner in the firm. In 1965, when the partnership incorporated, he served as assistant manager of the Syndicate Department and founded the Institutional Department.

He continued his sales career until 1972, when he was named head of the Corporate Finance Department. In addition to serving as head of Corporate Finance, he had responsibility at various times for the Trading, Investment Advisory, Syndicate, Public Finance, Municipal Bonds, Insitutional Sales, Fixed Income, Mutual Funds and Research Departments.

McElroy was named a vice president and elected to the Wheat, First Securities, Inc., Board of Directors in 1966. He was promoted to senior vice president the following year. In 1984 he was promoted to vice chairman of Wheat and named to the newly formed five-member Management Committee.

In 1986, McElroy was elected chairman and chief-executive officer of Wheat, First Securities, Inc., and vice chairman and chief executive officer of WFS Financial Corp.

His board memberships include the Virginia Historical Society, the Virginia Industrial Development Committee and Atlantic Venture Partners.

The final Great Leaders presentation of the fall will be by Lowell W. Paxon, president and co-founder of the Home Shopping Network, Inc., on Monday, November 7, at 10 a.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium.

For more information on the Great Leader Series, contact the Perdue School at 543-6315.

Flag Football Tournament

The Department of Campus Recreation, in conjunction with the USF&G Sugar Bowl and the Marc Buoniconti Fund, will sponsor at two-week flag football tournament in November to raise funds to help cure paralysis.

The Flag Football Tournament to cure Paralysis will be held on campus from November 1 through the championship game in the single elimination tourney on November 15 at 3:30 p.m. in Sea Gull Stadium.

Members of all the participating teams will seek out sponsors to support the fight against paralysis in a campaign headed by Dave Brown, director of Campus Recreation at SSU.

Additionally, a community drive will be coordinated simultaneously by Gordon Gladden, president of Avery Hall Insurance

Mother Hicks: Is She A Witch?

A highly imaginative family drama about an orphan girl, a young deaf man who befriends her, and an old woman who may or may not be a witch, is the next production in this year's SSU Theatre season.

Mother Hicks, an award winning play by Suzan Zeder, opens Friday, November 11, for six performances in Holloway Hall Auditorium.

As a special attraction, Zeder, who is recognized both nationally and internationally as one of America's leading playwrights for young audiences, will be artist-in-residence at Salisbury State November 18 and 19. On Saturday, November 19, from 10 a.m. to noon in Caruthers Hall Auditorium, she will conduct a workshop on creative writing and theatre in the classroom. Area residents are invited. Refreshments will be served and admission is free. For further information contact Dr. Andrew Hepburn in the SSU Communication Arts Department at 543-6233.

According to Zeder, the idea for Mother Hicks first presented itself after "I read a collection of oral lore from the W.P.A. Federal Writers Project, written during the Depression. I was struck by the number of witch tales which provided supernatural explanations for natural disasters, and by the need of communities to create witches as scapegoats in troubled times and landscapes."

Set in 1935 in Ware, a small town in southern Illinois, the play takes its title from an old woman who lives on the community's outskirts. Resident's fears that Mother Hicks is a witch add both humor and mystery to the story. "Is she or isn't she? Come see," said Robert Smith, director of the SSU production.

Zeder uses a novel plot device to tell the play's story. Its narrator is a young deaf man who "talks" in sign language and mime, aided by a "chorus" who verbally express his words. "I know the story is true," he tells the audience, "because I heard every word with my eyes (sic)."

The central character is an energetic teenage girl trying to discover how she fits into her world. The script portrays her struggles and frustrations "in a very, very funny way," said Smith. "The humor grows out of the common things that we all know-like people who spread gossip, imaginary illnesses and preferring fantasies to ordinary facts."

Rooted in reality, Mother Hicks is nevertheless a high spirited, highly imaginative piece of theatre. "I think it has an important message for children," Smith added, "to see people as individuals with their own gifts. That's what attracted me to it."

Rehearsals have been a challenge for the students. Cy Teter who plays "Tuc," the young deaf man, has had to learn sign language, "not only a new vocabulary, but the psychology and behavior of living in a silent world," said Smith. To help him understand what it's like to be deaf, Teter has been attending social functions and church with deaf area residents. Belinda Cathey, an SSU student who teaches sign, also has been working intensely with him.

Playing the title role is Grovena Young. The part of "Girl," the imaginative orphan, is performed by Peggy Raborn.

Setting and lights are by Gerry Patt. Costumes are by T. Paul Pfeiffer. Performances are Friday and Saturday, November 11 and 12, through Saturday, November 17-19, at 8 p.m., with a matinee on Sunday, November 13, at 2 p.m. For further information call the box office at 543-6228 or contact the Department of Communication Arts.

Zeder's residency is made possible, in part, by grants from the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council and the Salisbury State Foundation.

Wright Next Riall Lecturer

One of the nation's leading educators who worked closely with William Bennett during the latter's stormy tenure as U.S. Secretary of Education is the next E. Pauline Riall lecturer.

Linus Wright, who is U.S. under secretary of Education, speaks on Friday, October 28, at 8 p.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium. A reception follows. Admission is free and the public is invited.

The under secretary advises the secretary of Education on all major program and management issues. As the agency's second highest official, he oversees the daily operations of the Education Department's 4,500 employees.

Since his appointment a year ago, Wright has worked with Bennett, who recently resigned, and with Bennett's successor, Lauro F. Cavazos.

Wright was named by Executive Educator magazine as one of the nation's "Top 100 Educators." He has served on the 32-member Urban Superintendents Network of the U.S. Department of Education and as a member of the Governor's Advisory Committe on Education in his native Texas.

Salisbury State University is seeking two graduate assistant athletic trainers. Desirable applicants should possess or be eligible for N.A.T.A. Certification, CPR Instructor Certification and Red Cross Certification. Salary or stipends will be commensurate with qualifications.

The Department of Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics services the University through instruction, recreation and athletics programs encompassing 18 varisty sports. Salisbury State University is a member of the NCAA-Division III, has an excellent internship program and is committed to academic integrity and personal growth among student-athletes. The campus recreation program services over 1500 students annually.

To apply, please send a letter of application, resume and three letters of recommendation to: Athletic Training Search, Department of Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics, Salisbury State University, Salisbury, MD 21801.

The application deadline is December 15. In person inteviews are optional, but desirable. Salisbury State University is an affirmative action, equal opportunity employer. Qualified women, minorities and the disabled are encouraged to apply.

The 1989 Honors Convocation will have as its speaker a graduate of Salisbury State. The Committee is seeking nominations of prospective alumni speakers who could serve as appropriate role models and who will be selected based upon the following criteria: must have graduated at least five or more years ago from Salisbury State University in an approved program of study; must currently be successfully employed in a career or business which reflects the standards and goals of Salisbury State; should be active in community activities; should have been active in campus events as a student at Salisbury State; should possess skills in public speaking; and should be an advocate and supporter of academic excellence and student involvement.

Letters of nominations may be sent to Honors Convocation Committee, c/o Dr. Carolyn Bowden or to the Dean of Students Office. Deadline for nominations is November 15.

Business Database in Library

ABI/INFORM, an on-line business database on compact disc (CD-ROM), has recently been installed in Blackwell Library and will be on demonstration loan for 60 days. It is located in the reference room.

With ABI/INFORM students/faculty can conduct their own interactive searches from a database indexing over 800 business and management publications. A printed abstract of each article cited is available for each user.

Faculty and students are encouraged to visit the library to conduct their searches.

Personal Counseling

Personal counseling is provided for students by the Center for Personal and Professional Development (CPPD), located in the University Center, room 263. The CPPD is open from 8:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m., Monday - Friday. Appointments may be made in person or by calling 543-6070. Walk-in hours are 1 - 3 p.m., Monday - Thursday. All counseling is confidential and free of charge to University students.

University Forum Meeting

The Forum's Executive Committee has established the calendar of Forum meetings for the coming academic year. As in the past, all meetings will be on Tuesdays at 3:30 p.m. in DSH 149. The dates are as follows: Nov. 1 and Dec. 6. Spring Semester: Feb. 14, Mar. 7, Apr. 4 and May 2.

The agenda for each of these meetings will be compiled by the Executive Committee eight days beforehand. If you wish to have an item placed on an agenda, you can do so by submitting the item in writing by the morning of the following Mondays: Oct. 24, Nov. 28, Feb. 6, Feb. 27, Mar. 27, Apr. 24.

Any member of the Executive Committee will be happy to receive your agenda items. They are Tom Jones, Forum chair (Biology), Dave Parker (Computer Science), John Tyvoll (Chemistry and Physics), Nayland Page (History), and Jim Thrash (Library).

Coaching Position

The SSU Athletic Department is interested in hiring a part-time assistant women's tennis coach. All interested persons should apply to athletic director, Dr. William E. Lide, Athletic Department, SSU, 543-6339, by November 10. SSU is an affirmative action/equal opportunity employer. Qualified women, minorities and disabled persons are encouraged to apply.

Business Opening

The Franklin P. Perdue School of Business, is seeking an administrative assistant. This is a part-time contractual position, with no State benefits, entailing an average of 20 hours per week. Holding a degree in Business is a plus, but not a necessity. The position involves interfacing with the business community, alumni and students, while coordinating program marketing, in-house publications and other activities. Some regional travel is required. Computer literacy is desired. Send resume to Dean, Perdue School, Salisbury State University, Salisbury, MD 21801, on or before October 31. Salisbury State University is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Department of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or whereever you may reside. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep your first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away from alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit area or a place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you need an escort to or from your car, call the Department of Public Safety, 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Department of Public Safety, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

SSU Foundation Donates VCR For United Charities Campaign

Pledge cards were included with full-time faculty/staff payroll checks for a voluntary contribution to the 1988 United Charities Campaign on Wednesday, October 26.

This year as an incentive for you to support this important campaign, the SSU Foundation has donated a Video Casseette Recorder (VCR) which you will be eligible to win if you give at least $1.50 per pay period. If you wish to see the VCR, it is located in HH, room 202. The campaign ends Friday, November 11. The drawing for the VCR takes place on Monday, November 14; the winner will be contacted immediately.

While considering whether or not you wish to contribute, please bear in mind that the agencies which receive funds from United Way Charities depend on your generous support to continue to function. Emergency assistance, vocational training for the handicapped and disabled, counseling and educational programs are just a few of the services offered.

Perhaps that which you give today may some day come back to you. Be as generous as you can be.

Campaign coordinators at the University this year are Debbie Merryweather (543-6050) and Gains Hawkins (543-6030). Call one of them if you have any questions.

Health Insurance Open Enrollment Meeting

Friday, November 4, University Center, Nanticoke Room. Meeting times are 8, 9, 10, 11 a.m., noon and 1 p.m. Representatives from Blue Cross/Blue Shield and the Delmarva Health Plan will be available to answer questions. You are urged to attend one of the sessions and learn more about your particular plan and how it has or has not changed for the coming year.

Hershey Chocolate President Speaks Here October 27

Joseph P. Viviano, president of Hershey Chocolate U.S.A., is the next Great Leaders Lecture Series speaker at Salisbury State University. His presentation is Thursday, October 27, at 9:30 a.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium. Sponsored by The Franklin P. Perdue School of Business, admission is free and the public is invited. Hershey Chocolate U.S.A. is the largest division of Hershey Foods. Viviano has been its president since January, 1985.

He began his career in 1960 when he joined his family pasta business, Delmonico Foods, Inc., in Louisville, KY. Hershey Foods acquired Delmonico in 1966. Viviano was named vice president of Operations in 1968 and promoted to president in 1972.

Following the merger of Delmonico with San Giorgio, Inc. in 1975, he was apppointed president of the combined companies. In 1980, the pasta division was again enlarged with the acquisition of Skinner Macaroni Company and Viviano became president of the newly-formed San Giorgio-Skinner Company. In 1984, he was promoted to senior vice-president of Hershey Foods, responsible for several operating divisions plus Corporate Human Resources, Administration and Productivity.

A director of Hershey Foods, Viviano also is a member of the National Confectioners Association Board of Directors, a member of the Chesapeake Corporation Board of Directors and is a member of the National Board for the Children's Miracle Network Telethon.

He is chairman of the Hershey Medical Center Corporate Committee for the Children's Miracle Network Telethon, a member of the Philadelphia Chapter of the Young President's Organization, and the National Association of Manufacturers of America. He is a former chairman of the National Pasta Association.

A native of Louisville, KY, Viviano received his bachelors degree in business administration from Xavier University. He served six years of combined duty for the Army Reserve and the Air Force Reserve.

Two more Great Leader speakers follow Viviano this semester. On Monday, October 31, at 1:15 p.m. is John L. McElroy, Jr., chairman and CEO of Wheat First Securities, Inc., and on Monday, November 7, at 10 p.m. is Lowell W. Paxson, president of the Home Shopping Network. Their lectures also will be in Holloway Hall Auditorium.

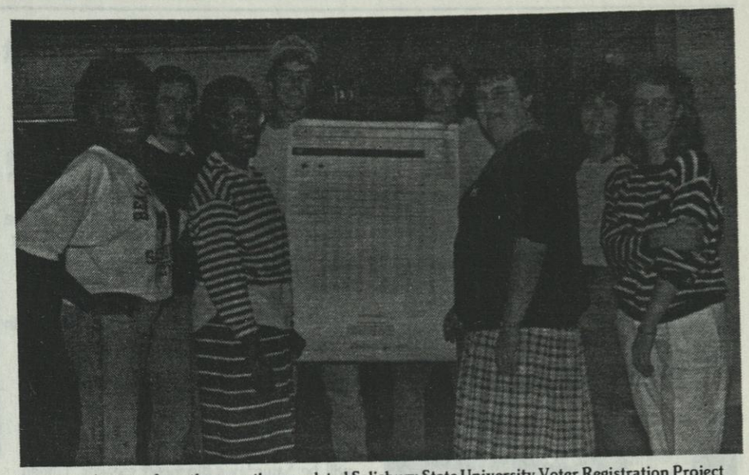
Aid For Elderly

The Salisbury State Program Board is sponsoring a campus fund-raising drive in support of MAC Incorporated, Area Agency on Aging, to benefit frail, elderly persons residing on the Lower Shore.

For a donation of $5 you may have a light placed on a 30-foot "Love Light Tree" in front of the Wicomico Civic Center in honor or in memory of someone special to you. A card will be sent to announce your gift and the honored name will be placed in a book displayed in the Wicomico Visitors Bureau lobby. The tree will be on display December 9 through the end of January.

Proceeds from this project will fund MAC's Home Aid Program which provides in-home supportive care to frail, older persons in Wicomico, Somerset and Worcester Counties.

For more information on how to participate, call the Salisbury State Program Board at 543-6197 or the Office of the Dean of Students at 543-6080.



Student volunteers from the recently completed Salisbury State University Voter Registration Project 1988 are pictured with Doris G. Bradley, supervisor of elections, Wicomico County, and Terry Clay, career development specialist at Salisbury State and project coordinator.

Students representing several on-campus organizations and departments provided over 100 hours of service to this project which yielded a total of 364 voters registered and absentee ballot requests. Pictured are: Lori Hayman, Mardela Springs, MD, resident assistant representative; George Rakis, Silver Spring, MD, Students for Dukakis; Rusty Clark, Cookville, MD, Students for Dukakis; Doris Bradley; Patricia Brookens, Salisbury, MD, Young Republicans; and Barbara Potts, Hempstead, MD, Voter Registration Committee '88.

Poetry Reading

Jon Davis, visiting professor of English, reads from his own works on Wednesday, October 26, at 8 p.m. in the Holloway Hall Social Room.

Davis's first book of poetry, Dangerous Amusements, from which he'll read, won the Peter I.B. Lavan Award, given by the Academy of American Poets.

While at the University of Montana, where he earned an M.F.A., he also won the Academy of American Poets Award and edited CutBank. His chapbook, West of New England, received the Merriam Frontier Award, and he is winner of a 1987 General Electric Award for Younger Writers. He is also recipient of fellowships from the Fine Arts Work Center in Provincetown, MA, and the National Endowment for the Arts.

His poetry has been published in The Georgia Review, Poetry and Missouri Review, as well as in Canada and England.

Said poet and critic Alicia Ostricker about Davis, "Here's an exciting young poet...who reminds me of the young Robert Penn Warren. In Dangerous Amusements, Jon Davis's masterly voice goes from natural history, philosophy and metaphysics on down to the small-town lives and locutions of hot rodders and truckers, street preachers and crazy veterans, which he renders in pathos and truth."

The reading is approximately an hour. Admission is free and the public is invited.

Professional Attire Seminars

During November, the Center for Personal and Professional Development (CPPD) is sponsoring two seminars on professional attire.

Topics to be addressed during each seminar include appropriate attire for a job interview, the principles of "dress for success" and achieving a polished look on a budget.

Don Phillips of Phillips Men's Shop will conduct the seminar for men on Wednesday, November 9, from 4-5 p.m., in Nanticoke Room A of the University Center.

The seminar for women, to be conducted by John Hess, Jr., of Hess Apparel, is scheduled for Thursday, November 17, from 4-5 p.m., in the Pocomoke Room of the University Center. Students interested in either seminar may reserve a place by stopping by the CPPD or calling 543-6070.

Throughout the year, the CPPD will sponsor workshops and presentations related to career planning and placement, as well as issues of personal development and academic progress. The CPPD also provides personal and career counseling for individual students.

Located on the second floor of the University Center, the CPPD is open from 8:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m., Monday-Friday. Appointments may be made in person or by calling 543-6070.

Man and Nature

There will be a meeting of the Man & Nature group at 8:15 p.m. on Monday, October 31, in the Choptank Room of the University Center.

Interested faculty, staff and students are invited to attend.

From the start of civilization there has been a shift in the perception of how human beings relate to nature. The move has been from a cyclical, in-step-with-nature, systems view to a linear, anthropocentric, man-in-control view.

The Man & Nature group has a goal of reemphasizing this traditional perception. An immediate goal is to organize a spring 1989 program of speakers and panels. Long-range goals call for infusing this perception into the curriculum.

For more information, call Ben Fusaro, 543-6470 (6471 for a message).

Coastal Hospice

In recognition of Hospice Month, Coastal Hospice will offer a presentation to any interested individuals. The talk will center on hospice services and the philosophy behind such.

The presentation, sponsored by Psi Chi and the Psychology Club, will be held in Devilbiss 110 on Tuesday, November 15, at 3 p.m.

Lutz Lectures

Leslie E. Lutz, Jr., director of Horticulture, recently gave a one-day workshop on "Basic Cultural Techniques for Perennials" at the Laurel Ridge Center in Vienna, VA.

On Friday, October 21, Lutz gave an hour-long presentation on "Chrysanthemum Bonsai" through the U.S. Botanic Garden Public Programs Office in Washington, D.C. Wiring and pruning techniques were demonstrated followed by a series of slides to show the finished plants.

Ward Exhibit

A display of contemporary wood sculptures and Ward Brothers carvings will be exhibited by the Ward Foundation at the 18th annual Waterfowl Festival in Easton on November 11-13.

The Ward Foundation is one of several museums participating in a "Museum Showcase" which will be held during the festival weekend at St. Mark's United Methodist Church.

Wolinski and Townsend At Reading Association

Two Salisbury State University faculty members in the School of Education will have prominent roles at the 16th annual Diamond State Reading Association to be held at the Rehobeth Beach (DE) Convention Hall on November 4-5.

Dr. John T. Wolinski, assistant dean in the School of Education, will present the November 5 keynote address titled "Thinking About Basal Reading Instruction: Some Concerns and Suggestions."

Dr. Barbara Townsend, associate professor in the School of Education, will conduct a Saturday morning workshop session on "Puppets-Stories to Use and Methods of Construction."

Dr. James Flood of San Francisco State University will be Friday's keynote speaker and Dr. William Teale, University of San Antonio, will be Saturday's luncheon speaker. Fifteen workshop sessions and exhibits by leading publishers will also be available.

The public is invited. For any further information, contact Wolinski at 543-6279.

Wolinski at Institute

Dr. John T. Wolinski, assistant dean in the School of Education, addressed over 75 educators from around the state at the 24th annual Meeting of the Maryland Reading Institute held in Ocean City on October 13-14.

Wolinski, at the request of Dr. Robert M. Wilson, director of the Reading Center and MRI coordinator, discussed "concerns/suggestions about basal reading instruction."

Frank Presentation

Dr. R.G. "Ron" Frank will address the Beta Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma on Saturday, November 12, at Peaky's Restaurant in Princess Anne. Frank's presentation will center around the theme of "Future Trends and Learning Environment in the 21st Century."

Frank is associate professor of Educational Administration and has served as a classroom teacher, school administrator and university professor.

Erskine and Welsh Publish Essays

Professor Thomas L. Erskine and Associate Professor James M. Welsh of the English Department have both published essays appearing in Magill's Cinema Annual 1988: A Survey of the Films of 1987, edited by Frank N. Magill and recently published by the Salem Press of Pasadena, CA.

Erskine covered Bernardo Bertolucci's The Last Emperor, the film that swept this year's Academy Awards, winning nine Oscars, in all categories for which it was nominated. The film tells the story of Pu Yi, who lived through the transition to the People's Republic of China.

Welsh covered three films, The Witches of Eastwick, a blockbuster adaptation of John Updike's novel, starring Jack Nicholson, Cher, Susan Sarandon and Michelle Pfeiffer, which was not very faithful to its source, Suspect, an underrated Cher film directed by Peter Yates and also starring Dennis Quaid, and InnerSpace, a fantasy vehicle directed by Joe Dante and starring Quaid and Martin Short. InnerSpace won an Academy Award for special visual effects.

Erskine and Welsh both teach cinema courses at Salisbury State and are the founding editors of Literature/Film Quarterly, an academic publication now in its 16th year. The work was also represented in earlier Cinema Annuals for 1987 and 1986.

Welsh reviews films weekly for "Delmarva Artscape," a weekly radio program heard on WSCL (89.5 FM) at 8:30 a.m. on Saturdays and Sundays.

Washington Theatre Trip

On Thursday, November 10, there will be a theater trip to Washington D.C.'s Folger Theatre to attend Shakespeare's Anthony and Cleopatra.

Michael Kahn's rendering of Shakespeare's ultimate statement of mature love offers Francelle Steward Dorn as an overwhelming seductress of the Nile, who, according to David Richards of The Washington Post, quite exlipses Kenneth Haigh's Anthony. Is this as it should be? As Enobarbus says of Cleopatra, "Age cannot wither her, nor custom stale/Her infinite variety."

"Jack Richards is also powerful as Enobarbus," said Dr. William Horne of the SSU English Department, "the trustworthy friend who betrays Anthony. The play spits in the face of Aristotelian unities as Shakespeare's scene embraces much of the Roman empire. By all accounts Kahn's stagecraft meets this epic challenge."

Sign up at the University Center information desk beginning Wednesday, October 26, for full-time students ($10 each) and on Monday, October 31, for part-time students, faculty, staff, alumni and guests ($12 each). Ticket price includes bus transportation; the bus will depart from the south entrance of the University Center promptly at 2:30 p.m. and will return from Washington to the same location at about 1 a.m.

University Center theater trips are co-sponsored by the English and Communication Arts Departments.

Gull Stickers Hot

It is becoming increasingly apparent that the 1988 version of Dawn Chamberlin's field hockey team is not ready to take a backseat to any Gull teams of the past five years which have accumulated a 72-22-4 record, including trips to the Final Four during each of the last two seasons, winning it all in 1986.

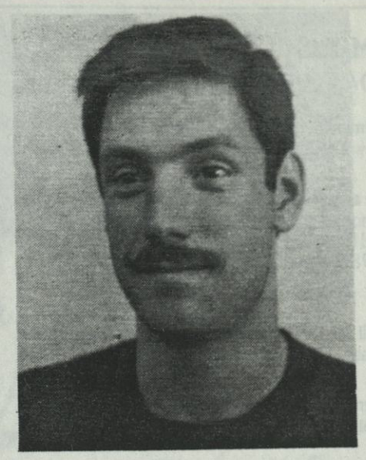
All that the Gulls have done this year is go 10-2-3 during the regular season, with one game left in the schedule before Eastern State Athletic Conference playoffs and hopefully a trip to the national party; this past weekend they knocked off third-ranked Kutztown 2-1 in double overtime, with senior Jill Stewart getting the game winner. They have outscored their opponents 31-10 with senior goalie Tracey Short racking up eight shutouts, and allowing one goal on five other occasions.

The two Gull losses were to two ranked Pennsylvania Conference teams on the same weekend, by one goal each, 1-0 to first-ranked Bloomsburg, the defending National Champion, and 3-2, in double overtime, with 14 seconds left, to seventh-rated East Stroudsburg.

Yet, that was before the big win at Kutztown. "We played a full 90 minutes," said Chamberlin. "We played how we have to to win and the way I knew we could." And, Short, Stewart and company couldn't have picked a better time.

Aside from the final regular season tilt on Wednesday against Mary Washington, the Gull field hockey squad will be playing at Eastern in the Conference Championships this weekend. Also on the schedule during the weekend coming up is the cross country team at the Mason Dixon Championships, the soccer team hosting Catholic at 2:00 p.m. on Saturday, and the 18-4, through Saturday, volleyball team hosting the ESAC Championships on Sunday, in Maggs, with the semifinals beginning at 9:30 in the morning, and the championships set for 12:30 p.m.

Katherine Prucnal



George Rakis

Students Get First-Hand Look at Presidential Campaigns

Two SSU students have a vested interest in the recently televised presidential and vice presidential debates. They both completed internships in Washington, D.C. for political science credit.

Katherine Ann Prucnal, a senior majoring in political science, found this an exciting time to be in Washington. She worked for the Democratic National Committee Research Department on the coordination of 6,000 house party fund raisings which took place during Dukakis's acceptance speech in Atlanta, and as a result, helped raise over $1.5 million for the presidential and national elections.

George Rakis, also a senior majoring in political science, got a good look at how a presidential campaign works–something few people have a chance to do. He feels that "any student, not just political science majors but even history, communication arts and journalism majors, should find out what politics are all about. The best way to do this is by going to Washington, D.C., and finding out first hand what is going on."

Dr. H. Harry Basehart, professor of political science at SSU and internship coordinator, feels that the internships are invaluable to students.

"It gives them work experience in the real political world, not just a textbook view, and it acquaints them with the kinds of jobs within their major they can get after graduation."

Prucnal's internship turned out so well, they ended up hiring her for the rest of the summer. Her other duties included answering donor inquiries, phone calling and letter writing to potential and actual contributors, receipts processing and data entry. A member of the Salisbury State Chapter of Students for Dukakis and coordinator of the campus voter registration drive for the presidential election, she also supervised the Committee's direct mail department during the convention.

Rakis, also a member of Salisbury Students for Dukakis, was placed in Governor Dukakis's Campaign Field Office in Washington where he did congressional relations research and constituency work. Working for Campaign '88, he helped coordinate the efforts of the Democratic ticket by doing investigative work on how issues are developed, and he served as a liaison between Dukakis's Boston headquarters and the Washington research institutions, congressmen and lobbyists. He also interned with the Committee Issues Department doing opposition research–which is basically finding out what is in the Republican platform.

Working with students from Ivy League schools such as Harvard, he was the only student from a small university or college in his internship program. He is quick to add that he had no problem keeping up with them.

Preparation for the summer included a one week training session called Project 500 for all people going into campaign field offices. Held at Georgetown University, students learned how to set up grass roots field offices, including how to push the candidate, learning what organizations to contact and how to get financial backing.

Basehart is proud of the dedication his students have shown. "It was nice to see two students who were committed enough to politics to undertake summer internships in Washington when they could be out working or having fun at the beach."

Risk Management Task Force Report

A campus lighting survey was conducted October 5 resulting in 14 locations being earmarked for additional lighting. All new lighting is scheduled to be installed by October 27.

Bathroom door locks have been ordered and are expected to arrive in December. Installation will begin in Chester and Choptank Halls.

The Department of Public Safety has initiated a weekly listing of reported crimes on campus titled "Crime Beat." This report will be distributed to Residence Life staff with additional copies available at the University Center information desk for commuting students. The listing will be available beginning October 31.

Access control in residence halls is currently under review by the Task Force. Proposals being considered include staffing entrances during certain hours to permit access to only bona fide visitors and installation of a phone system to facilitate communication. The Task Force is scheduled to submit recommendations by Thanksgiving.

Questions, concerns or suggestions related to safety on campus? Call the Office of the Dean of Students at 543-6080.

Nominations Sought

The Honors Convocation Committee is requesting nominations for three awards.

Faculty, staff or student organizations may nominate students to receive awards, or a student may propose his own name for consideration. In either case, students must contact one faculty/staff member who will agree to write a letter of recommendation on the student's behalf. Please be sure to nominate early so there is ample time to contact the students and have them complete an application packet prior to the deadline of November 11. Names of students being nominated are due in Dean of Students Office no later than November 2.

Criteria for Nominations - Achievement Key Award

The Achievement Key is awarded by the University Honors Convocation Committee of the faculty on the basis of outstanding scholarship and outstanding campus service. Students become eligible for nominations upon receiving a 3.25 academic average for each of two preceding semesters. Full-time undergraduate students may receive this award up to four times. Although students may be nominated for both Campus Life and Achievement Key awards, any recipient of the Achievement Key may not simultaneously receive the Campus Life award. Graduate students are not eligible to receive this award.

Campus Life Award

The Campus Life award is granted by the University Honors Convocation Committee of the faculty on the basis of outstanding contributions to campus life. Students are eligible for nomination on the basis of a 2.0 cumulative average. The award is limited to not more than one percent of the full-time student body. Graduate students are not elibible to receive this award. Although students may be nominated for both Campus Life and Achievement Key awards, any recipient of the Achievement Key may not simultaneously receive the Campus Life Award.

Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges

Nominees for this award are evaluated on the basis of scholarship, participation and leadership in academic and extracurricular activities, service to the university and potential for future achievement. Eligibility for the award is limited to full-time juniors, seniors and graduate students with a 3.0 overall grade point average. Students are not eligible to receive this award more than once.

Detach and return this form to: Honors Convocation Committee, Dean of Students Office, University Center, Room 212. Please type or print in black ink. Feel free to duplicate this form if necessary.

Currently enrolled students and alumni may make appointments immediately. All recruiting require sign-ups unless noted. Contact Placement Services, University Center, room 263, or call 543-6075.

WORKSHOPS

SENIOR PLACEMENT AND INTERVIEW BRIEFING - This one-session workshop is designed to inform students and alumni of the career services, options and assistance available to them and is required of those who register with the Career Planning Office. Introductory level information includes resumes, graduate school, governmental employment and job campaign techniques. Intermediate level training is provided in interview skills. Students and alumni who wish to participate in on-campus interviews must complete this training.

Wednesday, November 2, from 5 - 6 p.m.; Thursday, November 17, from noon - 1 p.m.
Tuesday, December 6, from 11 a.m. - noon

RESUME WRITING - This one-session workshop is designed to help develop one of the job campaign's basic tools. A discussion of such topics as various formats, uses of resume, printing, cover letters and sections of the resume is featured. Handouts are provided. Bring your draft resume if you have one.

Wednesday, November 16, from 4:30 - 6 p.m.; Monday, December 5, from 10 - 11:30 a.m.

INTERVIEW SKILLS - A must for every senior. This one-session workshop is designed to assist in preparing for the professional job interview. A review of such topics as non-verbal behavior, dress, questions, interview phases and preparation is featured. Handouts are provided. It is suggested that you have already attended a senior interview and placement briefing.

Monday, October 31, from 10 - 11:30 a.m.; Tuesday, November 8, from 11 a.m. - 12:30 p.m.
Wednesday, November 30, from 3:30 - 5 p.m.

"PROFESSIONAL ATTIRE" SEMINARS - This seminar focuses on the basic principles of "dressing for success." Learn what look works in an interview or professional meeting and how to achieve this winning look on a budget.

All workshops require sign-ups.

Men's Seminar

Wednesday, November 9, 4 - 5 p.m. Presented by Don Phillips of Phillips Men's Shop

Women's Seminar

Thursday, November 17, 4 - 5 p.m. Presented by John Hess, Jr. of Hess Apparel

All workshops require sign-ups. Contact Placement Services Office, University Center, room 263, or call 543-6075.

Mary Elizabeth Gibson

Political Science Intern Looks at Bay Cleanup

Mary Elizabeth Gibson recently participated in the Governor's Internship Program for political science credit. The SSU student worked this summer for the Department of Housing and Community Development on its Community Development Block Grant Program, which oversees the distribution of low and moderate income housing and community revitalization. Her range of responsibilities went from taking part in a study proposing a solution for cleaning up the Chesapeake Bay to the Maryland State Cabinet, to serving as a liaison between clients and the Eastern Shore towns which provide the housing.

According to Dr. H. Harry Basehart, professor of political science and internship coordinator at SSU, "Mary had a firsthand look at the administrative side of executing community policy. We tend to neglect how laws are implemented. She got to see the nuts and bolts aspects which are not often though about."

One of the 19 students selected statewide to participate in the program which was run out of the University of Maryland Baltimore County, Gibson also took part in a study which proposed a solution for cleaning up the Chesapeake Bay to the Maryland State Cabinet.

A junior majoring in political science, Gibson is a dean's list student with a 3.75 grade point average. President of the SSU Young Democrats Club, she is a member of the Phi Eta Sigma national freshman honor society.

Outdoor Club Meeting

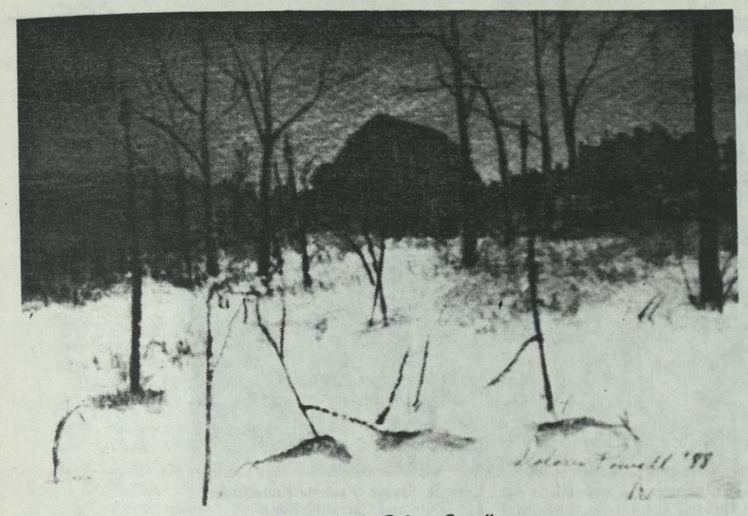
The Outdoor Club will hold its weekly meetings in Nanticoke A of the University Center on Monday, October 31 at 6 p.m.

The meeting includes updates on November 18-20 horse packing trip, November 4-6 rockclimbing trip and the November 12-14 ropes course. The meeting will also include a presentation on rockclimbing.

All are welcome to attend.

Psi Chi - Psyc Club

There will be a Psi Chi- Psyc Club meeting on Monday, October 31. All of those interested are invited to attend the meeting at 2:30 p.m. in the University Center's Choptank Room.



Watercolor by Dolores Powell

Fourth Annual Watercolor Exhibit

The Wicomico County Free Library sponsors the fourth annual watercolor exhibit by Dolores Powell.

"As in the past, these paintings brighten the entrance of the library for the month of November. Powell's love of the Eastern Shore is evident by the theme of many of these paintings.

She moved here from Pennsylvania 15 years ago, attended Salisbury State and many workshops taught by professional artists. Powell works full time in the Department of Communciation Arts and proudly acclaims that painting is her hobby. The encouragement and praise of family and friends has been to a large degree the force behind her continuing pursuit of this hobby. She has exhibited in art shows and received awards for her wildlife paintings. Her first works sold immediately.

In her leisure, Powell is at her art table, on location at the beach, the bay or in awe of the waterfowl, skipjacks and landscapes of the Eastern Shore. She relies on photos she and her husband have taken but only to capture shapes and subject characterization. Based on field observations, she often paints from photos.

Although the settings of her paints are usually the Eastern Shore, she portrays lighthouses of the eastern United States, and farms, barns and houses of Pennsylvania, the northeast and Canada. Since her favorite media is watercolor, it demands by its very nature, a quick response to the scene, capturing the mood, the play of light and shadows. Light in a painting transforms the ordinary into an exceptional painting.

Some of her most rewarding experiences have been the wonderful expressions on the faces of viewers when they see a painting that reminds them of their childhood or a happy event. Children have expressed such things as "These look real!" or "You have painted all of these!"

When asked about her art, Powell responded, "I can now understand and appreciate other artists' works; before I studied art, paintings were just another pretty picture. Now my family and I enjoy art exhibits and museums together."

Her family is the most important factor in her life. Her husband does all her framing and makes custom frames for most of her paintings. Her youngest daughter was attending art school when she began art classes in 1980; shortly thereafter another daughter began painting in her leisure time; on vacation they can be found at the beach or near a crab shack with paint, paper and easel.

On Saturday, November 12, the Wicomico Library will feature a "Meet the Artist" afternoon from 1 - 5 p.m. Powell will be in the lobby and will demonstrate her painting.

The exhibit can be seen at the Wicomico County Free Library from October 29 - December 2. The hours are Monday-Wednesday, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m., Thursday-Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sunday 1 to 5 p.m. Telephone 749-5171 or Powell at 543-6229 Works in the exhibit are for sale.

Education, Math Faculty Attend Teachers Conference

The Maryland Council of Teachers of Mathematics Fall Conference, titled "Mathematics: Meeting the Challenge of the Future," will be held on Thursday and Friday, October 27 and 28.

Several SSU faculty are participating in this year's program. Dr. Homer Austin, Mathematical Science Department, will present a talk titled "Advanced Topics for High School Mathematics Students." Cindy Langrall, Literacy Task Force, School of Education and Professional Studies, will present a talk titled "Cooperative Problem Solving."

Dr. Don Cathcart, Mathematical Science Department, and Rosemary Heher, Literacy Task Force, School of Education and Professional Studies, will each be a presider at a session held on Friday. Dr. Geraldine Rossi, Literacy Task Force, School of Education and Professional Studies, is the fall conference program chair and the first vice-president of Maryland Council of Teachers of Mathematics.

Last year some 800 Maryland teachers of mathematics at the elementary, middle, high school, community college and university level attended the conference.

For further information, contact Rossi at 543-6285.

Memorial Medical Center, one of the nation's outstanding medical schools and research facilities.

This involvement led Nick to start the Marc Buoniconti Fund to help with the funding so critically needed by the Miami Project. The same courage and will-to-win that made both Nick and Marc stars on the football field has now been focused on the fight to beat paralysis.

And, although accidents like Marc's in collegiate sports are rare, there are still more than a half million people all across America who suffer from spinal cord paralysis. And like Marc, unless a cure is found, they are all doomed to spend the rest of their lives in wheelchairs — prisoners of paralysis.

But, through advanced neuroscientific research, a cure may be found soon. The ultimate goal of the Miami Project is to find ways to repair, replace, or reconstruct damaged spinal nerves and give the gift of movement back to all those people who are trapped in their wheelchairs.

However, there is a catch. Nothing worthwhile is ever easy or cheap.

The USF&G Sugar Bowl provides money directly through the Marc Buoniconti Fund, but corporate coffers are not large enough to do the entire job.

Thus, the SSU Flag Football Tournament to Cure Paralysis, like many others at colleges and universities nationwide, will attempt to raise the money to support that research on local levels.

To find out more about the tournament, call Dave Brown at (301) 543-6342.

Computer Science Interns Placed Throughout State

Where can Maryland businesses find a valuable resource to help them with their computer related needs? Six students recently completed internships for computer science credit at SSU. Under the supervision of Thomas Horseman, professor of computer science and coordinator of the computer internship program, students were placed in various companies and offices throughout the state.

"I'm always amazed by the breadth of what the students can do. They're much better students after internships," said Horseman.

"For example, when the Electronic Data Systems (EDS) worldwide consulting group recruits, the students that have had internships," according to Horseman, "are the ones who are recruited for top notch jobs. They are the ones who are interviewed because their confidence is increased and their job expectations are raised."

Ronald Dubois, who resides in Salisbury with his wife, Marie Catherine Dubois-Fortunato, interned with Dr. K. Peter Lade, professor of sociology and anthropology at Salisbury State. He worked on a Map Image Processing System for Maryland's tidal wetlands which converts satellite and aerial images into a computer file. The stored images can be brought up on the screen as color photographs. Dubois' internship involved the latest in IBM microcomputers, optical disks for high resolution images, color scanners and color printers. He was responsible for the scanning aspect of the process.

He liked his internship so much that he is continuing his work with Dr. Lade. According to Dubois, a senior and vice president of the SSU Computer Club, "It gave me a better knowledge of microcomputer applications and I was able to apply my basic theory of microcomputer organization. It also helped me to understand the cost of hardware and software-purchasing and repairing."

Paulette Kretschmer, a junior at SSU, completed her internship with Noxell Corporation in Hunt Valley. She worked in the Systems Department evaluating a piece of software called Help/Key, an on-line documentation package which Noxell was considering buying. Kretschmer debugged it and made recommendations as to whether or not it should be purchased. Over the summer, she also wrote documentation and developed standards for programmers to use when designing on-line screens.

Kretschmer, who resides in Salisbury with her husband, John, is sharing her college experience with her son, John Kretschmer, Jr., who will graduate from Salisbury State in December. Doing the internship caused her to realize how much she misses working. She felt that it gave her "hands on experience to apply what I'd learned in my classes."

For Darryl McJilton of Rosedale, his internship with the Baltimore office of C.W. Amos & Company gave him valuable experience interviewing and trying to answer the needs of clients, as well as learning how to apply the tools of his trade. He has worked at the Salisbury office of C.W. Amos & Company for the past four years and this has helped him tremendously in his classroom work.

Working as a computer consultant with clients who wanted to automate, upgrade their existing computer systems or purchase better ones, McJilton is quick to say, "If the opportunity is there for a computer internship, you should take it. You learn the fundamentals in the classroom but can't really apply what you've learned until you get out there working."

Craig R. Savage, 24, son of Robert and Anna Savage of Salisbury, recently completed his summer internship with Perdue Farms, Inc. in Salisbury. Working as an operations analyst with the computer charge-out system in cost accounting, he helped Perdue get a better management of its budget for its cost centers.

Savage worked on a lights out data center project which was designed to better utilize existing personnel running the computers for Perdue. This was not entirely new for Savage; he has worked at Perdue for the past six years and is currently an operations analyst.

A senior at SSU, Savage was nominated twice at Perdue for Corporate Administrative Associate of the Month and was presented a Corporative Administrative QIT (Quality Improvement Techniques) Thank You for his accomplishments on the lights out data center project. Following graduation in December, he plans to travel in Europe prior to working toward his master's degree.

For Robert S. Smith of Laurel, most of his summer was spent in school. He worked as a computer consultant at the Middle School in the Laurel School District. Designing programs such as an accounting program for the school secretary, setting up a student handbook and recommending a future system, he also served on a committee of school district administrators which formulated and proposed a three year plan in order to purchase equipment.

"I learned a lot because it put together courses I've taken on how to become a better manager," said Smith. "I could see that it was all coming together for a purpose."

According to Brian Withnell, a senior at SSU, "The internship was beyond anything I've ever learned in class. Classwork gives you a basis from which you can expand your level of knowledge to the point where you're capable of doing actual work. Classwork gives you the ability to learn what's needed."

He received computer science internship credit for his work with Salisbury attorney Henry L. Vinyard. Withnell, who owns his own business called Shore Consulting, was contracted as a systems analyst by Vinyard last January. He is developing software to automate the legal processes involved with bill collecting. This dBase III Plus application program will allow for easy generation of and access to files in order to better manage the entire operation. He is also responsible for the hardware and its maintenance.

Withnell, who resides in Salisbury with his wife, Deborah, and their two children, Abigail, 3, and Deborah Esther, 6 months, built the IBM compatible computer which he is now using. Prior to coming to Salisbury State, he was a supervisor and technician with Westinghouse in Maryland for 10 1/2 years. Going back to school full time wasn't easy for Withnell and his family, but he is confident that it was a wise career move. Following graduation he plans a career in computer research and development for mathematics/science application.

Horseman would like to see more businesses take advantage of this valuable student resource. "Our local businesses need to be aware that we have a lot of talent and energy. If they need someone to work for them in the summer, they need only give us a call. I think that every one of my students would have been part of an internship if it had been available."

Quilting Slide-Lecture November 7

Quilts From Delmarva have moved from bedroom to art gallery in an exhibition at the University Center.

The show, put on with the help of the Delmarvalous Quilters' Guild and coordinated by the group's president, Joan Hook of Laurel, will continue through November 10 and be accompanied by two special events.

On Monday, November 7, at 7:30 p.m., a slide-lecture on contemporary quilts will be held at Caruthers Hall Auditorium. It will be given by Arlette Klaric, associate director of the Boston University Art Gallery and curator of a 1987 national juried exhibition of quilts.

The national exhibition, called "Contemporary Quilts," will tour Europe in the spring of 1989 under the auspices of the United States Information Agency.

Dr. Klaric has a Ph.D. degree in Art History from the University of Wisconsin at Madison. In addition to her publications on contemporary quilts, she has written articles and exhibit catalogues on the paintings of Arthur Dove, Charles Burchfield and Jack Levin; the sculpture of Ernest Trova; and contemporary trompe l'oeil, or "fool-the-eye" realism.

Ursula Ehrhardt, director of the SSU Gallery arranged the exhibition of Delmarva quilts at the new gallery in the University Center to coincide with a second exhibition at the library gallery called "Pieceworks."

Stars and Stripes*, a hand pieced and hand quilted wall hanging by Detty Ditlow of Lewes, DE, is displayed in the exhibit Quilts from Delmarva, now at the University Center Atrium Gallery.

"Pieceworks" is a stunning show brought to the University in cooperation with Georgia Mountain Crafts and the Southern Arts Federation which conceived and supported it. It brings together contemporary works of art in a variety of media—textile and quilted wall hangings, ceramics, handmade paper, basketry, etching and mixed media—all using the repetitive images or motifs of quilting.

The two concurrent exhibitions recognize the "quilt renaissance" in recent years and "the influence of quilting on contemporary art," Ehrhardt explained.

Hook said that in rounding up the Delmarva quilts for display her biggest problem was persuading fellow guild members to part with their cherished possessions for a period as long as the run of the exhibition.

On a recent visit to the gallery, which is located by the atrium at the University Center, Hook talked informally to students attracted by the display and explained some of the intricate motifs and how they were put together.

The log cabin motif, for instance, appeared in totally different versions in both antique and newly made quilts in the exhibit. In each version a small square representing a chimney is repeated throughout, always surrounded by three light strips of fabric on one side and three

A Hot Weekend for Sports by Barry Packer

For all intents and purposes, it appears that the Eastern States Athletic Conference just might as well relocate its main office to Salisbury State University.

Last year, the Gulls came away with ESAC All-Sports Trophy, signifying intercollegiate athletic superiority in the conference.

And this past weekend, the Gulls picked up right where they left off last year, adding two more conference championship banners to the Maggs Physical Activities Center collection.

On Saturday, Dawn Chamberlin and the rest of her third-ranked, nationally, Sea Gull field hockey team, went to St. David's, PA, the home of Eastern College.

In the first semi-final match, the Gulls were vastly superior to their counterparts from Marywood College, who finished second in the north. The Gulls got first-half goals from Debe Clarke, Michele Ghezzi and Vicki Miller, to go along with a pair of assists from Jill Stewart and a single one from Jennifer Foss, to take a 3-0 lead into the locker room.

And, that is how the score stayed, as the Gulls peppered the bewildered Marywood netminder with 47 shots, while her teammates managed just a deuce on Gull Goalie Tracey Short, who chalked up her ninth shutout.

Later in the day, after host Eastern upset top-10 Frostburg, the veteran and the rookie came through. Short turned aside all Eastern offensive threats, while freshman Cheryl Ish scored her 10th goal of the season in the waning moments, to give the Gulls the win, their 13th of the year, against two losses and three ties.

Rewarded for their efforts were Short and Miller, Kelli Bauerlein and Sharon Montgomery, all named to the All-Tournament Team. Stewart, for her efforts, was voted the Most Valuable Player of the tournament. And, when it came down to crunch time, just like last year, Stewart was there. In the Gulls' last four games, all wins, Stewart has four goals and two assists. She has scored two game-winners and assisted on another game-winner, while winning an MVP Trophy.

Just like one of her counterparts from the volleyball team. Brenda Bowlin, like Stewart, a senior volleyball captain, captured the ESAC MVP, as she, along with All-Tournament players Phyllis Coleman and Sandy Jankevicius led the Gulls to wins over Eastern and Allentown in capturing their second straight ESAC Championship.

The Gulls took care of Eastern, 15-6 and 15-12 in the semi-finals, while Allentown beat Shenandoah. In the battle for the Bronze Medal, Shenandoah took Eastern in a tough, five-game, two and one-half hour match, before Bowlin and company took care of the Centaurs from Allentown, 15-9, 15-7, 16-18 and 15-7.

Shelly Conaway was one of many stars for Salisbury State sports this weekend, as the volleyball and field hockey teams each came home with ESAC Championships.

For the volleyball team, they finish off at 22-4, while field hockey, football, cross country and basketball play this weekend.

On Friday night, the "Maroon and Gold" scrimmage will be played at 6:30 p.m. followed by the Terrapins of the University of Maryland playing their "Red and White" scrimmage.

United Charities Update:

$2,500 has been raised since the campus campaign began a week ago. This year's target goal is $7,000, according to Gains Hawkins, campaign co-chairman.

1989 Honors Convocation

The 1989 Honors Convocation will have as its speaker a graduate of Salisbury State. The Committee is seeking nominations of prospective alumni speakers who could serve as appropriate role models and who will be selected based upon the following criteria: must have graduated at least five or more years ago from Salisbury State University in an approved program of study; must currently be successfully employed in a career or business which reflects the standards and goals of Salisbury State; should be active in community activities; should have been active in campus events as a student at Salisbury State; should possess skills in public speaking; and should be an advocate and supporter of academic excellence and student involvement.

Letters of nominations may be sent to Honors Convocation Committee, c/o Dr. Carolyn Bowden or to the Dean of Students Office. Deadline for nominations is November 15.

Flag Football Tournament

The Department of Campus Recreation, in conjunction with the USF&G Sugar Bowl and the Marc Buoniconti Fund, will sponsor a two-week flag football tournament in November to raise funds to help cure paralysis.

The Flag Football Tournament to cure paralysis will be held on campus from November 1 through the championship game in the single elimination tourney on November 15 at 3:30 p.m. in Sea Gull Stadium.

Members of all the participating teams will seek out sponsors to support the fight against paralysis in a campaign headed by Dave Brown, director of Campus Recreation at SSU.

Personal Counseling

Personal counseling is provided for students by the Center for Personal and Professional Development (CPPD), located in the University Center, room 263. The CPPD is open from 8:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m., Monday - Friday. Appointments may be made in person or by calling 543-6070. Walk-in hours are 1 - 3 p.m., Monday - Thursday. All counseling is confidential and free of charge to University students.

University Forum Meeting

The Forum's Executive Committee has established the calendar of Forum meetings for the coming academic year. As in the past, all meetings will be on Tuesdays at 3:30 p.m. in DSH 149. The dates are as follows: Nov. 1 and Dec. 6. Spring Semester: Feb. 14, Mar. 7, Apr. 4 and May 2.

The agenda for each of these meetings will be compiled by the Executive Committee eight days beforehand. If you wish to have an item placed on an agenda, you can do so by submitting the item in writing by the morning of the following Mondays: Oct. 24, Nov. 28, Feb. 6, Feb. 27, Mar. 27, Apr. 24.

Any member of the Executive Committee will be happy to receive your agenda items. They are Tom Jones, Forum chair (Biology), Dave Parker (Computer Science), John Tyvoll (Chemistry and Physics), Nayland Page (History), and Jim Thrash (Library).

Coaching Position

The SSU Athletic Department is interested in hiring a part-time assistant women's tennis coach. All interested persons should apply to athletic director, Dr. William E. Lide, Athletic Department, SSU, 543-6339, by November 10. SSU is an affirmative action/equal opportunity employer. Qualified women, minorities and disabled persons are encouraged to apply.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Department of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or whereever you may reside. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep your first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away from alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit area or a place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you need an escort to or from your car, call the Department of Public Safety, 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Department of Public Safety, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

SSU Foundation Donates VCR For United Charities Campaign

Pledge cards were included with full-time faculty/staff payroll checks for a voluntary contribution to the 1988 United Charities Campaign on Wednesday, October 26.

This year as an incentive for you to support this important campaign, the SSU Foundation has donated a Video Casseette Recorder (VCR) which you will be eligible to win if you give at least $1.50 per pay period. If you wish to see the VCR, it is located in HH, room 202. The campaign ends Friday, November 11. The drawing for the VCR takes place on Monday, November 14; the winner will be contacted immediately.

While considering whether or not you wish to contribute, please bear in mind that the agencies which receive funds from United Way Charities depend on your generous support to continue to function. Emergency assistance, vocational training for the handicapped and disabled, counseling and educational programs are just a few of the services offered.

Perhaps that which you give today may some day come back to you. Be as generous as you can be.

Campaign coordinators at the University this year are Debbie Merryweather (543-6050) and Gains Hawkins (543-6030). Call one of them if you have any questions.

Health Insurance Open Enrollment Meeting

Friday, November 4, University Center, Nanticoke Room. Meeting times are 8, 9, 10, 11 a.m., noon and 1 p.m. Representatives from Blue Cross/Blue Shield and the Delmarva Health Plan will be available to answer questions. You are urged to attend one of the sessions and learn more about your particular plan and how it has or has not changed for the coming year.

Professional Attire Seminars

During November, the Center for Personal and Professional Development (CPPD) is sponsoring two seminars on professional attire.

Topics to be addressed during each seminar include appropriate attire for a job interview, the principles of "dress for success" and achieving a polished look on a budget.

Don Phillips of Phillips Men's Shop will conduct the seminar for men on Wednesday, November 9, from 4-5 p.m., in Nanticoke Room A of the University Center.

The seminar for women, to be conducted by John Hess, Jr., of Hess Apparel, is scheduled for Thursday, November 17, from 4-5 p.m., in the Pocomoke Room of the University Center. Students interested in either seminar may reserve a place by stopping by the CPPD or calling 543-6070.

Throughout the year, the CPPD will sponsor workshops and presentations related to career planning and placement, as well as issues of personal development and academic progress. The CPPD also provides personal and career counseling for individual students.

Located on the second floor of the University Center, the CPPD is open from 8:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m., Monday-Friday. Appointments may be made in person or by calling 543-6070.

Washington Theatre Trip

On Thursday, November 10, there will be a theater trip to Washington D.C.'s Folger Theatre to attend Shakespeare's Anthony and Cleopatra.

Sign up at the University Center information desk beginning Wednesday, October 26, for full-time students ($10 each) and on Monday, October 31, for part-time students, faculty, staff, alumni and guests ($12 each). Ticket price includes bus transportation; the bus will depart from the south entrance of the University Center promptly at 2:30 p.m. and will return from Washington to the same location at about 1 a.m.

University Center theater trips are co-sponsored by the English and Communication Arts Departments.

Mother Hicks

A highly imaginative family drama about an orphan girl, a young deaf man who befriends her, and an old woman who may or may not be a witch, is the next production in this year's SSU Theatre season.

-Mother Hicks, an award winning play by Suzan Zeder, opens Friday, November 11, for six performances in Holloway Hall Auditorium.

As a special attraction, Zeder, who is recognized both nationally and internationally as one of America's leading playwrights for young audiences, will be artist-in-residence at Salisbury State November 18 and 19. On Saturday, November 19, from 10 a.m. to noon in Caruthers Hall Auditorium, she will conduct a workshop on creative writing and theatre in the classroom. Area residents are invited. Refreshments will be served and admission is free. For further information contact Dr. Andrew Hepburn in the SSU Communication Arts Department at 543-6233.

'Bloods' Author Here

Wallace Terry, a Vietnam veteran and author of Bloods will speak at Salisbury State University on Friday, November 11, at 8 p.m. in Caruthers Hall Auditorium. There will be a reception following.

You Snooze, You Looze $$$$

Any student not returning to the residence halls for spring semester must submit in writing a petition to be released from their housing contract and a refund of their room deposit to the Housing Office by January 1.

Reducing 1988 Taxes

The 1988 tax season isn't over yet. There is still time to shelter a portion of your income from taxes.

The State of Maryland 403 (b) Tax Sheltered Annuity Plan allows all SSU employees to set aside a portion of their income, and not pay federal, state or local taxes on that amount. This can be done through the convenience of payroll deduction. These funds are then made readily available at retirement to help supplement one's income. Prior to retirement, one can withdraw funds via the loan provision or at age 59 1/2, even while still employed.

Kent at Seoul Paralympics

Bill Kent, a sophomore political science major from SSU last spring, took the fall semester off to train for the Paralympics, the Olympics for disabled athletes held in October in Seoul, South Korea.

He responded to the challenge of worldwide competition with a fourth place finish in the air rifle competition in the kneeling position, a scant two points away from the bronze medal. He was also a member of the team competition in that same event and he and his U.S. teammates established a new world record. However, since only three teams competed, no medals were awarded.

Kent is now living in Hagerstown and plans to return to SSU next fall.

darker strips on the other representing happiness and sorrow.

The top of the quilt, for which the bits of fabric are hand or machine stitched together and enhanced by applique or embroidery, is just the beginning in the making of a quilt. Hook explained that much of the work involved, as well as the creativity of the quilter, is in the stitching which joins together the top, the batting or filler, and the backing.

Hook said that she was living in Springfield, MO, when she first took up quilting about eight years ago. She studied the craft and made her first quilt as therapy for high blood pressure and tension, she said.

Moving to Laurel about six years ago, she became an active member of the Delmarvalous Quilters' Guild when it was first organized in 1933.

Her guild has 80 to 100 members, she said, and meets regularly at a branch of the Delaware Technical and Community College on Rt. 9 near Dover. It is one of several guilds now active on the peninsula.

David B. Ganoe, director of the University Center, said that the display in the gallery made him realize the thought and effort which went into quilt making and regret having carelessly discarded one of his grandmother's.

He will probably not be the only visitor to this exhibit to rediscover quilts as art and to have similar regrets.

For more information, call 543-6100.

Mass Media Opening

Salisbury State University invites applications for a tenure-track position in mass media, beginning fall 1989. Appointment will be at the rank of assistant or associate professor; the salary range is competitive.

The appointee will teach broadcast management, broadcast journalism, script writing and other media courses, and will be expected to provide leadership in developing the mass media program of communication arts, a department with 300 majors. Ph.D. in mass media or a related discipline is required, professional broadcasting experience is strongly preferred.

Send application letter, current resume and three letters of recommendation no later than January 20, 1989, to K. E. Wilkerson, Media Search Committee, Department of Communication Arts, Salisbury State University, Salisbury, MD 21801.

Qualified minority members, women, and disabled persons are encouraged to apply. SSU is an affirmative action/equal opportunity employer.

Peggy Raborg (left), Cy Teter (right) and Grovena Young (center) are three of the student actors whose work with Mother Hicks, a family play, will be viewed by its playwright, Suzan Zeder.

SSU's Actors to Meet Playwright

To work with an award-winning script by a playwright with a national reputation, then have that author view your work, is an experience rare for amateurs in theatre. Three local students at Salisbury State University will have that opportunity, however, when their production of Mother Hicks by Suzan Zeder opens November 11 for six performances.

Zeder will be in residence the second weekend of performance, see the production and meet with students and the public. She is recognized both nationally and internationally as one of America's leading playwrights for young audiences. Mother Hicks won the Children's Theatre Association of America's Distinguished Play Award and has been performed at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C. Peggy Lynn Raborg, a freshman majoring in communication arts, portrays the lead character, a teenage orphan trying to find a place for herself in her world—a small southern Illinois town during the Depression.

Cy Teter of Willards plays Tuc, a young deaf man who befriends the orphan and saves her life. Teter has had to learn sign language for the part and has been working intensely with Belinda Cathey, a senior social work major and a sign language specialist.

Grovena Young, a freshman business major, plays the title role of Mother Hicks, an old woman the townspeople suspect of being a witch.

Glenn Glazer, a freshman communication arts major, plays Ricky Ricks, a friend of the orphan. Steve Collins is double cast as Jake Hammon and Wilson Walker. A junior communication arts major, he played the very slow and very funny Ellard in The Foreigner earlier this semester.

Monica Moody, a freshman communication arts major, plays Izzy. Darryl Dillard, a junior communication arts major, portrays Hosiah. Dorothea A. Wessner, a junior elementary education major, plays Alma. Also in the company is Brooke T. Sudlow as Clovis.

Stage managing the production is Gynene Stroup, a sophomore majoring in liberal studies and a member of the honors program. Robert Smith directs. Performances are Friday and Saturday, November 11 and 12, and Thursday through Saturday, November 17-19, at 8 p.m., with a matinee on Sunday, November 13, at 2 p.m. Admission is free to SSU students, faculty and staff. Reservations may be made by calling the theatre box office at 543-6228.

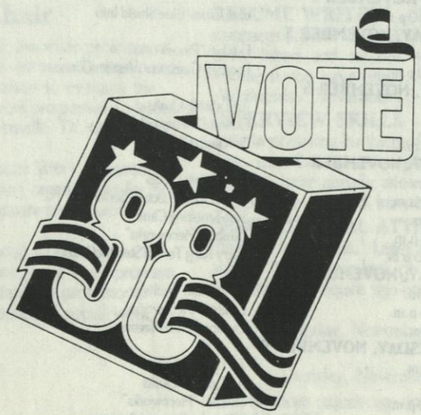
The meeting will also feature guest speaker Warren Dayle, who has hiked the Appalachian Trail more than four times from Maine to Georgia. All who are interested are urged to attend.



Nominations Sought

The Honors Convocation Committee is requesting nominations for three awards.

Faculty, staff or student organizations may nominate students to receive awards, or a student may propose his own name for consideration. In either case, students must contact one faculty/staff member who will agree to write a letter of recommendation on the student's behalf. Please be sure to nominate early so there is ample time to contact the students and have them complete an application packet prior to the deadline of November 11. Names of students being nominated are due in Dean of Students Office no later than November 2.

Criteria for Nominations - Achievement Key Award

The Achievement Key is awarded by the University Honors Convocation Committee of the faculty on the basis of outstanding scholarship and outstanding campus service. Students become eligible for nominations upon receiving a 3.25 academic average for each of two preceding semesters. Full-time undergraduate students may receive this award up to four times. Although students may be nominated for both Campus Life and Achievement Key awards, any recipient of the Achievement Key may not simultaneously receive the Campus Life award. Graduate students are not eligible to receive this award.

Campus Life Award

The Campus Life award is granted by the University Honors Convocation Committee of the faculty on the basis of outstanding contributions to campus life. Students are eligible for nomination on the basis of a 2.0 cumulative average. The award is limited to not more than one percent of the full-time student body. Graduate students are not elibible to receive this award. Although students may be nominated for both Campus Life and Achievement Key awards, any recipient of the Achievement Key may not simultaneously receive the Campus Life Award.

Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges

Nominees for this award are evaluated on the basis of scholarship, participation and leadership in academic and extracurricular activities, service to the university and potential for future achievement. Eligibility for the award is limited to full-time juniors, seniors and graduate students with a 3.0 overall grade point average. Students are not eligible to receive this award more than once.

Detach and return this form to: Honors Convocation Committee, Dean of Students Office, University Center, Room 212. Please type or print in black ink. Feel free to duplicate this form if necessary.

30 New Faculty Aboard This Year

"Our commitment to affirmative action has had tangible results. We now have black and female faculty in departments where none were previously," said Salisbury State University vice president of Academic Affairs, Nelson Butler.

Dr. Butler is talking about the 30 new professors at SSU this year, many of them minorities and women. With 16 new positions, the faculty here is enlarged to 214 full-time members for SSU's 5260 students.

"I'm particularly happy, not only with the quality, but the diversity of backgrounds they bring to our campus," the vice president added. The new professors from Africa and North America, were educated at 50 different colleges and universities in 25 states, the District of Columbia and Canada.

Twelve of the new faculty join seven departments in the School of Liberal Arts. Joyce Ngoh, born and raised in Cameroon, West Africa, earned her M.A. in mass communications from Howard University. She previously worked at CBS affiliate KHOU-TV in Houston, taught at George Mason University, and teaches in communication arts.

Four new professors join the English Department. Deborah Elderdice Creasy is a summa cum laude alumna from SSU who also earned her master's there. Jon Davis is a visiting professor of English whose first book of poetry, Dangerous Amusements, won the Peter I.B. Lavan Award from the Academy of American Poets. He has his M.F.A. from the University of Montana. Gary Harrington earned his Ph.D. in American literature from the University of Toronto. Valerie Faith, who has taught writing at The George Washington University, has her Ph.D. from the University of Massachusetts.

In history, Gregory C. Ference, who earned his Ph.D. from Indiana University, was also a winner of an Andrew Mellon Fellowship. Ference's speciality is eastern European history. Robert Saunders, Jr., who received his M.A. in history last spring from SSU, returns to teach full time this semester.

Mother Hicks

A highly imaginative family drama about an orphan girl, a young deaf man who befriends her, and an old woman who may or may not be a witch, is the next production in this year's SSU Theatre season.

Mother Hicks, an award winning play by Suzan Zeder, opens Friday, November 11, for six performances in Holloway Hall Auditorium.

As a special attraction, Zeder, who is recognized both nationally and internationally as one of America's leading playwrights for young audiences, will be artist-in-residence at Salisbury State November 18 and 19. On Saturday, November 19, from 10 a.m. to noon in Caruthers Hall Auditorium, she will conduct a workshop on creative writing and theatre in the classroom. Area residents are invited. Refreshments will be served and admission is free. For further information contact Dr. Andrew Hepburn in the SSU Communication Arts Department at 543-6233.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Department of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or whereever you may reside. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep your first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away from alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit area or a place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you need an escort to or from your car, call the Department of Public Safety, 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Department of Public Safety, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

SSU Foundation Donates VCR For United Charities Campaign

Pledge cards were included with full-time faculty/staff payroll checks for a voluntary contribution to the 1988 United Charities Campaign on Wednesday, October 26.

This year as an incentive for you to support this important campaign, the SSU Foundation has donated a Video Casseette Recorder (VCR) which you will be eligible to win if you give at least $1.50 per pay period. If you wish to see the VCR, it is located in HH, room 202. The campaign ends Friday, November 11. The drawing for the VCR takes place on Monday, November 14; the winner will be contacted immediately.

While considering whether or not you wish to contribute, please bear in mind that the agencies which receive funds from United Way Charities depend on your generous support to continue to function. Emergency assistance, vocational training for the handicapped and disabled, counseling and educational programs are just a few of the services offered.

Perhaps that which you give today may some day come back to you. Be as generous as you can be.

Campaign coordinators at the University this year are Debbie Merryweather (543-6050) and Gains Hawkins (543-6030). Call one of them if you have any questions.

'Bloods' Author Here

Wallace Terry, a Vietnam veteran and author of Bloods will speak at Salisbury State University on Friday, November 11, at 8 p.m. in Caruthers Hall Auditorium. There will be a reception following.

Reducing 1988 Taxes

The 1988 tax season isn't over yet. There is still time to shelter a portion of your income from taxes.

The State of Maryland 403 (b) Tax Sheltered Annuity Plan allows all SSU employees to set aside a portion of their income, and not pay federal, state or local taxes on that amount. This can be done through the convenience of payroll deduction. These funds are then made readily available at retirement to help supplement one's income. Prior to retirement, one can withdraw funds via the loan provision or at age 59 1/2, even while still employed.

The Holden Group has abeen selected by the Board of Trustees of the Maryland Teachers and State Employees Supplemental Retirement Plans to administer the 403 (b) Tax Sheltered Annuity Plan. Several enrollment counselors who cna meet with you individually are available.

Patty Franz is the representative at Salisbury State, Nanticoke B, on Monday, November 14, from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Call Ms. Franz at (301) 625-1655 or (800) 445-0830 for an appointment or for any questions regarding the 403 (b) Tax Sheltered Annuity Plan.

Student Teacher Application Meetings

Students who are eligible to student teach in the spring semester should follow these steps: contact advisor to determine eligibility (competency tests/NTE, professional program application completed, G.P.A.); and attend one of the meetings scheduled.

Since no other meetings will be held, students must attend a scheduled meeting in order to receive an application for student teaching. Questions about the application process should be directed to Alvah Constantine, Director of Field Experiences, Caruthers Hall, Room 148-A.

Tues., November 15, 3:30 p.m., Caruthers 118
Wed., November 16, 3:30 p.m., Caruthers Auditorium

St. Michaels Trip

The History Club is sponsoring a day trip to St. Michaels to visit the Maritime Museum on Saturday, November 12. The cost for the trip and private, guided tour of the museum is $5 per person.

Students or staff interested in the day trip should contact Dr. Tim Miller of the History Department at 543-6243 or 543-6245 before 5 p.m. on Tuesday, November 8.

Art Scholarship Fund

Career Day Thursday

"Salisbury State University provided me with the best possible grounding from my career," said Salisbury dentist Kathleen Geipe, an alumna of SSU, "and I look forward to helping current students make decisions that will set them on the right professional path."

Geipe will be joined by 34 other SSU graduates who have volunteered to take part in the first Career Day on Thursday, November 10, in the University Center. The theme for the event, sponsored by the Alumni Relations Office, is "The Sky is the Limit."

Commencing with lunch at 11:30 a.m. in the Nanticoke Room, the day's events will focus around seven career seminars covering the disciplines of liberal arts, business, health, social science, natural science, education and, for the undecided student, undeclared majors.

Local television personality and liberal arts panelist, Lisa Spicer, said, "I was able to work in television here while studying for my degree. My experience at SSU proved invaluable in preparing me for my profession and I look forward to helping students derive as much satisfaction as I have from a career in communications." Spicer's fellow panel members will be Rodney L. Banks, Christine Bounds, Bonnie Smullen and John W. Welch, Jr.

Paul Rendine, senior vice president of Wheat, First Securities, Inc., is chairman of the Career Day Committee and business panel member. "The success record of Salisbury State graduates attests to the quality of education given there. With the endownment of The Franklin P. Perdue School of Business, the University can offer an even more competitive edge." He will be joined by local business professionals, Carl L. Cottingham, Eric Crouchley, Jerome Sterling and Donald E. Williams.

Students contemplating a career in health will benefit from guidance from Geipe and her fellow panelists including the keynote speaker, Dr. Timothy Drehmer, who will be traveling from Dayton, OH, for the day's activities. He is now a doctor at Wright Patterson Air Force Base. Other health career experts will be Christine M. Davitt, Dane S. Harden and Ann Street.

Edgar A. Baker, Jr. is now a partner in the law firm of Seidel and Baker. He looks forward to returning to his alma mater as a social science panelist with William A. Allen, Pamela Rubin, Scott D. Shockley and Robin Walker. "The University has responded to the educational challenges needed to support local and state economies. As graduates we owe it to SSU to offer our practical experience as a guide to current students," said Baker.

As a systems analyst with the University of Maryland Eastern Shore, Paul Masucci appreciates the individual attention given by his professors at SSU. "With endowments like the Richard A. Henson School of Science and Technology the University can only grow in scope and excellence." Masucci's fellow natural science panelists will be Michael Green, William C. Livingstone, Maryann A. Moreland and Mark C. Taylor.

Graduates on the education panel include Janet T. Veditz, a Magnet School teacher for the Wicomico County School System, and named one of the four Outstanding School Teachers for 1987. She will be joined by Lloyd W. Harrington, Jeri M. Miller, Ann B. Suthowski and Barry W. Tull.

Five graduates will be on hand to assist students who are uncertain about the courses their careers will eventually take. These will include Dawn B. Robson, executive director of the Coastal Board of Realtors; Carmen A. DiSylvestro, associate director of University Dining at SSU; Anthony D. Redman, a member of the American Institute of Certified Planners; John E. Terrell, superintendent of recreation for the Wicomico County Department of Parks and Recreation; and Carolyn E. Wright, director of Activity Therapy for the Deer's Head Center Rehabilitation Hospital.

Director of Alumni Relations, Judy Pielemeier, said, "Career Day will demonstrate the loyalty felt by graduates of SSU. With their support we know students can contemplate a future where 'The Sky is the Limit.'"

Illustrations Exhibit

The Julia A. Purnell Museum of History in historic Snow Hill, Maryland is the site of a special exhibit titled "Young Lives From Old Books: An Interpretive Exhibit of 19th Century School Book Illustrations." The exhibit will be displayed during the weekend of November 12-13.

The illustrations, textbooks and other materials in this exhibit from the 19th century are arranged in groupings which convey different aspects of the way children were perceived by the illustrators and educators of the day. The exhibit gives insight into the historical realities of 19th century childhood, so that comparisons can be made with present educational, social and philosophical views of childhood.

A free guide to the illustrations will be available. This guide will offer questions to stimulate the imagination and help the viewer formulate insights into the meaning of the illustrations.

The Purnell Museum is open from 10 a.m. - 5 p.m. on Saturday, November 12, and from noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday, November 13.

Exhibition of the illustrations is made possible by grants from the Worcester Arts Council and the Maryland Humanities Council.

For further information call the Purnell Museum at 632-0515.

"Brokers" execute transactions for college students calling in from across the country, competing in The First Annual AT&T Collegiate Investment Challenge.

Students Bullish on Investment Game

When the stock market opened for trading the week of November 1, 30 Salisbury State students each took control of an individual $500,000 brokerage account and began competing against thousands of students across the country. For the next four months, they are buying and selling real stocks in an effort to maximize the value of their portfolios.

Up for grabs is over $200,000 in cash and prizes. And one student will be coming away $25,000 richer. Called "The hottest business game in town!" by Inc. Magazine, "...the ups and downs are real; the money isn't," said the Associated Press.

According to Linda Ehrisman (Delmar, MD), a senior accounting major, "I have a little money I want to invest in the stock market, but I'm scared to death. I think this will help me get rid of my fears. Here I've nothing to lose and it sounds like fun."

According to Dr. K. Khazeh, of the finance faculty in the Perdue School and an advisor to the Financial Management Association (FMA) student chapter, "not only does this contest give students an idea of what investing in the stock market is all about in general; it also provides to our finance students in particular the practical application of investing in the stock market while they have acquired the theoretical knowledge of investing in the classroom." The Perdue School and the FMA student chapter at SSU sponsored this contest partially to reduce the registration fee to students from $49.95 to $20.

Called the national "Collegiate Investment Challenge," and backed by such companies as AT&T and Dow Jones, the event is unique in that a full service brokerage firm has been set up to handle all trading activity and provide human assistance.

When participants are ready to start investing they just pick up their phone and call their broker on a toll-free 800 line that is provided. Their broker is positioned at a fully automated trading desk ready to execute trades based on up to the minute stock quotes beamed in via satellite from the exchanges in New York.

At the end of each month, players will be mailed a personal three page account statement and newsletter. The statement will provide an account summary, a record of all their transactions, a complete listing of portfolio holdings and a current valuation of their account. There will also be a rankings section showing how each participant fared against students in their class, at their college and across the country.

Each school will have a winner and the top 10 players nationally will win trips to New York and the Bahamas, national media interviews and some generous cash prizes.

Students who are participating at SSU, besides Ehrisman, include: Michael Schneider and Timothy Feehely, Baltimore; Lori Krystopik, Huntingtown, MD; Mark Shearer, Bel Air, MD; Marla Pallone, Crofton, MD; Tony Divanna, Onancock, VA; Stacey Milbourne, Crisfield; Troy Anderson, Wayne Judkins and Jeffrey Weiner, Rockville, MD; Mary Gordon, Baldwin, MD; Robert Heid, Arnold, MD; Charles Schroder, Bowie, MD; Pete Engler and William Tomlinson, Salisbury; Adam Wattay and George Diehl, Ocean City; Christine Kenney, Ft. Washington, MD; Kenny Mann, Chester, MD; David Lasher, Annapolis; Theresa Tinkler and David Wolfgang, Hebron, MD; William Purnell, Waldorf, MD; Robert Novak, Upper Marlboro, MD; and Gary Schells, Parsonsburg, MD.

Program Planning

Program planning begins Monday, November 7, for all nursing and pre-nursing majors.

All advisors will post a schedule of appointments on their office doors in the Hall Education Center, located on the corner of Locust Street and Waverly Drive.

Please sign up for an appointment; there will be a sheet outside each faculty advisor's door with dates and times.

THE UNIVERSITY CLUB

419 West Redwood Street
Baltimore, MD 21201
328-CLUB

SSU Community Invited to Join University Club

The University Club of the University of Maryland invites all Salisbury State faculty, staff and alumni to become members of Baltimore's newest private club. This announcement comes following the recent expansion of the University of Maryland System.

Established in 1987, The University Club is located at The University of Maryland Professional Building, 419 West Redwood Street. Spacious and handsomely decorated in Old Maryland style, the club is open to members and their guests weekdays for breakfast, luncheon and dinner and offers private rooms for meeting, receptions, banquets and more. Imaginative special events are offered regularly including murder mystery dinners, lobster night, Sunday brunches, comedy revues and more.

Additional benefits include convenient parking at a discount, free spouse membership and reciprocal privileges at more than 75 university clubs nationwide.

For information on dues and a free brochure about what the Baltimore Sun called "a major new club in the center of Baltimore's intellectual and social life," call 328-CLUB.

New Library Copiers

Blackwell Library expects to have new Xerox copy machines installed in November. These copiers will not be coin-operated, but will require instead the use of electronically-encoded cards. It is expected that this new system will be much more convenient for users.

The machine-ready copier cards will be available for purchase at the Library's circulation desk. They will be sold in any whole dollar amount with a minimum value of $1. Part of the initial purchase will include a deposit charge for the reusable card, a charge that will be fully credited when the card is presented for a second purchase of copies.

Full information regarding the use of this card system will be available as soon as the equipment is operational.

Nurses Meeting

The Nursing Department will host a meeting for District 4 of the Maryland Nurses Association on Thursday, November 17, at 7 p.m. in the Nanticoke Room at the University Center.

The meeting will begin with a welcome from 7-7:15 p.m. followed by the one-hour film, "Sentimental Women Need Not Apply—A History of the American Nurse." The remainder of the meeting which is scheduled to end at 9 p.m. will include a discussion of the film and small group planning to help combat the nursing crisis on the Eastern Shore.

All MNA members, interested nurses and students are encouraged to attend.

Man and Nature

There will be a meeting of the Man and Nature group at 8 p.m. on Monday, November 14, in the Nanticoke Room of the University Center.

Interested faculty, staff and students are invited to attend.

The Man and Nature group will present a 50-minute videotape dealing with James Lovelock's "Gaia Hypothesis." Briefly, the hypothesis states that the earth behaves like a large organism. The earth as a living system maintains, for example, the levels of oxygen in the atmosphere. Without Gaia (earth goddess), earth would be one more dead planet like Mars or Venus.

For more information, call Ben Fusaro at 543-6470 (6471 for a message).

Band Concert November 21

The Salisbury State University Band will present its premiere performance of the 1988-89 concert season on Monday, November 21, at 8 p.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium.

Under the baton of its new conductor, Richard L. Johnson, the University Band concert will feature traditional wind literature dating from the period of the Renaissance to the 20th century. Selections include Canzone e Sonata (1615) by Giovanni Gabrieli, Blessed are They that Mourn (1867) by Johannes Brahms/Buehlman, Florentiner March (ca. 1900) by Julius Fucik, First Suite in E♭for Military Band (1921) by Gustav Holst, Chester (1956) by William Schuman and Music for Winds and Percussion (1973) by Elliot A. Del Borgo.

The 38-member University Band, formerly called the Concert Band, is comprised of both University and community personnel. The organization is one of four wind groups associated with Salisbury State University including the Salisbury Brass Choir, the SSU Jazz Band and the SSU Athletic Band.

The conductor, Johnson, presently serves as the new director of the Salisbury State University Bands. Prior to his appointment to SSU, Johnson held positions as department chairman/director of bands at Central High School, Crystal Lake, IL, and director of bands at Tremper High School, Kenosha, WI, culminating nine years of public school experience. Johnson also served as conductor of the Crystal Lake Adult Community Band for two years prior to his return to graduate school.

Johnson received both his Bachelor of Science ('76) and Master of Science ('78) in music education from the University of Illinois. He is presently completing a doctoral degree in conducting performance at Michigan State University. During his tenure as a graduate assistant at Michigan State University, Johnson received the School of Music Fellowship for his research in conducting methods and wind literature.

Johnson has appeared as clinician/lecturer at numerous regional and state level music events in Illinois and Michigan. He has also appeared as guest conductor in both Illinois and Michigan for adult community bands as well as public school organizations.

Arts Grants Available

The Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council has a November 18 deadline for grant applications for arts programs.

Any arts activity taking place between January 1 and June 30, is eligible for funding consideration.

To be considered for a grant an organization must show that the activity is in the field of the arts, of community benefit, be fiscally sound and have the potential for self-support in the future. The applicant organization must be a not-for-profit organization.

A packet of information including application forms is available now at the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council, a not-for-profit organization that supports all the arts in Salisbury and Wicomico County, and awards these cash grants in partnership with the Maryland State Arts Council in support of performances, exhibits and other arts-related activites sponsored by local organizations.

For more information on the grant deadline please call the Arts Council at 543-ARTS.

Stewart Lifts Gulls Into Final Four

by Barry Packer

For the true meaning of the word "clutch," look in the dictionary and you'll see a picture of Salisbury State University's senior, co-captain forward on the field hockey team.

Just as Reggie Jackson answers to Mr. October, Jill Stewart answers to that, and then takes it one better, as in Miss October and November.

After a slow start during the 1988 field hockey season, Stewart, along with a dominant defense, a winning coaching staff, an unbridled enthusiasm and a never-say-die attitude, has led the Gulls to their third straight appearance in the Final Four, to be held this weekend at Trenton State.

Through the first 13 games, Stewart had two goals and four assists. Not bad for some, but not typical Jill Stewart stats.

That 13th game was a 3-2 double-overtime loss at East Stroudsburg. It was the Gulls second straight loss, and following two other ties, their fourth game without a win.

At that point, Miss October/November began to take over.

Since that game, the Gulls have won seven straight, outscoring the opposition 19-5. They remained the top team in the Southern Region. They clinched the Eastern States Athletic Conference crown. They moved from eighth to third in the national poll. And, this weekend they clinched a Final Four spot.

In those seven games, Stewart registered seven goals and four assists. In those seven wins, she scored four game-winning goals and had two game-winning assists.

The first game, a 3-2 win at Shippensburg, she had the game-winning assist with 5:21 left. At Kutztown, she scored the game-winner midway through the second overtime. Her first of three goals was the game-winner in a 4-1 win against Mary Washington.

In the first game of the ESAC Championship, she assisted on Debe Clarke's game-winner. While Cheryl Ish scored the only goal in the Conference Championship, Stewart was voted the tournament's Most Valuable Player. In the first round of regionals, one of her two goals against Ohio Wesleyan was the game-winner, then for the second time in two weeks, she sent Kutztown down with a late game score, sending the Golden Bears home for the season and the Sea Gulls to Trenton, NJ.

When an athlete goes into a streak, there is no telling how long it will last. Salisbury State is hoping that Miss October/November's will last two more games.

Susan Zeder

Theatre Workshop

One of the nation's leading playwrights for young audiences will conduct a public workshop on the writing and teaching of theatre on Saturday, November 19, in Caruthers Hall Auditorium.

Susan Zeder, who is recognized both nationally and internationally for her plays, has had her works performed in all 50 states, Great Britain, Germany, Japan and Australia.

She is a three time winner of the Distinguished Play Award given by the American Association of Theatre for Youth.

The public will have an opportunity to chat with Zeder during a continental breakfast in the lobby outside the auditorium prior to her presentation, which begins at 10 a.m. "Both writers and teachers should find Zeder's theatre techniques rewarding," said Dr. Andrew Hepburn, director of the theatre at SSU.

She will cover three areas: theatre as a basic part of the elementary school curriculum; improvisation in creative dramatic exercises for children and as a tool for the dramatist in the writing process; and finally, her own personal experiences in playwriting and theatre production.

A prolific writer, her play, Step on a Crack, about two young children's acceptance of their mother's death and father's remarriage, has been widely acclaimed as one of the decade's most important and popular plays for family audiences.

Doors, nominated in 1984 as the Outstanding Play for Young Audiences in Canada, this year was chosen to be produced by the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts.

Mother Hicks, currently being performed at SSU, is an award-winning drama set in a small Illinois town during the Depression. It became the subject of a documentary film by the Agency for Institutional Television and also was produced at the Kennedy Center.

Other works including, The Play Called Noah's Flood, her third award winner, are regularly performed throughout the country.

Zeder has served as a script consultant for the American Film Theatre at Pinewood Studios in London, England; is on the Theatre Panel for the National Endowment of the Arts; and advises the Kennedy Center on children and youth programming. She teaches playwriting at Southern Methodist University.

Both the breakfast and workshop are free and the public is cordially invited. Mother Hicks performances are Friday and Saturday, November 11-12, and Thursday through Saturday, November 17-19 at 8 p.m., with a matinee on Sunday, November 13 at 2 p.m., in Holloway Hall Auditorium. Admission also is free for SSU students, faculty and staff. For information on the Zeder workshop, contact the Communication Arts Department at 543-6229. For Mother Hicks reservations and information, contact the theatre box office at 543-6228.

Zeder's visit is made possible, in part, by grants from the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council and the Salisbury State University Foundation.

There's Music In The Air!

'The First Nowell' Concert December 2

The University Concert Choir, under the direction of Dr. Duane R. Karna, presents "The First Nowell" on Friday, December 2, at 8 p.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium.

The annual Christmas Concert will also feature the SSU Collegium Singers, under the direction of Dr. Nancy Cooper, and as a special guest, Katherine Turner, soprano soloist and instructor of voice at Salisbury State.

The choral concert will include works by Ralph Vaughan William's "The First Nowell"; Gustav Holst's "Christmas Day"; Peter Warlock's "Three Carols"; and selections from Handel's "Messiah."

"The First Nowell" is a nativity play adapted from medieval pageants with music composed and arranged from traditional carol tunes. Scored for soloists and mixed chorus, the work will be performed in its concert version. "The First Nowell" was first performed with the St. Martin-in-the-Fields Concert Orchestra and Singers as part of their Christmas Matinee on December 19, 1958. It is one of the last works composed by the famed English composer.

Gustav Holst's "Christmas Day" is another English composition which is a choral fantasy based on the old carols, "Good Christian Men, Rejoice," "God Rest You Merry Gentlemen," "An Old Breton Melody" and "The First Nowell." The "Messiah" portion of the program will include the chorus "Glory to God" and the virtuosic soprano aria "Rejoice Greatly, O Daughter of Zion." Student soloists will also be featured throughout the evening's performance.

The 30-voice choir is under the direction of Karna, newly appointed director of choral activities and assistant professor of music at Salisbury State. In 1986 Karna completed his Doctor of Musical Arts in choral conducting from the University of Arizona. There he studied with Dr. Maurice Skones, former conductor of Pacific Lutheran University's "Choir of the West." He has also studied with Dr. Lloyd Pfautsch at Southern Methodist University where he was awarded the Algur H. Meadows School of the Arts fellowship to pursue two master of music degrees, one in choral conducting, and one in vocal performance.

This summer, Karna was one of 20 choral directors chosen from throughout the U.S. to represent the American Choral Directors Association in American-German Choral Directors Exchange Program. During the two-week trip, the 20-member delegation studied with, observed and visited various choral organizations throughout the Federal Republic of Germany. Because of the exchange, Salisbury State will sponsor the Chamber Choir from Augsburg University April 6-7.

There is no admission charge. The public is invited. For more information, call 543-6030.

The University Concert Choir

Band Concert November 21

The Salisbury State University Band will present its premiere performance of the 1988-89 concert season on Monday, November 21, at 8 p.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium.

Under the baton of its new conductor, Richard L. Johnson, the University Band concert will feature traditional wind literature dating from the period of the Renaissance to the 20th century. Selections include Canzone e Sonata (1615) by Giovanni Gabrieli, Blessed are They that Mourn (1867) by Johannes Brahms/Buehlman, Florentiner March (ca. 1900) by Julius Fucik, First Suite in E♭for Military Band (1921) by Gustav Holst, Chester (1956) by William Schuman and Music for Winds and Percussion (1973) by Elliot A. Del Borgo.

The 38-member University Band, formerly called the Concert Band, is comprised of both University and community personnel. The organization is one of four wind groups associated with Salisbury State University including the Salisbury Brass Choir, the SSU Jazz Band and the SSU Athletic Band.

The conductor, Johnson, presently serves as the new director of the Salisbury State University Bands. Prior to his appointment to SSU, Johnson held positions as department chairman/director of bands at Central High School, Crystal Lake, IL, and director of bands at Tremper High School, Kenosha, WI, culminating nine years of public school experience. Johnson also served as conductor of the Crystal Lake Adult Community Band for two years prior to his return to graduate school.

Johnson received both his Bachelor of Science ('76) and Master of Science ('78) in music education from the University of Illinois. He is presently completing a doctoral degree in conducting performance at Michigan State University. During his tenure as a graduate assistant at Michigan State University, Johnson received the School of Music Fellowship for his research in conducting methods and wind literature.

Johnson has appeared as clinician/lecturer at numerous regional and state level music events in Illinois and Michigan. He has also appeared as guest conductor in both Illinois and Michigan for adult community bands as well as public school organizations.

Vocal Recitals, Choral Concerts

A calendar reminder:

Tuesday, November 22, 12:15 p.m., St. Peter's Episcopal Church, Dr. Duane R. Karna, voice, and Dr. Nancy Cooper, piano accompanist, perform a Bach's Lunch. Both musicians are on the Department of Music faculty and will be celebrating "St. Ceclia's Day" the patron saint of music.

Friday, December 2, 8 p.m., Holloway Hall Auditorium, the Concert Choir and Collegium Singers present "The First Nowell." The annual Christmas Choral Concert will feature student soloists, the Concert Choir under the direction of Dr. Duane R. Karna, assistant professor of Music, and the Collegium Singers, under the direction of Dr. Nancy Cooper. Special guest is Katherine Turner, soprano soloist.

Monday, December 5, 8 p.m., Caruthers Auditorium, Voice Classes I & II in recital. Student soloists in recital with Cooper accompanying.

Monday, December 12, 8 p.m., Caruthers Auditorium, Private voice students of Turner and Karna present an evening of vocal music.

Mother Hicks

A highly imaginative family drama about an orphan girl, a young deaf man who befriends her, and an old woman who may or may not be a witch, is the next production in this year's SSU Theatre season.

Mother Hicks, an award winning play by Suzan Zeder, opens Friday, November 11, for six performances in Holloway Hall Auditorium.

As a special attraction, Zeder, who is recognized both nationally and internationally as one of America's leading playwrights for young audiences, will be artist-in-residence at Salisbury State November 18 and 19. On Saturday, November 19, from 10 a.m. to noon in Caruthers Hall Auditorium, she will conduct a workshop on creative writing and theatre in the classroom. Area residents are invited. Refreshments will be served and admission is free. For further information contact Dr. Andrew Hepburn in the SSU Communication Arts Department at 543-6233.

Items for sale will include pottery, paintings, prints, photography, crafts, etc. by invited artists and students. As in the past, numerous door prizes for customers will be available. All donations and proceeds will go toward the Art Department Scholarship Fund. Contact the Art Department at 543-6270 if you have questions.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Department of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever you may reside. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep your first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away from alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit area or a place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you need an escort to or from your car, call Public Safety at 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact Public Safety, located in HH room 022, 543-6222.

SSU Community Invited to Join University Club

The University Club of the University of Maryland invites all SSU faculty, staff and alumni to become members of Baltimore's newest private club. This announcement comes following the recent expansion of the University of Maryland System.

Established in 1987, The University Club is located at The University of Maryland Professional Building, 419 West Redwood Street. Spacious and handsomely decorated in Old Maryland style, the club is open to members and their guests weekdays for breakfast, luncheon and dinner and offers private rooms for meeting, receptions, banquets and more. Imaginative special events are offered regularly including murder mystery dinners, lobster night, Sunday brunches, comedy revues and more.

Additional benefits include convenient parking at a discount, free spouse membership and reciprocal privileges at more than 75 university clubs nationwide.

For information on dues and a free brochure on this new club, call 328-CLUB.

New Library Copiers

Blackwell Library expects to have new Xerox copy machines installed in November. These copiers will not be coin-operated, but will require instead the use of electronically-encoded cards. It is expected that this new system will be much more convenient for users.

The machine-ready copier cards will be available for purchase at the Library's circulation desk. They will be sold in any whole dollar amount with a minimum value of $1. Part of the initial purchase will include a deposit charge for the reusable card, a charge that will be fully credited when the card is presented for a second purchase of copies.

Information regarding use of this system will be available when the equipment is operational.

SNA Visits Hospital Children on Halloween

During Halloween several students from the Student Nurses Association (SNA) took miniature pumpkins to the Pediatric Unit at Peninsula General Hospital Medical center, helped each patient decorate the pumpkins and presented the children with homemake "ghost-like" hand pets made by SNA members.

"Halloween in the hospital, like any holiday, can leave patients, particularly children, feeling left out," said Kellie Bennett, vice president of the SNA. "Hopefully, our visit made their Halloween a little happier."

Participating in the activities, besides Bennett, were Teresa Dykes (SNA president), JoAnn Johnson, Kim Munro, Sharon Ritchey, Lisa Neal and Kristy Keil.

The SNA was formed in 1979 by the first nursing graduates of SSU. The organization is a professional and service group maintained and led by student nurses.

Sports
By Barry Packer

When the 1988-89 seniors look back at their final athletic performances, many will be very memorable.

Take, for example, the three seniors on the field hockey team—Sharon Montgomery, Tracey Short and Jill Stewart. Over the weekend, these three were instrumental in leading Dawn Chamberlin's team to its second straight Bronze Medal, and the Sea Gulls third top three finish in as many years.

Montgomery, after almost having her arm shattered by a Trenton State shot in the semi-finals, won by the host Lions, 2-0, came back in the consolation game to score an insurance goal, on a penalty stroke, in the 2-0 win over Cortland, for third place.

Short, the diminutive goalie, in stature, came up once again. In the 2-0 loss to Trenton, she could not be faulted for either Lion goal. And, in the Cortland contest, she turned away shot after shot in recording her 12th shutout of the season.

And Stewart, while she did not register a goal or an assist in either of SSU's final two contests, like she has for the better part of this season, dominated the offensive zone with her ball control and heads up style of play.

Both Montgomery and Stewart were named to the All-Tournament team, and Short well could have been too.

Now comes the time for Chamberlin to try to replace the three leaders of this team, not just offensively, defensively and in net, but in courage, heart and determination.

And it is also time for football coach Dr. Joseph Dailey to replace his leaders, including backs Donald Washington and Jerry Short, linemen Wes Schaefer, Todd Sanders and Jeff Cranford, defensive standouts Matt Butler and Walter Hughes, receivers Mark Hubler and Duncan McLean and quarterback Kevin White, among others.

Short and Washington finish their careers as a very explosive and consistent tandem, while White hangs up his number 11 jersey for the Sea Gulls as the greatest passer in Salisbury State history, throwing for over 4,000 yards, while compling a 26-6 won-loss record.

Which is a similar record to what the women's basketball team had last season (20-6). The Gulls, under new head coach Jim Berkman and Ellen Doxtater, come into this season, riding a 15-game winning streak, which they will be trying to extend when they open their regular season, at the Muskingum (Ohio) Tournament this weekend.

The Gulls will be minus the height of Myra Sturgis, Kim Burton, Jamey Griswald, Christen Hawtin and Kim Whitehead. Yet, will have returning center Dawn Webb, who is bidding to become the first Gull in women's basketball history to accumulate 1,000 points and 1,000 rebounds during her career, and the flair of guards like Vicki Miller, Diane Bickford, Sandy Jankevicius and the Ivison twins, Christie and Connie.

And flair is just one of the many words used to describe the play of Ward Lambert's sophomore sensation, Andre Foreman, who also gets into action this weekend, when the men's basketball team travels to play in the Roanoke, VA, tournament. While Rick Sheets was the only loss that Lambert really suffered, he went out and had a fine recruiting year, to join returners like Tim DeMar and Dave Byer and Russell Springmann.

After each team opens with the weekend tournament, the women's team will travel to Wesley, while the men will visit the Captains of Christopher Newport on Tuesday, November 22. The men will then host the top amateur team from Finland on Wednesday night, November 23, at 7:30.

Susan Zeder

Theatre Workshop

One of the nation's leading playwrights for young audiences will conduct a public workshop on the writing and teaching of theatre on Saturday, November 19, in Caruthers Hall Auditorium.

Susan Zeder, who is recognized both nationally and internationally for her plays, has had her works performed in all 50 states, Great Britain, Germany, Japan and Australia.

She is a three time winner of the Distinguished Play Award given by the American Association of Theatre for Youth.

The public will have an opportunity to chat with Zeder during a continental breakfast in the lobby outside the auditorium prior to her presentation, which begins at 10 a.m. "Both writers and teachers should find Zeder's theatre techniques rewarding," said Dr. Andrew Hepburn, director of the theatre at SSU.

She will cover three areas: theatre as a basic part of the elementary school curriculum; improvisation in creative dramatic exercises for children and as a tool for the dramatist in the writing process; and finally, her own personal experiences in playwriting and theatre production.

A prolific writer, her play, Step on a Crack, about two young children's acceptance of their mother's death and father's remarriage, has been widely acclaimed as one of the decade's most important and popular plays for family audiences.

Doors, nominated in 1984 as the Outstanding Play for Young Audiences in Canada, this year was chosen to be produced by the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts.

Mother Hicks, currently being performed at SSU, is an award-winning drama set in a small Illinois town during the Depression. It became the subject of a documentary film by the Agency for Institutional Television and also was produced at the Kennedy Center.

Other works including, The Play Called Noah's Flood, her third award winner, are regularly performed throughout the country.

Zeder has served as a script consultant for the American Film Theatre at Pinewood Studios in London, England; is on the Theatre Panel for the National Endowment of the Arts; and advises the Kennedy Center on children and youth programming. She teaches playwriting at Southern Methodist University.

Both the breakfast and workshop are free and the public is cordially invited. Mother Hicks performances are Friday and Saturday, November 11-12, and Thursday through Saturday, November 17-19 at 8 p.m., with a matinee on Sunday, November 13 at 2 p.m., in Holloway Hall Auditorium. Admission also is free for SSU students, faculty and staff. For information on the Zeder workshop, contact the Communication Arts Department at 543-6229. For Mother Hicks reservations and information, contact the theatre box office at 543-6228.

Zeder's visit is made possible, in part, by grants from the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council and the Salisbury State University Foundation.

Arts Grants Available

The Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council has a November 18 deadline for grant applications for arts programs.

Any arts activity taking place between January 1 and June 30, is eligible for funding consideration.

To be considered for a grant an organization must show that the activity is in the field of the arts, of community benefit, be fiscally sound and have the potential for self-support in the future. The applicant organization must be a not-for-profit organization.

A packet of information including application forms is available now at the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council, a not-for-profit organization that supports all the arts in Salisbury and Wicomico County, and awards these cash grants in partnership with the Maryland State Arts Council in support of performances, exhibits and other arts-related activites sponsored by local organizations.

For more information on the grant deadline please call the Arts Council at 543-ARTS.

Bach's 'Presence'

The Salisbury Choral Society will perform a concert titled "Bach's Presence" on Saturday, December 3 at 8 p.m. in the Asbury United Methodist Church near the south end of the campus.

The program includes "Magnificat," the "Sleepers, Wake!" cantata, and "Jesus, Joy of Man's Desiring," all of which were composed by J.S. Bach.

Tickets are $6 and may be purchased at any branch of Peninsula Bank, at the Salisbury branches of the John Hanson Savings Bank, or the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council Office which is located at the Civic Center. On campus you may purchase tickets from Peggy Martin, HH room 204. For more information call 543-6060 or 543-ARTS.

'Winnie the Pooh'

"Winnie the Pooh," a production by the SSU Children's Theatre, will be performed Saturday, December 3, at 10 a.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium.

The performance was moved from Caruthers Hall to the larger Holloway Auditorium because of ticket demand said Dr. Andrew Hepburn, director of SSU theatre.

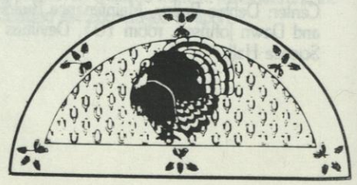
The children's play, directed and performed by SSU students, is approximately an hour long. Admissions is free to SSU students, faculty and staff.

Frank Addresses Elementary School Students

R. G. (Ron) Frank will make a presentation to the students and faculty of Pemberton Elementary School on Friday, November 18.

The presentation will be based on the need for a good education to live in the future. The program is part of American Education Week activities at the school.

Frank is an associate professor of educational administration. He has served as a classroom teacher, school administrator and university professor.



David Blosveren assists in placing pottery by Jose Dovis in the showcases at the Fifth Annual Holiday Art Sale at SSU. The sale will be held from December 7 to December 10 in the Atrium Gallery at the new University Center. The exhibit and sale is open Wednesday and Thursday 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Friday and Saturday 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. For further information contact the Art Department 543-6270 or Marie Quillen 543-6273.

No Friend of Dinosaurs Grogan's 94 Million Year Old Fly

Dr. William Grogan, of the Department of Biological Sciences, and Ryszard Szadziewski, of the Department of Invertebrate Zoology at the University of Gdansk, Poland, recently published an article in the Journal of Paleontology in which they describe a new fossil species of biting midge.

The new species, Culicoides casei, from the Cretaceous Period, is the oldest fossil biting midge from North America at 94 million years old.

The tiny extinct biting fly was discovered in 1966 in New Jersey, just south of New York City, by Gerard Case who deposited it in the Geological Museum at Princeton University where it remained until it was recently studied by Grogan and Szadziewski.

It is preserved in amber or fossilized tree resin in which the fly became trapped and subsequently fossilized when the amber became covered with sediments. The amber, which is transparent, preserved the entire insect and enabled detailed study by microscopes after the amber was ground and polished.

Biting midges of the genus Culicoides are today notorious pests of birds and mammals including man and are considered serious nuisances at various coastal resorts in the southern United States and Caribbean region.

Scientists have assumed that these biting flies fed early in their evolutionary development on warm-blooded vertebrates such as birds and mammals.

Grogan and Szadziewski hypothesize that this new fossil species and others like it could just as easily have sucked blood from dinosaurs, which most scientists today believe were active, warm-blooded and more common than mammals and birds during the Cretaceous Period.

Assistant Professor Position

Salisbury State University seeks to fill a full-time tenure track position starting February, 1989. The position requires an earned doctorate in physiological psychology or experimental psychology with an emphasis in physiological psychology. Periodical and Newspaper Abstracts on Compact Discs Available in Library

Periodical Abstracts Ondisc and Newspaper Abstracts Ondisc have been installed in Blackwell Library for demonstration loan through the fall semester. They are located in the reference room.

Periodical Abstracts Ondisc is a database containing full bibliographical citations and brief abstracts to help searchers locate general information on subjects in the arts, business, science, health, education, politics and lifestyles. Three hundred current periodicals are indexed along with more than 100 additional titles. Coverage begins with January, 1988.

Newspaper Abstracts Ondisc contains bibliographical information from the indexes to these newspapers: New York Times; Christian Science Monitor; Los Angeles Times; Chicago Tribune; Boston Globe; Atlanta Constitution/ Journal and the Wall Street Journal.

This database is a great source of business information, financial data and current affairs. Each search produces a brief abstract thoroughly indexed and cross referenced. Coverage begins with January, 1985.

Women's Caucus Meeting

Under provisions of the new University of Maryland's "Task Force on Institutional Mission Statements," a mandate has been issued for each institution within the university system to adopt in its mission statement, a provision for the equitable representation of women. To this end, SSU's proposed mission statement includes the creation of a Women's Caucus. At present, the Women's Caucus is composed of people who share a common interest in the multiplicity of issues which impact on being female in a campus community.

A general meeting of this organization will take place on Wednesday, November 30, at 3:30 p.m. in the Nanticoke Room of the University Center and the featured speaker will be Dr. Virginia Johnson-Gazzam, Associate Professor of Biology at Towson State University. Dr. Johnson Gazzam was instrumental in receiving and implementing a $300,000 federal grant which represents the single largest award to an institution for integrating the scholarship of women into the post-secondary curriculum. The program at Towson State University has been hailed as a national model and Dr. Johnson-Gazzam and her colleagues are currently consultants to five community colleges which are attempting to implement the focus of the federal grant into their repective programs.

For more information on the Women's Caucus or the general meeting, call the University Center office at 543-6100.

Field Band Here

The U.S. Army Field Band and Soldiers' Chorus presents a free concert on Tuesday, December 13, at 8 p.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium. The event is co-sponsored by SSU and The Daily Times.

Tickets are available on a first come, first served basis from The Daily Times, the SSU University Center information desk and the U.S. Army Recruiting Office in the Twilley Center beginning Wednesday, November 30.

The band's concert repertoire is designed to appeal to all audiences, offering classical, semi-classical and popular selections, choral arrangements, novelty numbers and military marches on each of its programs. On tours of other nations, the Field Band has performed the works of American composers as well as music indigenous to that country.

The band has earned considerable fame outside the United States on four tours sponsored by the Department of the Army and the State Department.

In addition to its ceremonial tours, the Field Band is called upon to participate in a variety of ceremonial events. The band has marched in five Presedential Inaugural parades, escorted the President on special occasions and played for many visiting heads-of-state.

Formed more than 35 years ago, the chorus has thrilled audiences throughout the world with its own special arrangements of music as varied as the communities it has visited.

'Natural Born Movers' Spice Winter Dance Concert

Donald Washington, a six foot, 200 pound Salisbury State halfback who piled up impressive statistics this past season, has moved from dancing in the end zone to waltzing on stage.

Washington is one of two dozen students performing in the SSU Dance Company's "Winter Concert," which opens December 9 for three performances. The Dance Company, which is composed of students and community residents, has dancers with up to a decade's experience and training, as well as the enthusiastic beginner.

"I am impressed that the dancers who are trained and have experience do not look down upon those who are not," said Susan Turner, Dance Company director. "The experienced dancers understand I choose people by how they move." Turner teaches a "Dance and Education" course required of physical education majors. Most of the students are men, she said, and some, who are skilled athletes like Washington, are "natural born movers."

How does she feel about a football player in a dance concert? "I think it's wonderful, and we'll have a second player dancing with us next semester."

Art and sport intertwine in one of the concert pieces choreographed by Turner. She has a simultaneous football, basketball and baseball

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Department of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever you may reside. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep your first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away from alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit area or a place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you need an escort to or from your car, call Public Safety at 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact Public Safety, located in HH room 022, 543-6222.

Library Recarpeting

Blackwell Library will be undergoing a recarpeting project beginning on December 22 and continuing through February 3.

Although this project very much needs to be done, it unfortunately means that during Winter Term there will be a certain amount of noise, dirt and confusion. Also, some books and periodicals will not be shelved in their proper places.

The Library staff will do whatever it can to minimize disruptions and will help users find dislocated materials. In conjunction with the reupholstering of the Library's furniture, this temporary inconvenience will result in a much improved atmosphere in which to work and study.

Flu Vaccine

A limited supply of flu vaccine is available for faculty, staff and students at a cost of $5.

As a routine, vaccine should not be given to persons who have an allergic response to eggs. Persons who are currently ill, with fever, should not be vaccinated until symptoms are improved.

Please call the Health Center at 543-6161 to arrange for your vaccination.

Duitscher Top Ruritan

Dave Duitscher, an employee of the Computer Center, has been honored as the "Ruritan of the Year" by the Delmarva-New Jersey District. He was presented with a plaque at the District's Convention at Sharptown.

He was selected from 48 clubs in the District with a total membership of 1,350.

Selection was made based on attendance at national, district and zone (local) meetings, as well as 325 hours of volunteer work in communities which received club support.

He also enjoyed perfect attendance at his own Beaver Run Club.

Attention December Graduates

Commencement Exercises will be held on Sunday, December 18, at 3 p.m. in the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center. Further information regarding graduation will follow shortly.

Assistant Professor Position

Salisbury State University seeks to fill a full-time tenure track position starting February, 1989. The position requires an earned doctorate in physiological psychology or experimental psychology with an emphasis in physiological psychology. Applicants should be prepared to teach introductory psychology, physiological psychology, sensation and perception, and others according to qualifications. The teaching load is four courses per semester. Advising undergraduate and MA students, supervision of MA theses, research, and college service also are expected. Complete application consists of current vita, official transcripts, evidence of teaching effectiveness, three letters of recommendation, and a letter of application describing the applicant's qualifications. Undergraduate teaching effectiveness will be emphasized because the primary mission of SSU is teaching. Application deadline is December 15. Applications postmarked after December 15 will be screened only if position is not filled. Send application to: Dr. Ron Ulm, Coordinator, Search and Screen Committee, Department of Psychology, Salisbury State University, Salisbury, MD 21801. SSU is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer. Qualified women, minorities and disabled persons are encouraged to apply.

Education Faculty Positions

Salisbury State University's School of Education and Professional Studies seeks applicants for two tenure-track positions in education. The effective date of appointment will be August 15, 1989, although the possibility exists of a spring 1989 appointment depending upon availability. The rank and salary for both positions are envisioned at the assistant professor level, with the possibility of a creative arrangement for an experienced school administrator. Minimum requirements include an earned doctorate, relevant experience in education, and evidence of teaching excellence.

The successful candidates will teach and advise students in both the undergraduate and graduate education programs of the school. Expertise in two or more of the following prioritized areas is expected: elementary education, administration/supervision, secondary/middle school education, reading/language arts, classroom management, highly able students, educational media.

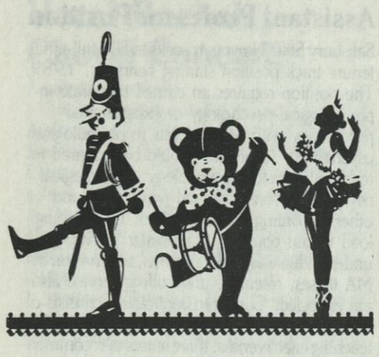
The deadline for applications is December 7, or until both positions have been filled. Send vita and letter of application to Dr. Charles Long, Chair, Search Committee, Caruthers Hall, Salisbury State University, Salisbury, MD 21801. Salisbury State is an Equal Opportunity, Affirmative Action Employer and encourages qualified women, minorities and the disabled to apply.

Cleary Curator

John Cleary, professor of art, will be one of seven past curators of the Academy of Arts to exhibit their works at the 30th anniversary exhibition, "Curatorial Selections- Academy Curators as Artists." The exhibition opens at the Academy in Easton with a reception from 5 to 7 p.m. on Friday, December 2, and continues through Saturday, January 14.

Using oils and mixed media to produce large, abstract works, Cleary's paintings have been included in several national invitational and juried shows, including "1987 Artscape," at Maryland Institute, College of Art; LaGrange National in LaGrange, GA; the National Print and Drawing Exhibition at AAO Gallery in Buffalo, NY; and the Kansas Ninth National Small Painting, Drawing and Print Exhibition at the Fort Hays State University Art Gallery.

The exhibition is free and open to the public. For further information, call the Academy at 822-0455.



SSU Children's Theatre Presents "Winnie the Pooh"

A stage adaptation of the beloved children's classic, "Winnie the Pooh," will be presented by SSU's Children's Theatre on Saturday, December 3, at 10 a.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium.

The production has been performed before elementary school audiences in Pocomoke City, Snow Hill, Princess Anne and Pittsville, as well as Salisbury. The SSU appearance is open to the general public.

Based on A.A. Milne's children's stories, the hour-long stage adaptation features such favorite storybook characters as Eeyore the donkey, the wise owl and of course, the shy, bashful Pooh bear.

Adapted and directed by Craig Pettinati, a senior Communication Arts major, the cast features Jane Cleveland as Pooh, Shelly Sanger as Christy Robbin, Keven Endres as the rabbit, Susan Pendelton as Kanga, Jamie Bentkowski as Roo, Penny Austin as Eeyore, Shelly Hubell as the Owl, Jennette Hillard, Kim Arthur and Valerie Gaberelsen as baby rabbits and David Tang as the narrator.

Heather Campbell is stage manager. Costumes are donated by Chesapeake College. Admission is free to SSU students, faculty and staff. Call the Communication Arts Department at 543-6233 for further information.

Ward Open House

The Ward Foundation's Gift Shop, located in Holloway Hall, is celebrating the holiday season with an Open House on Friday, December 2, from 5-9 p.m.

The public is invited to enjoy a festive evening of light refreshments and holiday music, while browsing among the shop's many gifts that reflect the special touch of the Eastern Shore.

The Museum Gift Shop not only showcases the work of renown wildfowl artists and carvers, but it also offers such items as hand-painted Christmas ornaments, handcrafted birdhouses and feeders, and a wide variety of books for wildfowl enthusiasts.

During the "Holiday Open House," there will be free admission to the Ward Foundation museum. The museum's Herrington Gallery is featuring "Women in Wildfowl Art," a special exhibit recognizing the work of six award-winning women carvers.

Outdoor Club Meeting

The next Outdoor Club meeting will be held at 6 p.m. on Monday, December 5, and will feature information on the Winter Term skiing trip in Montreal and the upcoming Club Social on December 10. All interested are urged to attend.

Montreal Ski Trip

Again this year, the Outdoor Club trip over Winter Term will be in Shawbridge, Quebec for cross-country and downhill skiing. Trip dates will be January 16-27.

Cross-country skiing can be done in the vicinity of Shawbridge on some 50 miles of wooded trails maintained by the McGill University Outing Club. Downhill skiing is available on the finest slopes in the Laurentians, including Mont St. Sauveur, Mont Ste. Anne and Mont Tremblant. Prior experience is strongly recommended for downhill skiers; it is not necessary for cross-country skiers. The trip includes a three-day side trip to the city of Quebec with opportunites for both sightseeing and skiing there.

The trip this year will feature 10 days in Canada with departure from SSU at 6 a.m. on January 16 and return on the evening of January 27. Cost including lodging, transportation and meals while in Canada will be $160. This does not include rental fees for cross-country skis ($3 Canadian per day at the McGill house), rental fees for downhill skis or lift tickets (about $20 Canadian per day or lower with student discount). Downhill skis may be rented in Salisbury for the entire trip or by the day at the slopes in Canada.

A place on the trip may be guaranteed by giving a non-refundable deposit of $50 to club treasurer, Heather Baldwin, at the meeting on December 5 or 12. Club meetings are held at 6 p.m. on Mondays in Nanticoke A of the University Center. The balance will be due by January 6.

Annapolis Brass Holiday Concert

The Annapolis Brass Quintet will perform its annual holiday concert on Sunday, December 4. Sponsored by the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council this traditional holiday concert will begin at 6:30 p.m. at the Sheraton Salisbury. Tickets are $12 ($10 members). Student rush tickets are also available for $6 each and may be purchased only at the door on an as-available basis.

Tickets may be purchased at any of the 11 branches of Peninsula Bank or the two John Hanson Savings Banks in Salisbury. For more information contact the Arts Council at 543-ARTS or stop by the office located in the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center.

The Annapolis Brass Quintet's season in Salisbury is made possible in part by grants from the National Endowment for the Arts and the Maryland State Arts Council.

Legislative Tea

The campus community is invited to the annual Legislative Tea sponsored by the Wicomico County League of Women Voters, the Salisbury State University Association of University Professors and, for the first time, the SSU Student Democratic and Republican Clubs. The Tea will be held Sunday, December 4, from 3-5 p.m. in the Social Room of Holloway Hall.

The Delegates to the Maryland State Legislature from the 37th and 38th Districts will be the guests of honor as will the state senators from this area. The event provides constituents with an oportunity to share ideas and concerns with their representatives.

Get to know your "men in Annapolis" in a friendly, informal setting.

Call Carol Bosserman, 543-6020, for more information.

Miniature Art Show

The Art Institute and Gallery of Salisbury announces that its next exhibit will be a miniature art show titled, "Tiny Jewels." This exhibit in Gallery II will hang from December 5 to January 6.

All artists 18 years and older, professional or amateur, may enter. Entries will be accepted on Saturday, December 3, from 9 a.m.-noon at the Gallery. If necessary, other arrangements can be made by calling in advance. There is a limit of eight entries per artist.

A qualified judge will present awards and ribbons on Sunday, December 11, at a reception from 1-3 p.m. Artists and guests are invited. Awards will be: first place, $75; second place, $50; third place, $25; and honorable mention ribbons. Many works will be for sale.

A one-man show by Tom Jones will hang in Gallery I at the same time.

Telephone 546-4748 for further information, or call Phyllis Billman at 546-0313.

Holiday Art Sale Begins December 7

The Art Department's Annual Holiday Art Sale again is offering shoppers original gifts in all price ranges, with profits going to student scholarships.

This year the sale will be held in the Atrium Gallery of the University Center on Wednesday and Thursday, December 7 and 8, from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; and Friday and Saturday, December 9 and 10, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

This is the fifth year for the sale which has grown from its original one afternoon to now four days of shopping. Last year enough money was raised to support two scholarships for incoming freshmen.

"The sale's popularity might be attributed to the quality, variety and originality of the selections," said Marie Tator Quillen, faculty coordinator. Prices range from one dollar for unique one-of-a-kind ornaments, to several hundred dollars for major works of art. Other selections include pottery, prints and photographs, many by regional artists with national reputations.

Returning this year are painter Alice Jackson and potter Beth Fusaro, both of Salisbury; Dan and Rhonda Heinecke, owners of Shore Fire Pottery in Rehoboth Beach; and painter Vesna Dovis and her husband, potter and artist Jose Dovis, of Exmore, VA. Originally from Italy, the Dovis's work has been exhibited and sold around the world.

Two new artists contributing to the sale are painters Dolores Powell who works in the SSU Communication Arts Department and Rhonda Bates Brennan of Rehoboth Beach.

Works by students, alumni and faculty also will be sold. They include the Art Department's John Cleary, Marie T. Quillen, Kent Kimmel, Dean Peterson, Jean Anderton, Art Welby, and Kent and Robin English.

"I am particulary pleased by the quality of the work being submitted by our students," said Quillen. "Our department is growing and our students are making great strides in professionalism. I feel some of the best art students we've ever had are now graduating. I think the public is going to be impressed by their work." Four of the students whose works are in the sale are Sharon Gribbin-Lindemon, Ed Cox, Jan Hills and Angie Herbert Hodges.

Gribbin-Lindemon is a Bachelor of Fine Arts senior who has had three exhibits at the Art Institute and Gallery of Salisbury in the last two years. Her speciality is abstract oil painting.

Ed Cox, a B.A. student, has painted everything from watercolor landscapes, to graphics on motorcycles, helmets and tee-shirts. He has had one-man shows while in the Army in Munich, Germany, and at Equitable Bank in Salisbury.

Jan Hills, is a senior B.A. student who will be selling functional pottery. She has worked at the Academy of the Arts in Easton and has apprenticed with the Heineckes at their studio.

Angie Herbert Hodges is a part-time student originally from England whose speciality is water colors.

"What is becoming an art sale tradition and generally great fun with patrons," said Quillen, "is a selection of door prizes." Over 20 items will be given to lucky customers. For every $10 worth of purchases a ticket will be placed in the drawing box making the patron eligible for one or more prizes. To be given are gift certificates and specialty items including a dinner for two at Basil's Restaurant valued at more than $50. Participating local merchants besides Basil's are City Florist of the City Center, Art Express, Legends, The SSU Book Rack, The Gallery, Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council, Johnny and Sammy's, English's Restaurant, Baskin Robbins, Foto-Lab in the Salisbury Mall, Domino's, La Roma, Lombardi's, Ponzetti's, Tony's Pizza, Thurston's Studio and Dunkin' Donuts. Printing services are donated by Minute Man Press. The drawing for the prizes is Saturday, December 10, at 4 p.m. Winners will be notified.

All donations are tax deductible. "Our goal is to increase the amount of scholarships available for fall freshmen art students," said Quillen. For more information contact the Art Department office at (301) 543-6270 or Marie Quillen at 543-6273.

Library Copiers

Blackwell Library's new copiers have been installed. The new copiers do not take coins. Debit cards must be used instead.

These cards can be purchased at the Library's circulation desk, in even dollar amounts.

Community Organizer/ Parent Advocacy Support

State of Maryland has received a three-year federal grant to develop an integrated service delivery system for mentally distressed/emotionally disturbed children and adolescents in Maryland.

A key component of the program is an effort to develop a parents support-advocacy network for families of these children. The incumbent of this position must have a minimum of a baccalaureate degree with knowledge of the Youth Service System and mental health issues.

In addition, management, organizational and group leadership skills are essential. The position will be based in Baltimore. Salary is $25-27,000 depending on experience and qualification.

Deadline for applications is December 15, 1988. Send cover letter and resume to: Dr. Marvin Tossey, Chairman, Department of Social Work, Salisbury State University, Salisbury, Md., 21801.

Salisbury State University is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer. Qualifed minorities, women and the disabled are encouraged to apply.

Cookie Colloquium

"Psychotherapy As A Search For Truth" will be presented by Dr. Barry Shreve of the Psychology Department at a Cookie Colloquium on Thursday, December 1, at 3:30 p.m. in Caruthers Hall, room 418. The event is sponsored by the Philosophical Society and Phi Sigma Tau. Discussion and refreshments will follow the presentation. All are welcome.

Attention Student Renters

Do you currently live in rental housing in the community, or are you considering moving off campus into rental property?

Plan to attend an information session sponsored by the Town-Student Coalition on Tuesday, December 6, at 6 p.m. in Nanticoke A of the University Center. Learn how to avoid lease problems, landlord problems, police problems and neighbor problems- or if you're having problems, how you can deal with them.

For more information, call Bob Heid at the Student Senate Office at 543-6183 or Barry King in the Office of the Dean of Students at 543-6080.

Elwell Presentation

Dr. Mary Ellen Elwell, associate professor of Social Work, presented a paper at Social Work '88: Choices and Challenges, the National Social Work Conference in Philadelphia in early November.

Written with Michael Cenci, a colleague from Family and Children's Services of Central Maryland, the paper described a process implemented in two counties to secure local government funding for a specialized treatment program for incestuous families.

The annual social work conference is the largest meeting of the profession and draws participants from across the country with widely varied interests.

Biology Department Offers Winter Term Courses

The Biology Department is offering the following courses during the upcoming Winter Term in January:

Risk Management Task Force Proposal for Access Control in Residence Halls

Proposed

1. Installation of system to include phone in each student's room with entrance phones for Chester, Choptank, Manokin, Nanticoke, Pocomoke and Wicomico halls.

2. 24-hour locking of residence halls.

3. Bathroom locks installed in Manokin, Nanticoke, Pocomoke and Wicomico halls.
4. Secure basement windows by installation.
5. Postpone implementing desk attendant system.

Rationale

1. Enhanced communication between visitors and residents; enhanced communication between residents, campus departments, family and friends; savings in installation and long-distance rates.
2. Phone system allows bona fide vistors access when residents are in room.
3. Need to secure bathrooms as in Chester and Choptank halls
4. Preclude access through basement windows.
5. Would require "sealing" all doors except one to egress except in emergency; cost of system.

Request for Comment

Open Hearing—An open hearing will be held at 5:30 p.m. on Thursday, December 1, in the Pocomoke Room of the University Center to hear comments from members of the campus community.

Written Comments—Persons unable to attend the open hearing may submit written comments to the Risk Management Task Force c/o the Office of the Dean of Students, Room 212, University Center by December 7.

Gull Cagers Feast on Fire

by Barry Packer
Sports Information Director

It had all of the flair of the actual Olympic Games.

Both teams, full rosters instead of starting line-ups, were introduced and stood on their respective foul lines.

The national anthems of first, Finland, and then the United States were played.

Both teams had the traditional exchange of gifts.

There were representatives from both Salisbury television stations and newspapers and one of the local radio stations.

And there was basketball, and a 76-68 win for Salisbury over Finland's top amateurs.

It was a match within a match, just as many Olympic contests are.

It featured Salisbury's Andre Foreman and Finland's Gordon Herbert, which really doesn't sound like the rest of the names on his team like Ismo Vanninen.

Foreman and Herbert matched each other shot for shot-play for play.

Foreman ended the night shooting 11 for 14, including a pair of monstrous slam dunks. Herbert was 10 for 18, including burying four three-pointers. While Herbert outscored Foreman 29-26, Foreman took control on the boards, outrebounding Herbert 13-6. Herbert who played collegiately at the University of Idaho, also chipped in with three assists, two blocks and a steal. Foreman came up with a pair of assists, one block and five steals.

The contest was knotted at 10 before the visitors ran off seven straight points. Four Pat Williams points cut the lead at 23-22 before Finland went on a 9-4 run. With four seconds left in the half, a Bryan Mackall shot cut the Forssan Alku (the team name) to two.

In the first six minutes of the second half, it was Foreman, and Foreman, and Foreman.

The sophomore sensation took matters into his own hands, and in the first 5:50 after intermission, he poured in six points and dished off two assists, as the Gulls went from a 36-34 deficit to a 50-42 lead.

The Gulls maintained the lead through the rest of the contest, even though Herbert, Vanninen and company did manage to score the next seven points after the Gulls opened the lead to eight.

And, while no team likes to lose, and while the intensity, determination and heart were all there, it was a chance to play a game that didn't matter. It was a chance for Gull coach Ward Lambert to see what some of his players who ordinarily wouldn't get the playing time could do.

And, it was a chance for those who were there to say that they were at the "Olympics."

Rossi Elected Prez

Dr. Geraldine Rossi, Literacy Task Force chair from the School of Education and Professional Studies, was elected 1988-89 president for the Maryland Council of Teachers of Mathematics recently.

MCTM is a professional organization of more than 750 teachers of mathematics in Maryland and bordering states. Members teach mathematics at all levels of education, elementary school through the university level.

MCTM encourages an active interest in mathematics and its teaching, and works toward the improvement of mathematics education programs in Maryland. One of the purposes of MCTM is to facilitate the exchange of ideas and facts about current problems, techniques and experimental programs in the teaching of mathematics by providing such resources as conferences, meetings, newsletter, journal, research studies and information services.

MCTM issues The Banneker Banner, its official journal twice a year. Maryland Council of Teachers of Mathematics is affiliated with The National Council of Teachers of Mathematics.

Rubin Presentation

Sharon Rubin, dean of the School of Liberal Arts, gave the closing address, "Public Selves, Private Selves: Promoting Student Development Through Community Service," at the Virginia State Conference on Student Community Service in Charlottesville, VA, recently. The conference was an effort to bring all the public and private colleges and universities in Virginia together to discuss not only how colleges can develop effective student community service programs, but how colleges can work collaboratively toward this goal.

She also gave the keynote address at this fall's preconference workshop of the New York Cooperative Education and Experiential Education Association's annual conference in Rochester, NY. The address was titled, "Experiential Learning and the Curriculum: The Next Challenge."

At the National Society for Internships and Experiential Education's annual conference in Minneapolis, she was re-elected vice-president (president-elect). At that conference she gave a welcome address, served as a facilitator for a workshop on community service-learning and gave a workshop, "Leadership for Institutional Change."

Social Work Department To Administer NIMH Project

The Maryland Child and Adolescent Service System Program (CAASP) grant contact has been awarded to SSU by the Mental Health Administration (MHA). The project will be administered through the University's Department of Social Work under the direction of Marving Tossey chairman.

CASSP is a federal initiative launched by the National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH) in 1983 to help states plan for the needs of seriously emotionally disturbed children and adolescents.

Devised to create a comprehensive system of care that will reduce fragmentation among services to severely emotionally disturbed children, the CASSP grant will provide $150,000 per year for the next three-to-five years. The University will work closely with the NIMH, MHA and other state and local agencies.

The goal of CASSP is to reduce confusion, overlaps and service gaps that currently face the families of disturbed youth. This will be done by the development of cooperative agreements between state agencies, changes in state regulations and where necessary through the drafting of new legislation.

The contract marks the first time that MHA has entered into an agreement with a university outside Baltimore City. The partnership between SSU and MHA is a unique model which will be watched closely by NIMH as a possible pilot for other direct service/academic combined efforts.

Tossey said, "We are excited about the project because it puts us in the policy arena and provides challenging research possibilities. Too often the planners and policy makers and academics do not communicate; this project will break down those traditional barriers. After all, social work is an applied field."

The Social Work Department intends to use this project to explore the possibilities of other joint efforts with the state and federal service delivery systems.

game set to operatic music by Donizetti, Mozart and Verdi. Sean Hilber, a quarterback in high school, also performs here.

This year's concert is very dramatic with two "voice dances," Turner continued. In one she reprises her solo tribute to artist Georgia O'Keefe, which Turner performed in 1987's winter concert. There is no music, only narration. In the other, choreographed by guest artist Trina Collins, director of Danceteller, a modern dance company in Philadelphia, she takes lines from Shakespeare and places them against a music background by Weather Report, a '60s jazz group. Called "Gravy," this popular work has been performed all over the east coast, said Turner.

Holly Boda, a graduate assistant in dance, examines the reactions of people having to wait in line in a performance piece called "Nest." Choreographed to music from "Faust" by Charles Gounod, "Next" includes "pedestrian" dance movement and a lot of humor, Turner added.

Ron Armstrong, a local resident who is a company member, also includes humor in a piece he choreographed, "Chamber of Dreams," a percussive, abstract work. The music originally was written for Twyla Tharp's "The Catherine Wheel."

"Chain Reaction" is the title of a jazz dance choreographed by students Carol King and Jodi Start. Set to synthesizer music, "My reaction is that 'Chain Reaction' is a tribute to Busby Berkeley," Turner said.

Michelle Masucci, an SSU alumna, and Suzetter Brown, a current student, explore both the British influence and African roots of Caribbean dance in "Beat of Dance."

Finally, Washington, who was known for his long, swift strides on the athletic field now moves to three-quarter time in an old-fashioned waltz performed with Boda in grand ball room style.

Performances are Friday and Saturday, December 9 and 10, at 8 p.m., with a matinee on Sunday, December 11, at 2 p.m., in Holloway Hall Auditorium. Admission is free for SSU students, faculty and staff.

The Soldiers' Chorus has performed in all 50 states, Canada, Mexico, the United Kingdom, Europe, the Far East, Central and South America, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. It was honored in 1961 when selected to sing at the prayer breakfast for the late President John F. Kennedy following his inauguration.

Notable performances since the inception of the Chorus have included concerts at the New York, Seattle and Knoxville World's Fairs, EXPO '67, at Carnegie Hall, New York's Lincoln Center, the Mormon Tabernacle in Salt Lake City, and at the Hollywood Bowl. The group has also appeared in the Meriweather Post Pavilion in Columbia, MD, on the Esplanade in Boston, in Philadelphia's Robin Hood Dell, at Disneyland and Walt Disney World, and the Garden State Arts Center in Holmdel, NJ.

In addition, it was recently featured during the rededication of the Statue of Liberty in New York on July 4, 1986 and performed in the Berlin Philharmonic on November 30, 1987 as a tribute to the Bicentennial of the United States Constitution.

Acclaimed as one of the finest vocal groups now appearing before the public, the Soldiers' Chorus has performed frequently on network radio and television.

The Field Band is supporting the Maryland Food Banks and its "Sharing is Caring" food drive. The band encourages all those attending the concert to bring a donation of nonperishable food items for distribution by the Food Bank.

For more information call the University Center at 543-6100.

Nina Cassian

Cassian to Read December 8

Romanian poet Nina Cassian will read her poems (in English) at 8 p.m. on Thursday, December 8, in the Social Room of Holloway Hall. The event is free, and the public is welcome.

Nina Cassian, who emigrated to the United States in 1985, was born in Galati, Romania, in 1924. She published her first volume of poetry in 1947 and has since published over 50 books, including 23 volumes of poetry and seven volumes of selected poems, 12 children's books in verse, and three volumes of fiction. Recently, The New Yorker has begun to feature her work, and W. W. Norton & Company plans to publish a Selected Poems in 1989. Three collections of her poems have already appeared in English: Blue Apple (1982), Lady of Miracles (1985), and Call Yourself Alive? (1988). Her poems have been translated into French, German, Russian, Italian and Greek. Cassian, in turn, has translated into Romanian two of Shakespeare's plays and volumes of poetry by Paul Celan, Bertolt Brecht and Yannis Ritsos.

While in her native Romania, Cassian won two Writers' Union Awards, a State Prize, and a Bucharest Writers' Association Award. Here in the United States, she has been a Fulbright fellow, a participant in the International Writing Program at the University of Iowa, a visiting professor at New York University, and a special guest at the 1986 P.E.N. Congress. She recently gave readings with Czeslow Milosz in Berkeley and Stanley Kunitz in New York City.

In addition to writing poetry, fiction and children's verse, Ms. Casssian also composes chamber and symphonic music, illustrates her own books, and writes film, literary and music criticism.

December 1988 Commencement

President of Bard College Is Commencement Speaker

Leon Botstein, president of Bard (NY) College, will be the Commencement speaker at the University's fall graduation exercises on Sunday, December 18, at 3 p.m. at the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center. He also will receive the Honorary Doctorate of Humane Letters.

"Dr. Botstein is one of the leading educators in the country today," said Dr. K. Nelson Butler, vice president of Academic Affairs at SSU, "and at the forefront of developing critical thinking among students. We are honored to have him as a speaker as well as conferring an honorary degree upon him in recognition of his outstanding contributions to higher education."

Botstein, who led a faculty workshop on critical thinking at SSU just prior to the beginning of the fall semester, has been the president of Bard since 1975. A private, coeducational liberal arts college founded in 1860, Bard has some 800 students pursuing Bachelor of Arts degrees in a variety of divisions. Central to its approach, however, is an effort to carefully plan and assess each student's intellectual growth and development throughout the undergraduate years.

In the three weeks prior to the fall semester, freshmen are required to participate in the Workshop in Language and Thinking. The workshop is designed to improve students' ability to use language, to increase their understanding of the ways in which thought and language are linked and to enable them to express their thoughts effectively in writing and speech. Students' work is ungraded to promote experiment and change; assignments consist primarily of intensive reading and writing sessions and critical discussions with fellow freshmen and members of the faculty.

In the second semester of the sophomore year, students write papers evaluating the first two years of their studies and present proposals for the final two years. Small seminars, tutorials and independent projects become predominant in students' remaining two years, culminated by the required senior project, a major piece of independent work. The senior project can take the form of scientific research; an essay in the disciplines of social sciences; a translation or a critical essay in languages and literature; creative work in writing, music, painting, drawing, sculpture, film or photography; or performances in drama, dance or music.

Botstein, earned his B.A. in history from the University of Chicago and his A.M. and Ph.D. in history from Harvard University. His numerous awards and honors include: Rockefeller Fellow, the Aspen Institute for Humanistic Studies; Annual Award, the National Conference of Christians and Jews; a Sloan Foundation Urban Fellowship; a Danforth Foundation Fellowshp; a Woodrow Wilson Fellowship; and the Howell Murray Alumni Award from the University of Chicago. He also received an Honorary Doctorate in Humane Letters from Cedar Crest (PA) College.

Richard A. Henson

Henson to Receive Honorary Doctorate

Richard A. Henson, founder and chairman of Henson Aviation, will receive an Honorary Doctorate of Humane Letters at the University's fall Commencement at the Wicomico County Civic Center on Sunday December 18, at 3 p.m.

"Salisbury State and the entire region are privileged," said Dr. K. Nelson Butler, vice president of Academic Affairs at SSU, "to have in our midst an individual such as Richard Henson who has done so much to improve the quality of life on the Eastern Shore. The success of Henson Aviation, and Mr. Henson's personal generosity to Salisbury State and other worthwhile organizations allow us all to continue to thrive not only economically, but intellectually and culturally as well."

Henson's Salisbury-based airline serves this and 41 other cities from New England to the Bahamas.

The airline and its founder have been pioneers in commuter flight service, a concept in aviation which has been described by aviation authorities as "the most important force in the air transport industry in the 1980's."

Henson Airlines began in 1931 when Henson, at the age of 21, started the Henson Flying Service in his hometown of Hagerstown with a single Challenger biplane with two open cockpits.

During World War II he was a test pilot for Fairchild Industries in Hagerstown then developing and manufacturing training and fighting planes for this nation's wartime flyers. On the side he developed his own training program turning civilians into Navy pilots who came to be known as Henson's ensigns.

After the war he turned his ideas and expertise as a flyer toward civil aviation and in 1967 started the first commuter service for Allegheny Airlines connecting Hagerstown to Baltimore and Washington.

Within a year he started a similar service in Salisbury, replacing Allegheny's infrequent and uncertain flights with a full daily schedule of commuter flights to Baltimore and Washington.

In 1981 he moved his corporate headquarters to Salisbury describing this as, "the model commuter city in the United States."

After a period of phenomenal growth he sold the airline to Piedmont Aviation Inc. in 1983, staying on as the very active chairman and chief executive officer.

Allegheny, meanwhile, became USAir and bought Piedmont in 1987 bringing Henson full circle to the line with which he developed the concept of commuter flight.

Last month Henson, at the age of 78, stepped down as chief executive, but will continue as chairman of Henson Aviation. Henson has moved not only his company headquarters but his own personal base to Salisbury.

His generosity to this community has been awesome. His big commitment has been to young people.

His gifts include $1.5 million to the Boy Scouts of America and to the scout camp on the Nanticoke river, $2 million to establish a scholarship fund at the University of Maryland Eastern Shore, a $1 million matching grant to build a new mid-Delmarva YMCA with an additional $1 million permanent endowment.

He has also endowed a permanent chaplaincy at Peninsula General Hospital and committed $1 million to the Community Foundation of the Eastern Shore, a group which creates and administers a permanent fund to help support local projects.

His most recent gift is $2.5 million to Salisbury State University for the creation of the Richard A. Henson School of Science and Technology. This endowment permits the enhancement of science and technological education through scholarships to outstanding students and increased funding for faculty research and development and new equipment.

Henson is personally active in the groups he helps support. He still flies his own Cessna Citation turbojet, often with his wife, Dorothy, 71, and is well known in control towers up and down the east coast.

Also receiving an Honorary Doctorate of Humane Letters is Dr. Leon Botstein, president of Bard (NY) College. Botstein also will be the Commencement speaker.

Community Organizer/ Parent Advocacy Support

State of Maryland has received a three-year federal grant to develop an integrated service delivery system for mentally distressed/emotionally disturbed children and adolescents in Maryland.

A key component of the program is an effort to develop a parents support-advocacy network for families of these children. The incumbent of this position must have a minimum of a baccalaureate degree with knowledge of the Youth Service System and mental health issues.

In addition, management, organizational and group leadership skills are essential. The position will be based in Baltimore. Salary is $25-27,000 depending on experience and qualification.

Deadline for applications is December 15, 1988. Send cover letter and resume to: Dr. Marvin Tossey, Chairman, Department of Social Work, Salisbury State University, Salisbury, Md., 21801.

Salisbury State University is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer. Qualifed minorities, women and the disabled are encouraged to apply.

Voice Recitals Choral Concerts

Monday, December 12, 8 p.m., Caruthers Auditorium. Private voice students of Turner and Karna present an evening of vocal music.

You Snooze, You Looze $$$$

Any student not returning to the residence halls for spring semester must submit in writing a petition to be released from their housing contract and a refund of their room deposit to the Housing Office by January 1.

Personal Counseling

Personal counseling is provided for students by the Center for Personal and Professional Development (CPPD), located in the University Center, room 263. The CPPD is open from 8:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m., Monday - Friday. Appointments may be made in person or by calling 543-6070. Walk-in hours are 1 - 3 p.m., Monday - Thursday. All counseling is confidential and free of charge to SSU students.

University Forum Meeting

The Forum's Executive Committee has established the calendar of Forum meetings for the coming academic year. As in the past, all meetings will be on Tuesdays at 3:30 p.m. in DSH 149. The dates are as follows: Spring Semester: Feb. 14, Mar. 7, Apr. 4 and May 2.

The agenda for each of these meetings will be compiled by the Executive Committee eight days beforehand. If you wish to have an item placed on an agenda, you can do so by submitting the item in writing by the morning of the following Mondays: Feb. 6, Feb. 27, Mar. 27, Apr. 24.

Any member of the Executive Committee will be happy to receive your agenda items. They are Tom Jones, Forum chair (Biology), Dave Parker (Computer Science), John Tyvoll (Chemistry and Physics), Nayland Page (History), and Jim Thrash (Library).

Biology Department Offers Winter Term Courses

The Biology Department is offering the following courses during the upcoming Winter Term in January: Biology 101 (Fundamentals of Biology); Biology 215 & 216 (Human Anatomy & Physiology); Biology 217 (Nutrition); Biology 490 (Special Topics in Biology Virology); and Biology 490 (Special Topics in Biology: Tropical Marine Ecology).

Registration for all of these courses is limited. If interested in taking one of these courses, register at once.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Department of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever you may reside. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep your first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away from alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit area or a place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you need an escort to or from your car, call Public Safety at 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact Public Safety, located in HH room 022, 543-6222.

Library Recarpeting

Blackwell Library will be undergoing a recarpeting project beginning on December 22 and continuing through February 3.

Although this project very much needs to be done, it unfortunately means that during Winter Term there will be a certain amount of noise, dirt and confusion. Also, some books and periodicals will not be shelved in their proper places.

The Library staff will do whatever it can to minimize disruptions and will help users find dislocated materials. In conjunction with the reupholstering of the Library's furniture, this temporary inconvenience will result in a much improved atmosphere in which to work and study.

Flu Vaccine

A limited supply of flu vaccine is available for faculty, staff and students at a cost of $5.

As a routine, vaccine should not be given to persons who have an allergic response to eggs. Persons who are currently ill, with fever, should not be vaccinated until symptoms are improved.

Please call the Health Center at 543-6161 to arrange for your vaccination.

Tuberculosis Testing

The Health Center policy relative to TB testing has been changed. According to Dr. James Bowes, Wicomico County's Health Officer, Wicomico County has the highest case rate of TB in Maryland.

The Center for Disease Control recommends that "Tine" testing no longer be used.

The Health Center has ordered and will perform the Mantoux PPD intradermal skin test as soon as it has obtained the available materials.

Student teachers or workers who need to be tested immediately should call the Wicomico County Health Department at 749-1244 to make such arrangements.

Library Copiers

Blackwell Library's new copiers have been installed. The new copiers do not take coins. Debit cards must be used instead.

These cards can be purchased at the Library's circulation desk, in even dollar amounts.

Final Exams

Any student who has conflicting examination times or three or more examinations on the same day should contact the appropriate professor in order to make rescheduling arrangements. This should be done no later than Friday, December 9. The student should provide the professor, in writing, with his complete examination schedule including the names of his instructor.

In the event the student and the professor cannot work out an appropriate time for rescheduling an examination, the student must provide the information required in the above paragraph to the academic vice president no later than Monday, December 12. The student should include his address and phone number so that he can be reached as soon as the conflict has been resolved.

Library Exam Week Schedule

Risk Management Task Force Proposal for Access Control in Residence Halls

Proposed	Rationale
1. Installation of system to include phone in each student's room with entrance phones for Chester, Choptank, Manokin, Nanticoke, Pocomoke and Wicomico halls.	1. Enhanced communication between visitors and residents; enhanced communication between residents, campus departments, family and friends; savings in installation and long-distance rates.
2. 24-hour locking of residence halls.	2. Phone system allows bona fide vistors access when residents are in room.
3. Bathroom locks installed in Manokin, Nanticoke, Pocomoke and Wicomico halls.	3. Need to secure bathrooms as in Chester and Choptank halls
4. Secure basement windows by installation.	4. Preclude access through basement windows.
5. Postpone implementing desk attendant system.	5. Would require "sealing" all doors except one to egress except in emergency; cost of system.

Dean for the Richard A. Henson School of Science and Technology Sought

Salisbury State University invites nominations and applications for the position of Dean, Richard A. Henson School of Science and Technology, which was recently created as a result of an endowment from Mr. Richard A. Henson, founder and chairman of Henson Aviation. The endowment is specifically designed to enhance teaching and research within the School and to provide scholarships for outstanding students.

Responsibilities: The dean reports to the Vice President of Academic Affairs and is responsible for providing leadership to the 50 faculty members in the Departments of Biological Sciences, Computer Science, Geography and Regional Planning, Mathematical Sciences and Chemistry and Physics. The dean's obligations include the adminstration of personnel, resources, curriculum.

Qualifications: An earned doctorate in a scientific discipline, academic and administrative experience, and the demonstrated ability to communicate with relevant constituencies.

Salary: Competitive and commensurate with experience.

Salisbury State University is a comprehensive IIA public institution on Maryland's Eastern Shore, located between the Atlantic Ocean and the Chesapeake Bay. Founded in 1925, the University has over 5,000 students and offers 30 major courses of study across five schools.

Application procedure: The deadline for applications is January 31. The position is available beginning July 1. Send a resume and three letters of reference with current phone numbers to: Dr. Ben Fusaro, Chairman, Henson School of Science and Technology, Dean Search Committee, Department of Mathematical Science, Salisbury State University, Salisbury, MD 21801.

Salisbury State University is an Equal Opportunity, Affirmative Action Employer. Qualified women, minorities and the disabled are encouraged to apply.

Search Re-Opened—Director of Grants & Sponsored Programs

Salisbury State University is seeking an experienced person for the position of Director of Grants and Sponsored Programs. This person will report to the Vice President for Research and Development and will be expected to advance the University in obtaining grants and sponsors to support the research efforts of its faculty and administrators. The responsibilities of this position include: Working with academic administration and the faculty to identify areas of research interests. Identifying businesses, industries, foundations, and state and federal agencies which are sources of funds for sponsored research. Assisting faculty and academic administrators in preparing budgets for sponsored research they propose. Negotiating terms and conditions of research awards with sponsoring agencies. Notifying academic administrators and faculty of the terms and conditions of research awards and the schedules for compliance with these terms and conditions. Assuring the existence of administrative structure and faculty procedures required by the state and federal law relating to research with human and animal subjects. Supporting the development of faculty skills and research proposal writing through activities such as design and delivery of proposal writing workshops and development of a resources library.

In addition to these responsibilities, the successful candidate will have demonstrated expertise in directly securing sponsors for research and will have a significant experience in an agency which has demonstrated a high level of success in securing such sponsors. The successful applicant should have a high energy level, creativity in job approach and should have a proven track record in obtaining both institutional and individual grants from private and public sources. The salary is negotiable. Applications will be accepted until December 9 and should be sent in a letter accompanied by a resume which includes names, addresses and phone numbers of five references to: Dr. Gary Pielemeier, Vice President of Research and Development, Salisbury State University, 1101 Camden Avenue, Salisbury, MD 21801. Salisbury State University is an equal opportunity, affirmative action employer. Qualified women, minorities and the disabled are encouraged to apply.

Administrative Specialist Trainee

Physical Plant is seeking an administrative specialist trainee. This is a contractual position with no state benefits requiring 30-40 hours per week. Must be available for critical hours 7-9 a.m. and 2:30-4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Holding a degree in business, accounting or computer programming is a plus but not a necessity. Computer literacy is required. Position will provide computerized administrative assistance in work order control, preventative maintenance program control and energy management scheduling and customer service. Salary commensurate with experience. Send applications/resumes to: Director of Physical Plant, Salisbury State University, 1101 Camden Avenue, Salisbury, Maryland 21801 by December 7, 1988. Salisbury State University is an equal opportunity, affirmative action employer. Qualified women, minorities and disabled persons are encouraged to apply.

Veterans Affairs Coordinators

Several student staff vacancies exist in the University Veterans' Affairs office. Positions involve certifying the enrollment of eligible veterans, telephone and walk-in inquiries, liaison with V.A. regional office, providing basic counseling about college and advising veterans of their rights and responsibilities under the G.I. Bill.

No experience is required and training is provided. Each position provides flexible hours to fit class schedules and allows up to 250 hours at $3.35 per hour each semester and or summer session.

Interested veteran students should visit the V.A. office or the office of Retention and Special Academic Programs H.H. 245.

Salisbury State University is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer. Qualified women, minorities and the disabled are encouraged to apply.

Assistant Professor Position

Salisbury State University seeks to fill a full-time tenure track position starting February, 1989. The position requires an earned doctorate in physiological psychology or experimental psychology with an emphasis in physiological psychology. Applicants should be prepared to teach introductory psychology, physiological psychology, sensation and perception, and others according to qualifications. The teaching load is four courses per semester. Advising undergraduate and MA students, supervision of MA theses, research, and college service also are expected. Complete application consists of current vita, official transcripts, evidence of teaching effectiveness, three letters of recommendation, and a letter of application describing the applicant's qualifications. Undergraduate teaching effectiveness will be emphasized because the primary mission of SSU is teaching. Application deadline is December 15. Applications postmarked after December 15 will be screened only if position is not filled. Send application to: Dr. Ron Ulm, Coordinator, Search and Screen Committee, Department of Psychology, Salisbury State University, Salisbury, MD 21801. SSU is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer. Qualified women, minorities and disabled persons are encouraged to apply.

Education Faculty Positions

Salisbury State University's School of Education and Professional Studies seeks applicants for two tenure-track positions in education. The effective date of appointment will be August 15, 1989, although the possibility exists of a spring 1989 appointment depending upon availability. The rank and salary for both positions are envisioned at the assistant professor level, with the possibility of a creative arrangement for an experienced school administrator. Minimum requirements include an earned doctorate, relevant experience in education, and evidence of teaching excellence.

The successful candidates will teach and advise students in both the undergraduate and graduate education programs of the school. Expertise in two or more of the following prioritized areas is expected: elementary education, administration/supervision, secondary/middle school education, reading/language arts, classroom management, highly able students, educational media.

The deadline for applications is December 7, or until both positions have been filled. Send vita and letter of application to Dr. Charles Long, Chair, Search Committee, Caruthers Hall, Salisbury State University, Salisbury, MD 21801. Salisbury State is an Equal Opportunity, Affirmative Action Employer and encourages qualified women, minorities and the disabled to apply.

Maintenance Service Worker I

Field Band Here

The U.S. Army Field Band and Soldiers' Chorus presents a free concert on Tuesday, December 13, at 8 p.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium. The event is co-sponsored by SSU and The Daily Times.

Tickets are available on a first come, first served basis from The Daily Times, the SSU University Center information desk and the U.S. Army Recruiting Office in the Twilley Center beginning Wednesday, November 30.

The band's concert repertoire is designed to appeal to all audiences, offering classical, semi-classical and popular selections, choral arrangements, novelty numbers and military marches on each of its programs.

Acclaimed as one of the finest vocal groups now appearing before the public, the Soldiers' Chorus has performed frequently on network radio and television.

The Field Band is supporting the Maryland Food Banks and its "Sharing is Caring" food drive. The band encourages all those attending the concert to bring a donation of nonperishable food items for distribution by the Food Bank.

For more information call the University Center at 543-6100.

Piano Recital

Salisbury State University piano students of Linda Cockey and Dr. Nancy Cooper will be performing a recital on Sunday, December 13, in Caruthers Auditorium at 8 p.m.

Works by Scarlatti, Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, Schubert, Chopin, Debussy, Ginastera and Granados will be played. Everyone is welcome to attend, free of charge.

Montreal Ski Trip

Again this year, the Outdoor Club trip over Winter Term will be in Shawbridge, Quebec for cross-country and downhill skiing. Trip dates will be January 16-27.

Cross-country skiing can be done in the vicinity of Shawbridge on some 50 miles of wooded trails maintained by the McGill University Outing Club. Downhill skiing is available on the finest slopes in the Laurentians, including Mont St. Sauveur, Mont Ste. Anne and Mont Tremblant. Prior experience is strongly recommended for downhill skiers; it is not necessary for cross-country skiers. The trip includes a three-day side trip to the city of Quebec with opportunities for both sightseeing and skiing there.

The trip this year will feature 10 days in Canada with departure from SSU at 6 a.m. on January 16 and return on the evening of January 27. Cost including lodging, transportation and meals while in Canada will be $160. This does not include rental fees for cross-country skis ($3 Canadian per day at the McGill house), rental fees for downhill skis or lift tickets (about $20 Canadian per day or lower with student discount). Downhill skis may be rented in Salisbury for the entire trip or by the day at the slopes in Canada.

A place on the trip may be guaranteed by giving a non-refundable deposit of $50 to club treasurer, Heather Baldwin, at the meeting on December 12. Club meetings are held at 6 p.m. on Mondays in Nanticoke A of the University Center. The balance will be due by January 6.

Holiday Art Sale Begins December 7

The Art Department's Annual Holiday Art Sale again is offering shoppers original gifts in all price ranges, with profits going to student scholarships.

This year the sale will be held in the Atrium Gallery of the University Center on Wednesday and Thursday, December 7 and 8, from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; and Friday and Saturday, December 9 and 10, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

This is the fifth year for the sale which has grown from its original one afternoon to now four days of shopping. Last year enough money was raised to support two scholarships for incoming freshmen.

"The sale's popularity might be attributed to the quality, variety and originality of the selections," said Marie Tator Quillen, faculty coordinator. Prices range from one dollar for unique one-of-a-kind ornaments, to several hundred dollars for major works of art. Other selections include pottery, prints and photographs, many by regional artists with national reputations.

Returning this year are painter Alice Jackson and potter Beth Fusaro, both of Salisbury; Dan and Rhonda Heinecke, owners of Shore Fire Pottery in Rehoboth Beach; and painter Vesna Dovis and her husband, potter and artist Jose Dovis, of Exmore, VA. Originally from Italy, the Dovis's work has been exhibited and sold around the world.

Two new artists contributing to the sale are painters Dolores Powell who works in the SSU Communication Arts Department and Rhonda Bates Brennan of Rehoboth Beach.

Works by students, alumni and faculty also will be sold. They include the Art Department's John Cleary, Marie T. Quillen, Kent Kimmel, Dean Peterson, Jean Anderton, Art Welby, and Kent and Robin English.

"I am particulary pleased by the quality of the work being submitted by our students," said Quillen. "Our department is growing and our students are making great strides in professionalism. I feel some of the best art students we've ever had are now graduating. I think the public is going to be impressed by their work." Four of the students whose works are in the sale are Sharon Gribbin-Lindemon, Ed Cox, Jan Hills and Angie Herbert Hodges.

Gribbin-Lindemon is a Bachelor of Fine Arts senior who has had three exhibits at the Art Institute and Gallery of Salisbury in the last two years. Her speciality is abstract oil painting.

Ed Cox, a B.A. student, has painted everything from watercolor landscapes, to graphics on motorcycles, helmets and tee-shirts. He has had one-man shows while in the Army in Munich, Germany, and at Equitable Bank in Salisbury.

Jan Hills, is a senior B.A. student who will be selling functional pottery. She has worked at the Academy of the Arts in Easton and has apprenticed with the Heineckes at their studio.

Angie Herbert Hodges is a part-time student originally from England whose speciality is water colors.

"What is becoming an art sale tradition and generally great fun with patrons," said Quillen, "is a selection of door prizes." Over 20 items will be given to lucky customers. For every $10 worth of purchases a ticket will be placed in the drawing box making the patron eligible for one or more prizes. To be given are gift certificates and specialty items including a dinner for two at Basil's Restaurant valued at more than $50. Participating local merchants besides Basil's are City Florist of the City Center, Art Express, Legends, The SSU Book Rack, The Gallery, Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council, Johnny and Sammy's, English's Restaurant, Baskin Robbins, Foto-Lab in the Salisbury Mall, Domino's, La Roma, Lombardi's, Ponzetti's, Tony's Pizza, Thurston's Studio and Dunkin' Donuts. Printing services are donated by Minute Man Press. The drawing for the prizes is Saturday, December 10, at 4 p.m. Winners will be notified.

All donations are tax deductible. "Our goal is to increase the amount of scholarships available for fall freshmen art students," said Quillen. For more information contact the Art Department office at (301) 543-6270 or Marie Quillen at 543-6273.

SSU Open House

The University invites all prospective students and their families to an Open House on Saturday, December 10, from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Originating in the Wicomico Room at the University Center, the Open House includes an informal coffee hour featuring presentations by faculty members and administrators about various aspects of the University and a walking tour of the campus and its facilities hosted by an SSU student. Individual counseling with representatives of the Admissions-Financial Aid Office is available at the conclusion of the Open House.

The University urges all students to visit SSU as part of the college selection process.

For more information on either Salisbury State University or the Open House, call the Admissions Office at 543-6160 locally or toll free (800)492-1175.

Snow Hill Museum Open

The Julia A Purnell Museum will be open for its Christmas celebration on Saturday and Sunday, December 10 and 11. This small history museum in Snow Hill features artifacts from the pre-colonial Indian cultures up to World War II.

The museum gift ship will be open throughout the weekend. The shop offers antique gifts and dried flower arrangements as well as reproductions of antique household knick knacks.

Hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on December 10, and from noon to 4 p.m. on December 11. Due to Snow Hill's annual Christmas parade on Saturday, access to the museum via Market Street will be restricted between 11 and 11:45 a.m.

The Purnell Museum is located at 208 West Market Street in Historic Snow Hill. For futher information or directions please call the museum at (301) 632-0515.

Gull Classic Weekend

By Barry Packer

Walk into the Maggs Physical Activities Center. And just as you peer around the corner of the first door looking into the basketball arena, it seems as though Phyllis Coleman is still standing there, some 22 feet out from the basket, with the perfect follow through.

It was a follow through that gave the Salisbury State women's basketball team the 1987 Gull Classic title and sent an aura of amazement through the air and put the crowd in a frenzy.

And, this weekend, the Gull women will shoot for their second straight title and third in the seven years of the tournament. The men, after falling in the championship game, will be out in an attempt to collect their seventh Gull Classic gold.

The event opens on Friday, December 9, at 3 p.m. when Gettysburg makes its first appearance, taking on last year's victim of the Coleman buzzer-beating three-pointer, Marymount. At 5 p.m., it will be a pair of first time visitors to the Gull Classic, when Guilford takes on Geneseo of New York.

The next few hours, the court will belong to the Sea Gulls and the Bobcats of Spring Garden. For Spring Garden, this will be their fourth straight showing. In 1984, the Bobcats finished third, before winning it all in 1985 and 1986. Last year, the Cats were beaten by Marymount in the opener, before beating Eastern in the consolation. This is also the fourth consecutive time for Spring Garden's men. The Bobcats finished fourth in 1984 and 1986, and third in 1985 and 1987.

The Sea Gull women, other than their three championships, have also collected three seconds and a third. The men have left with five seconds and one fourth.

Those championship prizes will be up for grabs on Saturday. The women's consolation is at 2 p.m., followed by the men's at 4 p.m. The women's championship is slated for 6 p.m. and the men's for 8 p.m.

Phyllis Coleman- nobody ever said dreams have to happen only once.

Eta Iota Initiation

The University's Eta Iota chapter of Phi Alpha Theta, the international honor society, recently initiated 20 students.

Phi Alpha Theta requires junior, senior and graduate students to have completed at least 12 semester hours in history courses. To be eligible, students must have an overall average of B in at least two-thirds of the remainder of their work. In addition, the students must rank in the top 35 percent of their classes.

Students newly initiated are: Claudia A. Backus, Valerie A. Lankford, Sharlene L. Lewis, Bon E. Mattax, Bruce E. Matthews and Mary-Timothy Ramsey, all of Salisbury; Patricia Baglieri of Ocean City; Cynthia Ann Towers Baker of Georgetown, DE; Marietta Bosco of Berlin; Mark Buzzell of Mt. Airy; Sandra Collins of Cheswold, DE; Amy Crittenden of Waldorf; Timothy A. Crockett and Michael Paul Palmer of Chester; Richard Grant of Pasadena; Elizabeth Keirans of Dunkirk; Robert Carroll Savage of Painter, VA; Garrett A. Taylor of Clinton; Thomas C. Williamson, Jr., of Berlin; and Stephen Zack, Jr., of Ocean View, DE.

Dance Company members rehearse

'Natural Born Movers' Spice Winter Dance Concert

Donald Washington, a six foot, 200 pound Salisbury State halfback who piled up impressive statistics this past season, has moved from dancing in the end zone to waltzing on stage.

Washington is one of two dozen students performing in the SSU Dance Company's "Winter Concert," which opens December 9 for three performances. The Dance Company, which is composed of students and community residents, has dancers with up to a decade's experience and training, as well as the enthusiastic beginner.

"I am impressed that the dancers who are trained and have experience do not look down upon those who are not," said Susan Turner, Dance Company director. "The experienced dancers understand I choose people by how they move." Turner teaches a "Dance and Education" course required of physical education majors. Most of the students are men, she said, and some, who are skilled athletes like Washington, are "natural born movers."

How does she feel about a football player in a dance concert? "I think it's wonderful, and we'll have a second player dancing with us next semester."

Art and sport intertwine in one of the concert pieces choreographed by Turner. She has a simultaneous football, basketball and baseball game set to operatic music by Donizetti, Mozart and Verdi. Sean Hilber, a quarterback in high school, also performs here.

This year's concert is very dramatic with two "voice dances," Turner continued. In one she reprises her solo tribute to artist Georgia O'Keefe, which Turner performed in 1987's winter concert. There is no music, only narration. In the other, choreographed by guest artist Trina Collins, director of Danceteller, a modern dance company in Philadelphia, she takes lines from Shakespeare and places them against a music background by Weather Report, a '60s jazz group. Called "Gravy," this popular work has been performed all over the east coast, said Turner.

Holly Boda, a graduate assistant in dance, examines the reactions of people having to wait in line in a performance piece called "Nest." Choreographed to music from "Faust" by Charles Gounod, "Next" includes "pedestrian" dance movement and a lot of humor, Turner added.

Finally, Washington, who was known for his long, swift strides on the athletic field now moves to three-quarter time in an old-fashioned waltz performed with Boda in grand ball room style.

Performances are Friday and Saturday, December 9 and 10, at 8 p.m., with a matinee on Sunday, December 11, at 2 p.m., in Holloway Hall Auditorium. Admission is free for SSU students, faculty and staff.

Cassian to Read December 8

Romanian poet Nina Cassian will read her poems (in English) at 8 p.m. on Thursday, December 8, in the Social Room of Holloway Hall. The event is free, and the public is welcome.

Nina Cassian, who emigrated to the United States in 1985, was born in Galati, Romania, in 1924. She published her first volume of poetry in 1947 and has since published over 50 books, including 23 volumes of poetry and seven volumes of selected poems, 12 children's books in verse, and three volumes of fiction. Recently, The New Yorker has begun to feature her work, and W. W. Norton & Company plans to publish a Selected Poems in 1989. Three collections of her poems have already appeared in English: Blue Apple (1982), Lady of Miracles (1985), and Call Yourself Alive? (1988). Her poems have been translated into French, German, Russian, Italian and Greek.

Cassian, in turn, has translated into Romanian two of Shakespeare's plays and volumes of poetry by Paul Celan, Bertolt Brecht and Yannis Ritsos.

While in her native Romania, Cassian won two Writers' Union Awards, a State Prize, and a Bucharest Writers' Association Award. Here in the United States, she has been a Fulbright fellow, a participant in the International Writing Program at the University of Iowa, a visiting professor at New York University, and a special guest at the 1986 P.E.N. Congress. She recently gave readings with Czeslow Milosz in Berkeley and Stanley Kunitz in New York City.

In addition to writing poetry, fiction and children's verse, Ms. Casssian also composes chamber and symphonic music, illustrates her own books, and writes film, literary and music criticism.

Gribbin-Lindemon Has Exhibit Saturday

The Art Department marks the upcoming anniversary of its Bachelor of Fine Arts program with the first one-person show by a B.F.A. student.

Sharon Gribbin-Lindemon of Salisbury will exhibit some two dozen of her pastel drawings, intaglio prints and oil paintings on Saturday, December 10, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in room 107 of the newly renovated Potomac Hall, formerly the old student center.

SSU's B.F.A. program is the only one of its kind at a state institution in Maryland and will celebrate its second anniversary in February.

"Sharon's work sets a standard of which our department is most proud. And she has an enthusiasm and optimism that makes her very special," said Marie Tator Quillen, acting chair of the Art Department.

Originally from Silver Spring, Gribbin-Lindemon graduated from high school in 1977, and studied art at a university in the Washington area. Turned off by classes with 40 and 50 students, and distant professors, she dropped out and eventually joined the Army Reserves.

After the Army, she worked for The Washington Post in advertising services and for Beaver Press. She moved to Salisbury and worked for the Ward Foundation as advertising director. After working in advertising, helping promote the art work of others, she decided she wanted to sell her own work.

That decision brought her to SSU where she is now a senior Bachelor of Fine Arts student. Her enthusiasm is evident as she explains why she enjoys the B.F.A. program. Gribbin-Lindemon has great respect for all of her art instructors at SSU and is particularly impressed with her B.F.A. advisor John Cleary. "John is very helpful and excited about my work, he offers constant encouragement," she said. An advantage that she finds constructive is the fact that a student can work with an instructor over a longer period of time. She explained that this, "allows the instructor to see the progression of a student's work."

Cleary has a mutual respect for Gribbin-Lindemon: "If I were to ask for an ideal student, I might find myself describing Sharon. She has goals, yet deals with reality and she has the energy and drive to pursue these goals, while remaining responsive and contemplative. She is ready to be challenged more completely on a graduate level or in the professional world of art."

Gribbin-Lindemon participated in a two-person show last spring. She also exhibited pieces in the most recent Senior Show at the University as well as the Art Institute and Gallery. Upon graduation she plans to attend graduate school to receive a Master's in Fine Art.

Education Students Visit D.C Schools

Seven secondary education students from Dr. Ann Taylor's class in the School of Education and Professional Studies visited three area high schools in Washington, D.C. during American Education Week.

On November 17, Martha Jane Dennis Holloway, Berlin; Carol Chester, Salisbury; Jeffrey Cottingham, Salisbury; Yvonne M. Hudson, Bishopville; Michele Palenchar, Princess Anne; Charles Palmer, Salisbury; and Christina Wroten, Cambridge were guests at a luncheon in their honor at Spingarn Senior High School. They conversed with students, teachers, administrators and counselors.

The SSU students observed and participated in Spingarn's special program emphasis in Spanish, academic reinforcement and the Oliver T. Carr Public School Partnership Program.

Students were guests of the Duke Ellington School for the Performing Arts on November 18. They were granted an opportunity to observe programs geared toward creative and talented students in the arts. While at Dunbar Senior High School, students observed its emphasis in pre-engineering for secondary students and the humanities.

"The experience was enlightening for the education majors," said Taylor. She hopes to offer other students in education the opportunity to participate in future field trips of this nature.

1988 Commencement Information

Please Read Carefully

General Information and Directions

1. Commencement will be held at 3 p.m., Sunday, December 18, in the Wicomico County Youth and Civic Center. No tickets will be required, but it is suggested that graduates limit their number of guests to no more than eight. All graduates are requested to form for processional at 2 p.m. in the side corridors adjacent to the main arena on the first floor of the Civic Center.

2. The Commencement speaker will be Dr. Leon Botstein, President, Bard College.

3. Caps, gowns, master's hoods, nursing pins and caps will be distributed through the University Bookstore beginning Monday, December 5. These may be retained by the graduates and need not be returned following the ceremony. Announcements may be purchased in the Bookstore, but quantities are limited and will be sold on a first come, first served basis. Problems with caps and gowns will be corrected prior to the ceremony by the Bookstore employees at the Civic Center, in the Flanders Room #1 near the snack bar to the left of the arena entrances. Bobby pins, etc. will also be available there. Normal Bookstore hours Monday through Friday are 9 a.m.-7 p.m. The Bookstore be open on Saturday, December 17, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Graduates must pick up the necessary items before 4 p.m. on that date.

4. The faculty marshals will give each graduate a 3x5 card containing his/her name and the School, (e.g. Perdue School of Business). You will be asked to stand by School and degree as you are presented to President Bellavance by your School Dean for the conferring of the degree. The card then is to be given to Dr. Nelson Butler when the graduate reaches the stage, and at the same time, the graduate is to announce his/her name. Dr. Butler will then know who the person is and how to pronounce the name correctly. The name on the card must not be changed for any reason.

5. During the recessional, graduates and faculty are to return to the area where they assembled prior to the ceremony. They should not stop or congregate in the lobby.

6. Degree candidates who do not plan to participate in the Commencement exercise, must notify the Registrar's Office by calling 543-6150 no later than Monday, December 12. All graduates will receive a blank folder at Commencement, and all diplomas will be mailed approximately six weeks after the ceremony.

7. Faculty and staff are requested to form for the processional at 2:15 p.m. in the Midway Room of the Civic Center. Faculty members are required to attend; those who are unable to do so should so inform their respective School dean.

8. The First Aid staff of the Civic Center will be on duty in the office on the right side of the foyer entrance just outside the main arena.

9. A brief reception for graduates and their guests will be held immediately following Commencement in the Midway Room of the Civic Center. The reception is being sponsored by the Salisbury State University Alumni Association and at the conclusion of the ceremony graduates become official alumni of Salisbury State University.

10. The School of Nursing will hold a Pinning Ceremony on Saturday, December 17 at 7 p.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium.

11. Bachelor of Science candidates will assemble in the North corridor of the Civic Center (to the left when entering from the front doors and on the side nearest the Mall). Candidates with last names beginning with the letter A through letter K (Lori Anne Krystopik) will report to Drs. Page and Shaffer and will line up alphabetically along the inside wall, facing East (the rear of the building). You will sit in Section 1 on the seating chart.

Candidates for the B.S. beginning with L (Richard Landon) through the letter Z will report to Drs. Steffes and Wulff, and will line up alphabetically along the windows facing West (the front of the building). You will sit in Section 6 on the seating chart.

12. The Bachelor of Arts and B.A.S.W. and B.F.A. candidates will assemble in the South corridor of the Civic Center (to the right after you enter the front doors on the side nearest to the Park). All candidates for the B.A. degree will report to Drs. St. Martin and White, and will line up alphabetically along the South wall (away from the main arena), facing East (the rear of the building). You will sit in Section 2 on the seating chart. Candidates for the B.A.S.W. and B.F.A. degrees report to Dr. Arlene White. She will direct you.

13. All Master's Degree Candidates (M.Ed., M.A., M.B.A., M.S.) will assemble in the South corridor of the Civic Center (to the right after you enter the front doors, and on the side nearest the Park). Please report to Drs. Hedeen and Lewis, and line up alphabetically by degrees in the corridor between the main arena and the Midway Room. You will sit in Section 3 on the seating chart.

14. Dress Code

This is a formal academic occasion and should be viewed as such in dress and demeanor.

The academic robe is black and the recommended dress, therefore, is:

A. Women

1. Black dress shoes (or some other dark color) - no white or other light color.
2. Dress hose.
3. A dress which does not have a high neckline or stand-up collar. It should not show above the V-neckline and white collar on the robe.

Since the academic robe has a zipper front closing, the dress will show only near the lower hem and, therefore, preferably should be a dark color, rather than white or very light.

4. No visible jewelry.
5. No flowers on the academic robe.

B. Men

1. Black dress shoes (or some dark color) no sneakers or light color sport shoes with thick rubber soles.
2. Dark color socks - no white athletic socks.
3. Dress slacks, preferably a dark or neutral color.
4. Dress shirt, preferably white, or a light color.
5. Dress tie (four-in-hand tie with windsor knot). (Shirt collar and tie will show above the V-neckline of the academic robe.)
6. Suit coat or sport coat will not be seen under the robe and is, therefore, optional.
7. No visible jewelry.

C. Both

1. The mortarboard (academic hat) is to be worn with the front point over the forehead below the front hairline, and so the flat board is parallel to the floor. (Not worn on the back of the head with the board pointing upward.) No decoration of any kind is to be placed on the mortarboard.

2. Candidates for the bachelor's degree should come into the auditorium with the tassel on the right, hanging near the right eye. After the degrees are conferred the tassel is shifted to the left side. The signal for shifting the tassel will be given by the President and Vice-President of Academic Affairs when they touch their mortarboards.

3. Candidates for the master's degree should place the tassel at the left front of the mortarboard prior to entering the auditorium and should not shift it.

4. Master's degree candidates will wear the robe, but will carry the hood over the left arm until they reach the stage, where it will be placed on the candidate.

15. Graduation Decorum—Graduation ceremonies are by their very nature festive occasions. The festivity manifests itself in many ways including the dress of the students and faculty adorned in academic regalia and the warmth, joy and satisfaction of accomplishment. The ceremonies are also marked by seriousness where the actual conferring of degrees signifies long hard work on the part of everyone involved: students, faculty, administrators, parents and spouses. As a consequence of the serious nature of the ceremony, students are expected to maintain a measure of decorum consonant with the occasion. Applause and other recognition of the conferring of degrees should be limited to a joint effort at the conclusion of each graduation group, (e.g., B.S., B.A., etc.)

Also receiving an Honorary Doctorate of Humane Letters at Commencement will be Richard A. Henson, chairman of the board of Henson Aviation.

Panel on Careers in Graphic and Fine Arts

The Center for Personal and Professional Development sponsored a career panel on November 30 entitled Careers in the Graphic and Fine Arts. Stephen Sweet, a senior Graphic Arts major, first generated interest in a career-related activity for students in graphic and fine arts. Steve, and Terry Clay, Career Development Specialist, put together an impressive panel which included Carol Bloodsworth and Gretchen Altergott from SSU's Publication Department; Lucy Rabine, a display designer for Leggetts in Seaford, DE; Davina Grace Hill, executive director of the Salisbury-Wicomico Arts Council; and Dan Heinecke, artist and owner of Shore Fire Pottery.

Throughout the planning and implementation stages, much support was given by Marie Quillen, acting chair of the Art Department. In addition, Art Department faculty announced the panel in their classes, which contributed greatly to the success of the evening.

The purpose of the panel was to provide students with an opportunity to learn about various career options available to them in the visual arts, and to interact with art professionals. Throughout the evening, the panelists emphasized the need for internships which enable students to learn, first-hand, of the day-to-day activities of an art occupation. Heinecke suggested that students begin to search for experiential learning opportunities as early as the sophomore year. Bloodsworth added that, in some instances, the internship, not a paying job, allows students to learn every aspect of an art-related occupation. Hill emphasized the need for students to be dedicated to an art career and agreed with Heinecke that, for entrepreneurial endeavors and art administrators, coursework in business areas, accounting, management, etc., is indispensible. Rabine, a sculpture major now working as a display designer, reiterated the need for commitment to the career. She also spoke of the aspects of her job which are not always apparent to students entering the field. SSU graduate Altergott recalled for the students her parents' reaction when she announced that she was changing her major from biology to art. Coincidentally the parents of an SSU freshman attended the panel with their daughter to gain a better understanding of the types of opportunities awaiting their daughter when she graduates.

The Center for Personal and Professional Development wishes to thank the panelists, SSU faculty and students, and those who attended, for their contributions to a memorable evening.

Throughout the year, the CPPD sponsors workshops and presentations related to career planning and placement, as well as issues of personal and professional development and academic progress. The CPPD also provides personal and career counseling for individual students.

Located on the second floor of the University Center, the CPPD is open from 8:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m., Monday - Friday. Appointments can be made in person or by calling 543-6070. Walk-in hours are 1 - 3 p.m., Monday - Thursday. All counseling is confidential and free of charge to University students.

Three Hundred to Graduate Sunday

Fall Commencement features 300 graduates receiving seven different degrees. The graduation ceremony takes place on Sunday, December 18, at 3 p.m. at the Wicomico County Youth and Civic Center.

The Commencement speaker is Dr. Leon Botstein, president of Bard (NY) College. He along with Richard A. Henson, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Henson Aviation, Inc., will be acknowledged for their contributions to higher education with honorary degrees. Each will receive a Doctorate of Humane Letters.

This graduation class has 43 members who will be recognized for outstanding academic achievements by receiving honors designations with their diplomas. Those designations are cum laude, 3.3 grade point average, magna cum laude, 3.6 GPA, and summa cum laude, 3.8 GPA.

For the first time the deans of the five schools at SSU will play active roles in the graduation ceremony. Each will acknowledge the degree recipients from their respective schools. The deans are: Dr. Timothy Mescon, The Franklin P. Perdue School of Business; Dr. Keith Conners, the School of Education and Professional Studies; Dr. Sharon Rubin, the School of Liberal Arts; Dr. Elizabeth Barfield, the School of Nursing and Health Sciences; and Dr. John Molenda, the Richard A. Henson School of Science and Technology. Also, Dr. Darrell Hagar, dean of Graduate Studies, will recognize those students receiving graduate degrees.

There will be 169 graduates receiving the Bachelor of Science; 88 will receive the Bachelor of Arts; three will receive the Bachelor of Arts in Social Work; one will receive the Bachelor of Fine Arts; 28 will receive the Master of Education; seven will receive the Master of Business Administration; and one will receive the Master of Arts.

Botstein, who led a faculty workshop on critical thinking at SSU just prior to the beginning of the fall semester, has been the president of Bard since 1975. A private, coeducational liberal arts college founded in 1860, Bard has some 800 students pursuing Bachelor of Arts degrees in a variety of divisions. Central to its approach, however, is an effort to carefully plan and assess each student's intellectual growth and development throughout the undergraduate years.

Botstein earned his B.A. in history from the University of Chicago and his A.M. and Ph.D. in history from Harvard University. His numerous awards and honors include: Rockefeller Fellow, the Aspen Institute for Humanistic Studies; Annual Award, the National Conference of Christians and Jews; a Sloan Foundation Urban Fellowship; Danforth Foundation Fellowship; and a Woodrow Wilson Fellowship and the Howell Murray Alumni Award from the University of Chicago. He also received an Honorary Doctorate in Humane Letters from Cedar Crest (PA) College.

Henson's Salisbury-based airline serves this and 41 other cities from New England to the Bahamas.

The airline and its founder have been pioneers in commuter flight service, a concept in aviation which has been described by aviation authorities as "the most important force in the air transport industry in the 1980s."

His generosity to this community has been awesome. His big commitment has been to young people. His most recent gift is $2.5 million to Salisbury State University for the creation of the Richard A. Henson School of Science and Technology. This endowment permits the enhancement of science and technological education through scholarships to outstanding students and increased funding for faculty research and development and new equipment.

Dr. Leon Botstein

This represents the first Commencement for SSU as part of the University of Maryland System. The System, which was created by the Maryland General Assembly last spring, is composed of 11 colleges and universities and four research components. Besides Salisbury State the other colleges and universities in the System are: Bowie State University, Coppin State College, Frostburg State University, Towson State University, University of Baltimore, University of Maryland at Baltimore, University of Maryland Baltimore County, University of Maryland College Park, University of Maryland Eastern Shore, and University of Maryland University College.

Symphony Performs Friday

New Harpsicord To Be Featured

The Salisbury Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Dr. Thomas G. Elliot, is in final rehersals for the upcoming concert on Friday, December 16, at 8 p.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium.

A highlight of the evening will be the performance of J.S. Bach's Fifth Brandenburg Concerto. Dr. Nancy Cooper will play the harpsichord solo on the recently acquired instrument that the University purchased. Handcrafted by Peter Redstone of Williamsburg, VA, the University's harpsichord is modeled after an 18th century Hancock that is currently in the University of Edinburg Collection, Edinburg, Scotland.

"It's a tremendous asset for the Salisbury Symphony Orchestra and for the University that we now own a harpsichord," Cooper said in a recent interview. "This will open all kinds of doors in terms of the repertoire that we will be able to perform. And it's a great thrill for me to debut the instrument with what is probably the greatest harpsichord concerto ever written!"

Happy Holidays
This Newsletter is the last of the semester. We will resume publication in January.
Best wishes for the holiday season from the Newsletter staff.

Tie One On For The Holidays

The Salisbury State University chapter of SADD (Students Against Drunk Driving) and the Department of Public Safety are working together this holiday season to promote safe driving, free from alcohol and other drugs. The attached red ribbons, supplied by MADD are courtesy of SADD and members of Public Safety.

This is the third year that MADD has participated in the Red Ribbon Program. Over 452 miles of ribbon are being distributed in Maryland this year. THe goal is to have every vehicle in the state displaying a red ribbon. All University vehicles, will have the red ribbons attached.

The campus SADD chapter is a new organization that is forming. AST sorority is putting the group together and is currently recruiting members. If you are interested in being a member, contact student representatives Barbie O'Malley or Kathy Tillotson, 548-1538; or Susan Hamilton, advisor, at the Lower Shore Prevention Resource Center, 543-6309.

Red ribbons are also being distributed by SADD and Campus Police officers at the University Center this week.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Department of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever you may reside. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep your first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away from alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit area or a place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you need an escort to or from your car, call Public Safety at 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact Public Safety, located in HH room 022, 543-6222.

Library Recarpeting

Blackwell Library will be undergoing a recarpeting project beginning on December 22 and continuing through February 3.

Although this project very much needs to be done, it unfortunately means that during Winter Term there will be a certain amount of noise, dirt and confusion. Also, some books and periodicals will not be shelved in their proper places.

The Library staff will do whatever it can to minimize disruptions and will help users find dislocated materials. In conjunction with the reupholstering of the Library's furniture, this temporary inconvenience will result in a much improved atmosphere in which to work and study.

You Snooze, You Looze $$$$

Any student not returning to the residence halls for spring semester must submit in writing a petition to be released from their housing contract and a refund of their room deposit to the Housing Office by January 1.

Personal Counseling

Personal counseling is provided for students by the Center for Personal and Professional Development (CPPD), located in the University Center, room 263. The CPPD is open from 8:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m., Monday - Friday. Appointments may be made in person or by calling 543-6070. Walk-in hours are 1 - 3 p.m., Monday - Thursday. All counseling is confidential and free of charge to SSU students.

1988 Commencement Information

Please Read Carefully

General Information and Directions

1. Commencement will be held at 3 p.m., Sunday, December 18, in the Wicomico County Youth and Civic Center. No tickets will be required, but it is suggested that graduates limit their number of guests to no more than eight. All graduates are requested to form for processional at 2 p.m. in the side corridors adjacent to the main arena on the first floor of the Civic Center.

2. The Commencement speaker will be Dr. Leon Botstein, President, Bard College.

3. Caps, gowns, master's hoods, nursing pins and caps will be distributed through the University Bookstore beginning Monday, December 5. These may be retained by the graduates and need not be returned following the ceremony. Announcements may be purchased in the Bookstore, but quantities are limited and will be sold on a first come, first served basis. Problems with caps and gowns will be corrected prior to the ceremony by the Bookstore employees at the Civic Center, in the Flanders Room #1 near the snack bar to the left of the arena entrances. Bobby pins, etc. will also be available there. Normal Bookstore hours Monday through Friday are 9 a.m.-7 p.m. The Bookstore be open on Saturday, December 17, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Graduates must pick up the necessary items before 4 p.m. on that date.

4. The faculty marshals will give each graduate a 3x5 card containing his/her name and the School, (e.g. Perdue School of Business). You will be asked to stand by School and degree as you are presented to President Bellavance by your School Dean for the conferring of the degree. The card then is to be given to Dr. Nelson Butler when the graduate reaches the stage, and at the same time, the graduate is to announce his/her name. Dr. Butler will then know who the person is and how to pronounce the name correctly. The name on the card must not be changed for any reason.

5. During the recessional, graduates and faculty are to return to the area where they assembled prior to the ceremony. They should not stop or congregate in the lobby.

6. Degree candidates who do not plan to participate in the Commencement exercise, must notify the Registrar's Office by calling 543-6150 no later than Monday, December 12. All graduates will receive a blank folder at Commencement, and all diplomas will be mailed approximately six weeks after the ceremony.

7. Faculty and staff are requested to form for the processional at 2:15 p.m. in the Midway Room of the Civic Center. Faculty members are required to attend; those who are unable to do so should so inform their respective School dean.

8. The First Aid staff of the Civic Center will be on duty in the office on the right side of the foyer entrance just outside the main arena.

9. A brief reception for graduates and their guests will be held immediately following Commencement in the Midway Room of the Civic Center. The reception is being sponsored by the Salisbury State University Alumni Association and at the conclusion of the ceremony graduates become official alumni of Salisbury State University.

10. The School of Nursing will hold a Pinning Ceremony on Saturday, December 17 at 7 p.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium.

11. Bachelor of Science candidates will assemble in the North corridor of the Civic Center (to the left when entering from the front doors and on the side nearest the Mall). Candidates with last names beginning with the letter A through letter K (Lori Anne Krystopik) will report to Drs. Page and Shaffer and will line up alphabetically along the inside wall, facing East (the rear of the building). You will sit in Section 1 on the seating chart.

Candidates for the B.S. beginning with L (Richard Landon) through the letter Z will report to Drs. Steffes and Wulff, and will line up alphabetically along the windows facing West (the front of the building). You will sit in Section 6 on the seating chart.

12. The Bachelor of Arts and B.A.S.W. and B.F.A. candidates will assemble in the South corridor of the Civic Center (to the right after you enter the front doors on the side nearest to the Park). All candidates for the B.A. degree will report to Drs. St. Martin and White, and will line up alphabetically along the South wall (away from the main arena), facing East (the rear of the building). You will sit in Section 2 on the seating chart. Candidates for the B.A.S.W. and B.F.A. degrees report to Dr. Arlene White. She will direct you.

13. All Master's Degree Candidates (M.Ed., M.A., M.B.A., M.S.) will assemble in the South corridor of the Civic Center (to the right after you enter the front doors, and on the side nearest the Park). Please report to Drs. Hedeen and Lewis, and line up alphabetically by degrees in the corridor between the main arena and the Midway Room. You will sit in Section 3 on the seating chart.

14. Dress Code

This is a formal academic occasion and should be viewed as such in dress and demeanor.

The academic robe is black and the recommended dress, therefore, is:

A. Women

1. Black dress shoes (or some other dark color) - no white or other light color.
2. Dress hose.
3. A dress which does not have a high neckline or stand-up collar. It should not show above the V-neckline and white collar on the robe.

Since the academic robe has a zipper front closing, the dress will show only near the lower hem and, therefore, preferably should be a dark color, rather than white or very light.

4. No visible jewelry.
5. No flowers on the academic robe.

B. Men

1. Black dress shoes (or some dark color) no sneakers or light color sport shoes with thick rubber soles.
2. Dark color socks - no white athletic socks.
3. Dress slacks, preferably a dark or neutral color.
4. Dress shirt, preferably white, or a light color.
5. Dress tie (four-in-hand tie with windsor knot). (Shirt collar and tie will show above the V-neckline of the academic robe.)
6. Suit coat or sport coat will not be seen under the robe and is, therefore, optional.
7. No visible jewelry.

C. Both

1. The mortarboard (academic hat) is to be worn with the front point over the forehead below the front hairline, and so the flat board is parallel to the floor. (Not worn on the back of the head with the board pointing upward.) No decoration of any kind is to be placed on the mortarboard.

2. Candidates for the bachelor's degree should come into the auditorium with the tassel on the right, hanging near the right eye. After the degrees are conferred the tassel is shifted to the left side. The signal for shifting the tassel will be given by the President and Vice-President of Academic Affairs when they touch their mortarboards.

3. Candidates for the master's degree should place the tassel at the left front of the mortarboard prior to entering the auditorium and should not shift it.

4. Master's degree candidates will wear the robe, but will carry the hood over the left arm until they reach the stage, where it will be placed on the candidate.

15. Graduation Decorum—Graduation ceremonies are by their very nature festive occasions. The festivity manifests itself in many ways including the dress of the students and faculty adorned in academic regalia and the warmth, joy and satisfaction of accomplishment. The ceremonies are also marked by seriousness where the actual conferring of degrees signifies long hard work on the part of everyone involved: students, faculty, administrators, parents and spouses. As a consequence of the serious nature of the ceremony, students are expected to maintain a measure of decorum consonant with the occasion. Applause and other recognition of the conferring of degrees should be limited to a joint effort at the conclusion of each graduation group. (e.g., B.S., B.A., etc.)

Indoor Golf Event For Ward Foundation

Area golfers will get another chance to test their putting skills when the Wheat, First Securities Executive Putting Championship to benefit the Ward Foundation returns to the Sheraton Salisbury on January 28.

Last year, this unique indoor golf classic drew close to 180 golfers and spectators and raised more than $5,000. The proceeds were used by the Ward Foundation to help fund the construction of the Salisbury Zoo's new waterfowl exhibit.

This year, the tournament will be fielded by up to 36 teams of four. The 18 hole course will again wind through the Sheraton's first floor banquet rooms, lobby and pool area. A buffet lunch will be served all day as teams compete in two preliminary rounds. The best 18 teams will vie for the championship during the evening round—a black tie optional affair with champagne and hors d'oeuvres.

Team registration is $50, which includes the registration fee, brunch and evening passes for eight (four team members and four guests), and a sleeve of golf balls and golf towel for each player.

In addition to two passes to all the activities, sponsors will have their names engraved on the pewter plates used as holes, which will be given to the sponsors after the tournament. Each hole will bear the sponsor's name and a listing of sponsors will appear in the program. Each patron ticket purchaser receives two passes as well as a listing in the program.

The tournament will kick off Saturday at 10:30 a.m. After the two preliminary rounds, the final 18 playoff teams will be announced. The evening championship round and cocktail reception will be held from 7:30 - 10 p.m.

Registration forms and tickets are available from either Wheat, First Securities (543-4800) or the Ward Foundation (742-4988).

$1,700 Raised for Paralysis Fund

Some $1,700 was raised during a two-week flag football tournament to support the Miami Project to Cure Paralysis, according to Dave Brown, director of Campus Recreation and campaign coordinator.

Students on the 20 teams which participated in the tournament raised $671.08, with the team called The LAX leading the way with $242. Boggie Down Production was the championship game victor.

The community drive, headed by Gordon Gladden, president of Avery Hall Insurance, Inc., raised $1,075. The funds raised go to the Miami Project, whose goal is to find ways to repair, replace or reconstruct damaged spinal nerves and provide movement to those who are presently confined to wheelchairs.

Atrium Gallery Exhibit

An exhibit of Chinese wall scrolls will open Friday, December 16, in the Atrium Gallery. The gallery is located in the University Center, next to the bookstore. Five scrolls will be on display:

These five wall hangings are facsimile reproductions of masterpieces of Chinese paintings in the National Palace Museum, Taipei. The most advanced technology of today has made the faithful reproduction of color tones and texture possible. The power and the spirit of Chinese brushwork can be enjoyed through these scrolls.

The exhibit will be open daily, Monday - Friday, from 10 a.m. - 5 p.m. through January.

Parking Lot Lights Off During Break

On December 22 when the University closes and the residence halls close, the parking lot lights will be turned off for energy conservation reasons. It is recommended that motor vehicles be removed from the campus. If any vehicles must be left on campus, the library lot may be used.

Bicycles are particularly susceptible to theft when very few people are on campus. The bike barns will remain locked over the break but it is recommended, for security reasons, that no bicycles be left on campus.

Mass Media Opening

Salisbury State invites applications for a tenure-track position in mass media, beginning fall 1989. Appointment will be at the rank of assistant or associate professor: the salary range is competitive.

The appointee will teach broadcast management, broadcast journalism, script writing and other media courses, and will be expected to provide leadership in developing the mass media program of Communication Arts, a department of 300 majors.

Ph.D. in mass media or a related discipline is required; professional broadcasting experience is strongly preferred.

Send application letter, current resume and three letters of recommendation no later than January 20, 1989 to: K.E. Wilkerson, Media Search Committee, Department of Communication Arts, Salisbury State University, Salisbury, MD 21801.

Qualified minority members, women and disabled persons are encouraged to apply. SSU is an affirmative action/equal opportunity employer.

CPPD Active

The Center for Personal and Professional Development has been busy this fall, offering not only personal and career counseling to SSU students, but also a variety of outreach programs.

CPPD staff members have participated in programs related to personal development such as time management, issues facing non-traditional students, study skills and stopping smoking. Programs related to career planning and placement have dealt with health career, careers in the graphic and fine arts, resume writing, professional attire and interview skills.

While some of these programs were sponsored directly by the CCPD, others were sponsored by residence halls groups, classes, student organizations, etc. Groups interested in having a CPPD staff member present a program should make their requests at least three weeks prior to the desired date.

Located on the second floor of the University Center, the CPPD is open from 8:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m., Monday - Friday. Appointments or requests for programs may be made in person or by calling 543-6070. Walk-in hours are 1 - 3 p.m., Monday - Thursday. All counseling is confidential and free of charge to University students.

St. Martin Parking Lot To Close in January

The St. Martin parking lot will be closed permanently in January.

The temporary gravel lot was built two years ago to help alleviate a critical parking situation. The lot was used by junior and senior resident students living in Chesapeake parking lot; with the renovation of the Caruthers lot the temporary spaces are no longer needed.

Holloway Hall, east wing, renovation will begin soon. With this project, large construciton vehicles, cement trucks, etc. will be using the access road at the tennis courts. This road is too narrow to accommodate the extra traffic. For safety reasons access on this road needs to be severely limited. Part of the St. Martin lot will be used for construction storage and construction employee parking.

All vehicles are to be removed from the lot by December 22. Thanks to all for your cooperation.

Cockey Published

Linda Cockey of the Music Department recently had an article accepted for publication in the American Music Teacher Journal.

The article titled "A Teaching Strategy for Preventing Musical Maladies" will appear in the January 1989 issue and is co-authored with Ann Joseph, a frequent performer in the Washington, D.C. area, and Dr. Josephine Gimble, a public health consultant to the American Red Cross and former dean of the School of Nursing at American University.

The article primarily deals with teaching music students to perform without significant risk of physical or psychological injury.

"Although much has been written concerning performance anxiety and musical injuries," said Cockey, "little work has been done on the prevention of such maladies."

The authors' goal were to present a summary of the present state of arts medicine, including a current list of performing arts clinics which deal with musical injuries in the United States, and to present a teaching strategy that would be easily comprehended by students and teachers in the field.

Topics such as proper nutrition, exercise, rest, technique on one's instrument, programmed relaxation and how to practice in order to avoid possible injuries were also discussed.

Cockey has published articles before in the American Music Teachers Journal and in Piano Guild Notes. Much of her research has been on the pedagogical aspect of teaching piano.

White Receives Ph.D

Arlene White, assistant professor in the Department of Modern Languages, will receive her Ph.D. hood on December 23 during graduation ceremonies at the University of Maryland College Park.

The title of her doctoral dissertation was "Background and Characteristics of Immersion Teachers in the United States." In immersion education, courses are taught in a language other than the learner's native tongue, usually on the elementary school level. In Maryland, immersion schools teach French and Spanish in Montgomery and Prince Georges counties.

Such schools have been in existence in this country since 1971, but substantive data about immersion teachers seemed to be lacking, White said. Her study assessed the background and preparation of U.S. immersion teachers and examined the criteria used in their hiring.

White has done two presentations based on her research: last year in Washington, D.C., at the national conference of Advocates for Language Learning and in April 1988, in Chichester, England, at the international language conference on teacher education.

White teaches classes in French language and foreign language education.

WW I Memorabilia Exhibit

The Research Center for Delmarva History and Culture is presently featuring an exhibit of World War I memorabilia. The armistice ending the great "war to end all wars" became effective at 11 a.m. on November 11, 1918, 70 years ago, and it seems fitting to observe the anniversary with reminders of this tragic time.

Among the objects exhibited are photographs of, and taken by, American soldiers, planes, ships and training sites. Also a number of books published between 1914 and 1917 are on display, including Collier's Pictorial History of the Great War, and pamphlets given to draftees explaining why they were at war, as well as facts about France which every soldier ought to know. Copies of letters from soldiers "somewhere in France" and discharge papers of local men serving in Company I, 110th Regiment are part of the Research Center's holding relating to local history.

The Research Center is open Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. - 4 p.m., and 9 a.m. - 2:30 p.m. on Friday. The Research Center is located in Holloway Hall, room 279.

Burroughs Moderates Tennis Panel

The associate director of athletics and head men's tennis coach, Dean Burroughs, recently participated in the Maryland Tennis Association "College Night." The conference was held at the Aspen Hill Racquet Club in Bethesda on November 16.

The purpose of the conference was to advise parents, high school students and coaches on athletic eligibility and to acquaint them with procedures relative to the college selection process. Burroughs, who is chairman of the Schools and Colleges Committee for the Mid-Atlantic Tennis Association, served as moderator of the five-person panel at this conference. He also gave a speech titled "The Seven Insidious Traps of a College Bound Tennis Player and How to Avoid Them."

The panel presented topics on academic and athletic eligibility, recruiting, financial aid, NCAA eligibility and differences between amateurism and professionalism. Over 200 parents, students and coaches were in attendance.

Lynch Appointed Program Specialist

Catherine R. Lynch accepted appointment to the position of program specialist effective November 28. In this position she will provide support and leadership for student organizations and activities.

Lynch graduated from Salisbury State in May 1988 with a degree in liberal studies. Her undergraduate involvements included serving as coffeehouse program chair for the SSU Program Board and president of the Outdoor Club. She has also worked as an outdoor adventure instructor with the Talbot County YMCA.

Lynch will serve as a primary point of contact for student organization leaders and advisors who have questions or need assistance. She also will serve as advisor to the Program Board. She is working in the student organization area on the second floor of the Unversity Center and may be reached at 543-6125.

Maggs Winter Term Hours

Maggs PAC will open for students, faculty and staff from January 3 - February 3, Monday - Friday, 11 a.m. - 1 p.m. and 4 - 8 p.m. ID cards will be required.

Nautilus hours will be Monday - Friday, Noon - 1 p.m. and 4 - 5 p.m. and Monday - Thursday, 6 - 8 p.m.

Education School Dean Sought

Applications for the dean of the School Education and Professional Studies at Salisbury State are invtied.

The School includes the Departments of Education, Leisure Studies, Physical Education, Social Work and Military Science. The Department of Education has recently been reorganized into a new administrative entity under the School's assistant dean and consists of three separate task forces: program innovation, teacher effectiveness and literacy, each of which has its own chair.

Responsibilities: The dean is responsible for providing innovative leadership for five departments and approximately 50 faculty members teaching undergraduate and graduate courses. The dean's obligations include the administration of personnel, resources and curriculum. The dean serves on the Deans' Council and reports to the vice president of Academic Affairs.

Qualifications: The successful candidate will have an earned doctorate in a discipline represented in the School, academic classroom experience and administrative experience at the department head level or above. Applicants must be able to communciate and work effectively with internal and external constituencies to gain or maintain accreditation, develop curricula and secure financial support for the School.

Salary: Competitive and commensurate with experience.

Application Procedure: Receipt deadline is January 23, 1989. The position is available beginning July 1, 1989. The letter of application, resume and three letters of reference with current phone numbers and addresses should be sent to: Dr. G. Rossi, Chair, School of Education and Professional Studies, Dean Search Committee, Office of Academic Affairs, Salisbury State University, Salisbury, MD 21801.

Salisbury State University is an affirmative action/equal opportunity employer. Qualified women, minorities and the disabled are encouraged to apply.

Montreal Ski Trip

Again this year, the Outdoor Club trip over Winter Term will be in Shawbridge, Quebec for cross-country and downhill skiing. Trip dates will be January 16-27.

Cross-country skiing can be done in the vicinity of Shawbridge on some 50 miles of wooded trails maintained by the McGill University Outing Club. Downhill skiing is available on the finest slopes in the Laurentians, including Mont St. Sauveur, Mont Ste. Anne and Mont Tremblant. Prior experience is strongly recommended for downhill skiers; it is not necessary for cross-country skiers. The trip includes a three-day side trip to the city of Quebec with opportunites for both sightseeing and skiing there.

The trip this year will feature 10 days in Canada with departure from SSU at 6 a.m. on January 16 and return on the evening of January 27. Cost including lodging, transportation and meals while in Canada will be $160. This does not include rental fees for cross-country skis ($3 Canadian per day at the McGill house), rental fees for downhill skis or lift tickets (about $20 Canadian per day or lower with student discount). Downhill skis may be rented in Salisbury for the entire trip or by the day at the slopes in Canada.

A place on the trip may be guaranteed by giving a non-refundable deposit of $50 to club treasurer, Heather Baldwin. Call Bryan at 543-1269 or Bill at 546-2607.

Decker at Conferences

Dr. Wayne H. Decker, director of the Master of Business Administration program and associate professor at the Perdue School, recently attended three national conferences.

He represented the Perdue School at the American Association of Collegiate Business Schools' annual conference on executive master of business administration programs which was held in Denver. At that meeting the Perdue School joined with some 50 other universities in becoming a charter member of the newly independent EMBA Council.

Decker presented a paper, "Managing Impressions of Individual and Group Achievement," to the Association of Human Resources Management and Organizational Behavior in Long Beach, CA. The research suggested that a manager desiring to make a good impression in a work environment should be very generous in sharing with subordinates credit for good performance. This seems to be true even when the manager has clearly made the major contribution to the accomplishments.

In addition, Decker, presented a paper, "Sex and Humor Effects in Evaluating Leaders," to the Decision Sciences Institute in Las Vegas. In a comparision of two styles of management, no support was obtained for a finding of a decade ago. At that time, male managers emphasizing work were evaluated more favorable than females doing so, but females were rated more favorably when social relationships were emphasized.

However, in Decker's study, the performance of males and females using the same style was judged equal, but managers were rated more masculine when emphasizing work and more feminine when emphasizing social relationships, regardless of their actual sex.

"It seems that in a management setting people are able to make masculine-feminine distinctions which are independent of how well they think a manager is performing," said Decker. "Managers should choose styles not on the basis of what sex they are but on the needs of the situation."

Financial Aid

Financial Aid Applications for 1989-90 are available in the Financial Aid Office, Room, 243, Holloway Hall. For priority funding, both the FAF and SSU Financial Aid Application must be received by the Financial Aid Office by March 1.

Wenke Visiting Professor at Trinity

Dr. John Wenke, associate professor of English, has been invited to teach at Trinity College in Hartford, CT, for the spring semester. Trinity is a small, private college with a reputation for academic excellence.

"We're sorry to lose Jack for even one semester," said Dr. Sharon Rubin, dean of the SSU School of Liberal Arts, "but it's gratifying to have such good faculty that other universities want to borrow them. We're looking forward to having Jack come back refreshed, inspired and ready to share the benefits of his special opportunity with our students."

Wenke, who is an American literature scholar and specialist on Herman Melville, was asked to teach graduate courses in "American Romanticism" and "The Mythic Imagination in Modern Fiction" at Trinity.

He is extensively published on Melville and has several articles forthcoming: "Melville's Mardi: Narrative Self-Fashioning and the Play of Possibility" for Texas Studies in Literature and Language; "Moby Dick and the Impress of Melville's Learning" for Critical Essays on 'Moby Dick'; and chapter six (out of nine) for The Endless Vestibule: Assays on Melville's Philosophical Adaptations. He also is writing a book of critical essays, The Short Fiction of J.D. Salinger, for Twayne publishers. Other scholarly efforts have included articles on James Joyce and Thomas Nashe.

At Salisbury Wenke teaches courses in American literature and creative writing. He has his Ph.D. from the University of Connecticut.

John Gencel, staff photographer for Salisbury State, will have an exhibit of his photography at the Wicomico County Public Library from January 8 to February 8. Photographs will include landscapes, portraits and abstract works. The exhibit is free and the public is invited.

Gencel's photograph of decoys from the Ward Museum was used by C & P Telephone for its cover of this year's Lower Eastern Shore telephone directory. He also has shown his photographs in faculty exhibits at the SSU Gallery.

The Fifth Brandenburg Cocnerto is regarded as the ancestor of the piano concerto, and Bach wrote the solo harpsichord part for himself. Toward the end of the first movement, the harpsichord part grows increasingly brilliant until the other instruments fall silent for a keyboard cadenza which postpones its conclusion by one additional clause after another.

In addition to Cooper, other featured performers for the concerto are Dr. Douglas Smith, flute, and Robin Cockey, violin.

Tickets are $6. They may be purchased at the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council Office in the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center, at the Music Department building, from SSO members and at the door. For information about becoming a patron of the SSO, call Lacey Work at 742-3671.

Trade Show Booth Workshop

Three faculty members recently presented a Trade Show Booth Design workshop for the Salisbury Area Chamber of Commerce.

The workshop idea grew out of conversations which Dr. Kent Kimmel and Dean Peterson of the SSU Department of Art had with the chamber last year, after the two judged the 1988 Business Expo trade booths, Peterson said. A key goal was to get new business entrants to the 1989 expo (to be held in February), to start planning their booths early.

The workshop, on how to design a trade show booth, focused on: marketing research, which was presented by Gerry DiBartolo, of The Franklin P. Perdue School of Business faculty; incorporating the principles of design into planning the booth; and locating resources to create it, said Peterson. The latter two aspects were discussed by the two art faculty members. Assisting them was Karen Brown, an SSU graphic design student.

Approximately a dozen local businesses participated in the workshop. The expo, held in the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center, attracts over 100 businesses annually.

Perdue School Construction Starts

Construction began January 23 on the renovation of Holloway Hall to house The Franklin P. Perdue School of Business.

The $2.2 million project, due to be completed and operational by the spring semester of 1990, was funded through state appropriations approved at last year's General Assembly. The main portion of the Perdue School will be located on the first floor of the north and east wings of Holloway Hall facing College Ave.

"Frank Perdue's $2.5 million endowment of the School of Business in 1986," said President Bellavance, "enabled us to begin fulfilling the enormous potential this School has to offer the region and the state. Now we will soon have a new facility, a community resource, which will reflect the caliber of programs offered at the School."

A unique feature of the renovated Perdue School will be computer instructional laboratories with software control centers. The computer labs will be used to keep students abreast of ever-developing technology and its application at all levels of business from the family farm to international marketing and investment. Also featured will be a large general purpose classroom and several case rooms, which will be central to the School's instructional case rooms will be designed in tiers like small auditoriums to give opportunities to large groups of students for close association and discussion with professors and visiting lecturers.

The School will also have administrative offices for the dean of the School and staff, faculty offices, a student lounge and offices for area service organizations such as the Small Business Institute.

When the project is complete all of those rooms and offices will bear the names of businesses and individuals who have made a financial investment in the School.

"A major gift to the Perdue School is a solid and lasting investment in this region's future," said Dr. Gary L. Pielemeier, vice president of Research and Development at Salisbury State. "A named room secures that investment. It is visible assurance that the donor is a permanent shareholder in an historic venture."

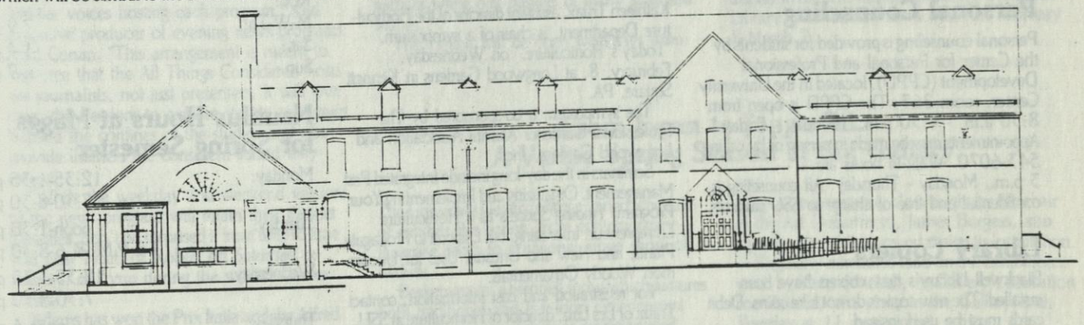
Dr. Timothy Mescon, dean of the Perdue School, expanded on the significance the multimillion dollar renovation project will have on SSU and the entire Eastern Shore. "Our new facility," said Mescon, "will offer research, continuing education and communication links between the University and the area's business and industry. It will give talented young people the opportunity to get a top level business education close to home.

"For local businesses," he continued, "it will mean that well-trained management personnel will no longer have to be recruited from out of the area. The Perdue School of Business will enrich this community with high quality graduates trained on the Shore to work on the Shore."

The Perdue School has some 1100 undergraduate and graduate students. Undergraduates pursue degree programs in accounting, business administration and economics as well as concentrations in finance, marketing, management and information systems management. The business administration major is the most popular on campus, attracting almost 20 percent of the undergraduate students.

A variety of options are available to the M.B.A. student, including the recently initiated and highly popular Executive M.B.A., an intensive 20-month program for individuals who currently hold management positions.

Architects for the project are Colimore/Clarke Associates of Annapolis and Baltimore. The general contractor is Gillis Brothers of Salisbury.



New Administrative Staff Announced

Eleven new people joined the University's administrative staff this year.

"They're professionals with academic credentials and we have great expectations of them," said Joseph K. Gilbert, vice president of Administration. "The challenge for the professional staff is to support the primary mission of the University which is to promote learning. We feel fortunate to have such quality people join us."

The eleven, who have academic degrees collectively from 18 different institutions, bring a variety of experiences to their positions.

Linda Benson, the placement services coordinator in the Center for Personal and Professional Development, has a B.A. in economics from Washington College and an M.B.A. from Salisbury State. She previously worked as a communications specialist with the homeowner's assocation at Ocean Pines, MD.

Michael Boolukos, the assistant registrar, received a B.A. with a major in geology from Franklin & Marshall College and an M.B.A. from Salisbury State. As a graduate assistant in SSU's Franklin P. Perdue School of Business, Boolukos advised and counseled undergraduate students on requirements for the business major and performed graduation audits for senior business majors.

David Brown, director of the Office of Campus Recreation, earned his B.S. and M.A. in recreation management from Brigham Young University. He was previously the BYU assistant intramural director with experience in planning and administering league and tournament structures accommodating as many as 500 entries.

Terry Clay, career development specialist with the Center for Personal and Professional Development, received her B.A. with a major in political science from Howard University and her Ed.M. in counselor education from Lesley (MA) College. She previously coordinated the counseling function and academic curriculum for a career development program for women at Columbia University's School of General Studies. She also directed the activities and a staff of 33 for an Upward Bound program at Stevens Institute of Technology near New York City.

Terry Daenzer, a librarian at Blackwell Library, earned his B.A. with a major in mathematics from the University of Michigan and his M.L.S. (Master of Library Science) from Indiana University. He has also done post-graduate work in biostatistics at the University of

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Department of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever you may reside. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep your first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away from alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit area or a place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you need an escort to or from your car, call Public Safety at 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact Public Safety, located in HH room 022, 543-6222.

Personal Counseling

Personal counseling is provided for students by the Center for Personal and Professional Development (CPPD), located in the University Center, room 263. The CPPD is open from 8:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m., Monday - Friday. Appointments may be made in person or by calling 543-6070. Walk-in hours are 1 - 3 p.m., Monday - Thursday. All counseling is confidential and free of charge to SSU students.

Library Copiers

Blackwell Library's new copiers have been installed. The new copiers do not take coins. Debit cards must be used instead.

These cards can be purchased at the Library's circulation desk, in even dollar amounts.

Maggs ID Procedure

Beginning this spring, all Maggs PAC users must present a valid SSU ID card to be held by the gym student worker. IDs will be collected before entering the main gym, weight room and Nautilus Center.

This is for both the students' and staff's benefit. It will keep Maggs available only for University members and eligible guests.

Please remember to bring your ID card for both recreational and intramural play. If you have any questions, contact Tom Stitcher or Mike Butler at 543-6350.

Financial Aid

Financial Aid Applications for 1989-90 are available in the Financial Aid Office, Room, 243, Holloway Hall. For priority funding, both the FAF and SSU Financial Aid Application must be received by the Financial Aid Office by March 1.

J. Pielemeier is CFRE

Judy Pielemeier, executive director of Alumni Relations, was recently conferred the designation of Certified Fund Raising Executive (CFRE) by the National Society of Fund Raising Executives, an educational organization based in Alexandria, VA. CRFE status indicates that an individual has achieved an advanced standard of tenure, performance, education, knowledge and service to the profession.

She was one of 220 professional fund-raisers chosen from a cross section of philanthropic institutions and organizations. To become certified, a candidate must possess an accepted level of fund-raising experience (five years, full time); be successful in helping to raise a significant amount of money for nonprofit organizations; and contribute to the advancement of fund-raising and philanthropic management. In addition, each candidate must pass an examination which tests fund-raising skills and knowledge in all aspects of the field.

White Gives Workshop

Dr. Arlene White of the Department of Modern Languages recently presented an in-service workshop to the foreign language teachers of Accomack (VA) County.

The workshop, at Arcadia High School in Oak Hall, was titled "Teaching for Proficiency." White's participation was in part due to a recommendation by SSU graduate Ms. Stella Rodriguez, currently teaching French and Spanish at Chincoteague High School.

Truax to Chair Symposium At Longwood Gardens

Kathleen Truax, assistant director of the Horticulture Department, is chair of a symposium, "Today's Horticulture," on Wednesday, February, 8, at Longwood Gardens in Kennett Square, PA.

The symposium is co-sponsored by The Professional Gardener Alumni Association and Longwood Gardens, Inc.

Seminars in the day-long include Integrated Pest Management, Organizing and Implementing Your Program; Finding Success as a Horticulture Entrepreneur; Interesting, but Difficult to Propagate Plants; and New and Unusual Uses for Uncommon Woody Ornamentals.

For registration and cost information, contact Traux or Les Lutz, director of Horticulture at SSU, at 543-6200.

Stovall Appointment

Dr. Jack Stovall, associate professor in the Department of Physical Education, was recently appointed chair of the Public Relations Committee for the Maryland Association for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance.

He also was selected as one of four Maryland representatives to the Eastern District of the American Alliance for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance.

Stovall made a presentation titled "Public Relations Strategies" at the state conference of the Maryland Association for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance.

Interested in Tutoring?

St. Martin Parking Lot To Close in January

The St. Martin parking lot will be closed permanently in January.

The temporary gravel lot was built two years ago to help alleviate a critical parking situation. The lot was used by junior and senior resident students living in Chesapeake parking lot; with the renovation of the Caruthers lot the temporary spaces are no longer needed.

Holloway Hall, east wing, renovation will begin soon. With this project, large construciton vehicles, cement trucks, etc. will be using the access road at the tennis courts. This road is too narrow to accommodate the extra traffic. For safety reasons access on this road needs to be severely limited. Part of the St. Martin lot will be used for construction storage and construction employee parking.

Thanks to all for your cooperation.

Cost of the trip, which includes lodging at the Ohiopyle State Park Youth Hostel, will be $17. Ski rentals and lift tickets are extra.

Noah Adams Returns to NPR to Host 'All Things Considered'

National Public Radio announced today that Noah Adams will return to host 'All Things Considered beginning in February.

"We are delighted to welcome Noah back to All Things Considered, said NPR Vice President for News and information Adam C. Powell. "Noah is a talented journalist who distinct voice and abilities infuse his reporting with a special wit, sensitivity and intelligence listeners rely on."

Adams, who left NPR in February 1987 to start a new variety show for Minnesota Public Radio, will serve as one of five hosts for All Things Considered, National Public Radio's daily award-winning newsmagazine which Adams hosted for ten years, can be heard every evening on WSCL-FM, 89.5 Delmarva Public Radio at 5 p.m.

I've missed journalism and especially the relationship that All Things Considered has with its listeners. It's a wonderful program with a loyal, caring audience," said Adams about his return. "My time away has been fun and interesting and I think it will provide a new perspective for my work on a daily news program. This is my radio home and I'm happy they've welcomed me back."

In addition to Adams, the host roster will include weekday host Robert Siegel and weekend host Lynn Neary. The search for two other hosts continues.

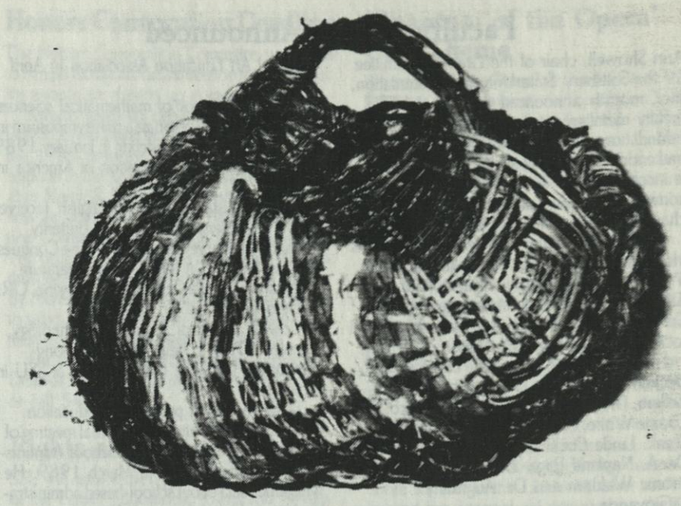
The new structure will rotate the hosts allowing them time away from the microphone to pursue the kind of signature pieces and in-depth stories that distinguish the program.

"As a rule, listeners will hear two of five familiar voices hosting each program," said executive producer of evening news programs Neal Conan. "This arrangement is meant to reinforce that the All Things Considered hosts are journalists, not just presenters. It will give them the freedom to explore stories and issues beyond the confines of the studio, and also provide listeners the consistent sound they expect.

"While the weekday and weekend versions of the news program will retain their distinct identities, don't be surprised if from time to time you hear Noah or Robert on Saturday or Sunday, or Lynn during the week," Conan added.

Adams has won the Prix Italia and the Alfred I. duPont-Columbia University awards, among other top honors. His varied experience includes stints in production work, advertising, car sales and commercial radio. He began his public radio career in 1971 at WBKY in Lexington, KY, then joined National Public radio at its Washington headquarters four years later.

All Things Considered, with a weekly listenership of 4.7 million, is the most listened to program on public radio.



One of the interesting baskets on display in the Atrium Gallery at the University Center

Basket Exhibit in the Atrium Gallery

An exhibit of baskets by members of the Chesapeake Basket Guild will open on Saturday, February 4, in the Atrium Gallery located next to the bookstore in the University Center. This exhibit will feature baskets made by members of the Chesapeake Basket Guild.

The centerpiece of the show will be a large random weave basket formed from all natural materials including bittersweet, honeysuckle, grapevine and bark. In addition to free form examples the show will include traditional styles such as white oak baskets of many sizes and shapes.

The exhibit will be open weekdays from 11 a.m.-3 p.m. and Saturdays and Sundays from 1-4 p.m. through February 24.

In conjunction with this exhibit a basket weaving demonstration will take place in the main concourse of the University Center from 10 a.m.-2 p.m., Wednesday, February 8.

This Atrium Gallery Basket Show and demonstration will be an interesting comparison of local basketry art with the BasketWeave Show, a nationally juried show organized by one of the nation's leading crafts institutions, on display in the SSU Gallery located in Blackwell Library. The Gallery show will run February 8-March 2.

From Japan to Joppa Rd.— A Varied Spring Season at the Gallery

The University Gallery offers a varied schedule of exhibits this spring, from contemporary Japanese prints to a national juried show of baskets.

Basketweave, a biennial show which features both traditional and free-form experimental baskets in a great variety of materials and techniques, will be on display February 8-March 2. It was organized by The Dairy Barn Southeastern Ohio Cultural Arts Center.

Contemporary Japanese Prints, organized by the international Graphic Arts Foundation, will be on exhibit March 3-17 and March 26-30. The exhibition features some 40 original prints by major Japanese printmakers whose work, in a variety of styles and techniques, is characterized by bold imagery, technical innovation and great sensitivity to paper, color and texture.

Landscape: Three Perspectives, a show curated by three different artists and organized by Maryland Art Place, an artists' cooperative gallery in Baltimore, will be on display April 1-27. The exhibition features contemporary interpretations of nature in paintings, photographs and works in mixed media by Maryland artists.

The annual Senior Show, featuring works in various styles and media by senior art majors, will be April 29-May 18. The students, who are in a senior seminar class taught by the chair of the Art Department, James Burgess, also organize the exhibition and design its installation.

Regularly scheduled talks on the exhibitions, given by Karen Mitchell, the Gallery's education coordinator, take place in the Gallery each Tuesday at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m.

The Gallery offers special tours of exhibitions, which are arranged with the specific interests of the requesting organizations in mind, to small groups, including clubs, civic organizations, senior citizens' groups, Girl Scouts and school children of all ages. Gallery tours are free but must be scheduled in advance.,

Speakers, using slides and other audiovisual materials, are available to talk to interested groups about an exhibition if they are unable to schedule a visit to the Gallery.

Gallery hours are Monday through Thursday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday and Sunday from 1-5 p.m., and Monday and Wednesday evenings from 5-8 p.m. The Gallery is closed on Friday and when the University is not in session. Admission is free.

For information about various programs related to the exhibitions including slide-lectures, films, panel discussions and workshops, please call the Gallery at 543-6271.

Faculty Grants Announced

Ann Showell, chair of the Grants Committee for the Salisbury State University Foundation, Inc., recently announced grants to 14 SSU faculty members totaling $4,200. The SSU Foundation, established for the encouragement and enrichment of education at the University, is incorporated as a voluntary association of community leaders solely for educational, charitable and scientific purposes.

Showell, a resident of Ocean City, MD, is vice president of Castle in the Sand, Inc. She is a member of the boards of directors of the Atlantic National Bank, Assateague House Condominium and various civic and historical societies in Maryland and Florida.

Decker, asociate professor in the Franklin P. Perdue School of Business, received $400 to present a paper at the national meeting of the Association of Human Resources Management and Organizational Behavior in Long Beach, CA, in October. Decker's paper was titled, "Managing Impressions of Individual and Group Achievement."

Dillon, instructor of computer science in the Richard A. Henson School of Science and Technology, received $400 to present a paper at the Information Systems Education Conference in Dallas, TX, in October. The paper was titled, "Evaluating the Individual From Within the Systems Development Team."

Kellam, an assistant professor of nursing, received $400 to present a poster presentation based on her doctoral research at the District IV Nurses Association of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists (NAACOG) research conference in Orlando, FL, in mid-November. Her presentation was titled, "Loss Experienced by Mothers of High-Risk Newborns and Its Relationship to Subsequent Maternal Attitudes."

Kimmel, a professor of art, received $400 to present a paper, "The Small College: Assessing Strengths and Weaknesses," at the 28th annual National Art Education Association in April 1988.

Fusaro, professor of mathematical sciences, received $400 to organize a minisymposium in the teaching of math modeling in January 1989 at the Mathematics Association of America in Phoenix, AZ.

White, assistant professor of English, received $400 to present a paper, "The Butterfly Metaphor in Harvey Fergusson's 'The Conquest of Don Pedro,'" at the Western Literature Association Annual Conference in Eugene, OR, in October.

Cowall, instructor of medical technology, received $300 to help fund a day-long symposium on Gene Probe Testing at SSU in October.

Frank, associate professor of education, received $300 to attend the annual meeting of the American Association of School Administrators in Orlando, FL, in March 1989. He will gather data about school-based administration internship programs as they relate to state certification.

Cockey, instructor of music, received $200 to attend the sixth Biennial Conference on Piano Pedagogy in Chicago in October.

Hepburn, associate professor of communication arts, received $200 to bring Susan Zeder, playwright-in-residence, to campus for two days in mid-November.

Page, professor of history, received $200 to travel to Chile from January through March to observe its presidential election. He will ascertain and observe the strength of opposition to the Pinochet government, and observe the election itself. He expects the trip to add an important dimension to his course teaching and to his general understanding of Latin America.

Tossey, associate professor of social work, received $200 to attend the annual conference of the Association of Baccalaureate Program Directors in New Orleans in September, 1988.

Waldron, the associate registrar, received $200 in financial aid toward the completion of his doctoral degree requirements at the University of Maryland College Park.

DiGiovanna, associate professor of biology, received $200 toward expenses incurred as he writes a textbook on the biology of aging in humans.

Perdue School Offers Free Tax Help

Free federal and Maryland tax preparation assistance is available through VITA, a Volunteer Income Tax Assistance program, sponsored by the Franklin P. Perdue School of Business, on Mondays from noon-5 p.m. (and other times by appointment) starting on February 6.

This assistance will be given at the University Center, Manokin Room no. 232, through April 10. The VITA program is designed to help lower income, elderly and handicapped taxpayers with simple tax returns.

Volunteers will prepare and teach individuals how to prepare their own federal and Maryland tax returns. Interested persons should bring their 1988 tax package of forms, wage and earnings statement(s) Form(s) W-2, interests statement(s) from banks(s) (form(s) 1099), a copy of their 1987 tax return (if available), and any other relevant information concerning income and expenses.

For more information, contact Gerald A. Walsh of the Perdue School at (301) 543-6315.

February Open House

The University invites all prospective students and their families to an Open House on Saturday, February 11, from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Originating at the University Center, in the Wicomico Room, the Open House includes an informal coffee hour featuring presentations by faculty members and administrators about various aspects of the University and a walking tour of the campus and its facilities hosted by an SSU student. Individual counseling with representatives of the Admissions-Financial Aid Office is available at the conclusion of the Open House.

The University urges all students to visit Salisbury State University as part of the college selection process.

For more information on either Salisbury State University or the Open House, call the Admissions Office at 543-6160.

Annual High School Math Contest

Juniors and seniors from 24 public Schools on the lower Eastern Shore have been invited to the University to participate in the fifth annual High School Math Contest.

The contest will be held in the Nanticoke Room of the University Center on Thursday, February 23. Registration is at 9:30 a.m. and the test is given in two parts, at 10 and 11 a.m.

The three highest scorers are declared winners and receive plaques; a permanent plaque engraved with the name of the first-place winner will remain on campus in the Department of Mathematical Sciences. A luncheon given by the University follows the testing.

Dr. B.A. Fusaro, professor of Mathematical Sciences, will address the students of "Fractals and the Geometry of Nature."

Arrangements for the contest are being handled by Homer W. Austin, Robert J. Blodgett, Joseph D. Jones and Barbara A. Wainwright, all of the Department of Mathematical Sciences.

For further information, contact Wainwright at 543-6477.

Special Problems in Education Courses

The School of Education and Professional Studies will offer three "Special Problems" courses during the spring semester: one in science, one in social studies and one in composition.

"Science Topics and Methods For Elementary and Middle School Teachers" (Educ 590-191) with Dr. Leonard J. Gargigliano, will be offered on Thursdays from 5-7:55 p.m. Garigliano indicates that this course will cover physical science topics typically taught in elementary and middle schools with an emphasis on science content, process and application.

Methods of teaching science, based on current research, published goals of science education and current practice will be included. Classes will be conducted in an activity-oriented format supplemented with demonstrations, lectures and discussions.

The seminar in the teaching of social studies (Educ 512) with Dr. Ron Frank, will meet on Tuesdays from 7-9:55 p.m. The course, designed primarily for middle and secondary school teachers, will examine new directions and trends in the teaching of social studies. According to Frank, a former social studies teacher and coordinator of advanced placement American history, the course will offer a point of departure for the implementation of new ideas and methods in the social studies classroom.

"Compositions: Curriculum and Methods" (educ 454) is designed to review and apply a model for teaching and practicing writing based on current knowledge of the composing process and to demonstrate strategies for instruction in writing based on models appropriate for students' needs. The instructor, Julia Webster, a former Wicomico County English teacher, brings a wealth of practical knowledge about getting students to write.

The spring semester begins February 6. For any further information, please contact the individual instructors at the School of Education, (301) 543-6280.

SSU Presented Paralympics Award

Salisbury State University was the recipient of an official pin set of the 1988 U.S. Disabled Sports Shooting Team for the eighth Paralympics, the Olympics for the disabled.

Making the award on behalf of the U.S. Wheelchair Shooting Team was William Kent, a senior liberal studies major who participated in the air rifle competition in this fall's Paralympics in Seoul, South Korea. Salisbury State was the site of the shooting team's first training camp in August. (Indoor shooting trials were held in the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center.)

"The team was so impressed with the facilities and unequaled hospitality in hosting the training session," said Kent, that the members wanted to give the University something in appreciation of its efforts.

Additionally, Kent, who is a member of the board of directors of the National Wheelchair Shooting Federation and chair of the public relations committee, said the team plans to hold next year's training camp in Salisbury and hopes to have SSU adopted as its official training center.

Kent narrowly missed earning a medal in the fall Paralympics, the largest ever with 5,000 Olympians from 60 countries. He finished fourth in the individual competition, and while he and his U.S. teammates won the team title, not enough countries competed to warrant a gold medal ceremony. Medallions, however, were presented to Kent and his teammates.

According to Kent, some 135,000 spectators witnessed the opening ceremonies in Seoul. Sports attracting the largest number of spectators during the 10-day event were track and field, archery and swimming.

According to Kent, the next Olympic Games, in Barcelona, Spain, in 1992, will include as many as seven sports featuring disabled competitors. Like the Olympics, the Paralympics are held every four years and will also be in Barcelona in '92.

Kent is residing in his hometown of Hagerstown this spring and will return to SSU in the fall.

Kent at Seoul Paralympics

William Kent, a Salisbury State University student who participated in the Paralympics in Seoul, South Korea, last fall, will chair an organizing committee for the 1989 Wheelchair Shooting Championships to be held in Salisbury July 7-16.

Sponsored by the National Wheelchair Shooting Federation, competition will be held at the Wicomico County Youth and Civic Center. Athletes will be housed at SSU.

Graduate Named Teacher of the Year

Mark Steele, an SSU graduate, was recently named Indian River (DE) High School 1988-89 Teacher of the Year.

Steele, who began teaching in 1981, is an exemplary teacher with a strong knowledge of his subject matter. He teaches math, physics and computer science, along with coaching football and baseball and is involved in other student extracurricular activities.

A 1981 graduate of Salisbury State with a Bachelor's of Science in math, Steele is currently pursuing a master's degree in counseling at SSU.

Steele lives in Dagsboro with his wife, Linda, and their children, Justin and Stephanie.

Honors Convocation Deadline

The Honors Convocation Committee would like to remind faculty and adminstration that deadlines for awards are coming up in early March.

Awards given by departments listed in last year's Convocation program will be included in the 1989 program upon request. Please respond to the Academic Dean's office no later than March 8. Departments wishing to include new awards may petition the Honors Convocation Committee for inclusion in the program. This petition, completed on an appropriate form, must be returned to the Academic Dean's office by March 1. Honor organizations are reminded to select new members so that all names of recipients can be submitted by March 8.

For additional information please contact the Dean of Students office in the University Center or call 543-6080.

Rights and Privacy Act

SSU will assume the right, under the provisions of the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act, to provide student directory information without prior consent of the student. Directory information is defined as a student's name, local address (if listed), date and place of birth, major field of study, participation in officially recognized activities and sports, weight and height of an athletic team member, dates of attendance, degrees and awards received, most recent previous educational agency or institution attended and listing of officers of student organizations (including names and addresses).

In the event a student wants more or less than directory information released, please notify the Office of the Dean of Students, at 543-6080, or stop by room 212, University Center.

Brochures on Student Code of Conduct, Judicial System And Sexual Harassment Policy

To better provide students with information on expectations for responsible citizenship and procedures for judicial proceedings, a written Student Code of Conduct is published along with a Judicial System Guide. Topics included in the Code of Conduct include academic and computer dishonesty; theft; possession, storage, use of firearms; drug and alcohol use; misuse of college property; false information; assault and verbal harassment; violence and extremism; disruptive behavior; sexual harassment; and hazing.

The Judicial Guide explains disciplinary proceedings in residence halls and campuswide, the function of student advocates, procedural and due process, sanctions and appeals.

The University Sexual Harassment Policy describes informal and formal procedures for handling complaints. Copies of all three brochures will be widely circulated to students and will be available from the University Center Information Desk and Dean of Students Office, Room 212 University Center.

Student Insurance

Students and/or their dependents now have an opportunity to enroll in a very flexible and convenient insurance plan—The Sentry Student Security Plan.

Any full or part-time student who is registered and attending a state accredited college or university that formally authorizes the Sentry plan is eligible to enroll. There are no restrictions based on the number of credits or non-credit scholastic hours. Coverage may also be maintained during the summer vacations and up to one term after graduation. This program offers several good options. Please stop by the Health Center for a brochure or application. SSU has authorized this insurance program.

'Phantom of the Opera' Gala Theme

"Phantom of the Opera" is the theme of Salisbury State University's Foundation's 10th annual Gala on Saturday, April 22, in Ruth Powell Dining Hall, it was announced by Mrs. Flo Mabe of Salisbury, general chair of the event.

Mabe noted that Salisbury State University began as a two-year state normal school in 1925, involved in training public school teachers.

"What a difference 64 years can make," she said. "From a beginning of one building on 29 acres, an administrative and faculty staff of 13 and only 103 students on campus to a comprehensive university. We can boast 25 buildings on 100 acres, offering 36 undergraduate and graduate programs offering B.S., B.A., M.Ed., M.S., M.A. and M.B.A. degrees."

She continued: "We have much to celebrate on the 10th anniversary of the Gala. And the Foundation is dedicated to offering Eastern Shore support to this University over and beyond the financial aid provided by the state of Maryland."

"That is one reason for holding our Gala," Mabe continued. "It offers a solid opportunity for Eastern Shore residents to get to know us better and to offer support by personally attending the Gala."

Tickets, $125 per couple, will soon be on sale, according to E. Jefferson Fox, also of Salisbury, who is ticket chair.

It will feature a cocktail party and full course dinner. Beautiful decorations, background music provided by a string quartet, special favors and valet parking will also be spotlighted.

Entertainment will be provided following the dinner by the Don Roberts Orchestra.

For more information, contact the Office of Research and Development at SSU at 543-6175.

John Gencel, staff photographer for Salisbury State, will have an exhibit of his photography at the Wicomico County Public Library from January 8 to February 8. Photographs will include landscapes, portraits and abstract works. The exhibit is free and the public is invited.

Gencel's photograph of decoys from the Ward Museum was used by C & P Telephone for its cover of this year's Lower Eastern Shore telephone directory. He also has shown his photographs in faculty exhibits at the SSU Gallery.

Health Support Ministries Benefit Concert

A benefit concert entitled "That's What Friends Are For" will be held on Sunday, February 12, at 2 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the University Center. Performing artists are Douglas Smith, flutist; Ray Zeigler, pianist; Katherine Turner, soprano; and the Eastern Shore Woodwind Quintet.

Suggested minimum donation is $10 per person. All proceeds are going to Health Support Ministries, a non-profit organization that provides comprehensive support services to people on Delmarva who are HIV positive, ARC, or who have AIDS, their families and friends at no charge.

Tickets may be purchased at: Hebron Savings Bank—Salisbury Branch; Loyola Federal Savings & Loan; The Gospel Shop; Jack's Religious Gift Shop (both locations); Shoreline Office Products; UMES, in the Performing Arts Center; Salisbury State University, and at the door at the time of the concert.

For more information, call 543-1442.

School of Education Competency Requirements

The School of Education requires that students who apply for admission to the Professional Teacher Education Program must complete specific tests in reading, writing, mathematics and speech. Starting with 1988 fall semester the tests used to satisfy the competency requirements will be two sections from the Core Battery of the National Teacher Examination (NTE). The two sections are the Test of Communication Skills and the Test of General Knowledge. Communication Arts 250, Instructional Communication, will continue to satisfy the speech requirement.

If students wish to apply for admission to the Professional Teacher Education Program for Fall, 1989 and have not taken the current education competency tests, they must sign up for the March 4, 1989 NTE testing session. The registration is due by January 30 for the March testing and May 15 for the June testing. To qualify for admission to the Profesional Teacher Education Program, students must achieve a score on these tests equal to or better than the qualifying score for Maryland certification requirements. Students who do not achieve a satisfactory score may retake one or both of the tests at the next testing session.

There will be an NTE workshop on Thursday, Februrary 16, at 3:30 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the University Center for students who will be taking the Test of Communication Skills and the Test of General Knowledge in March. Test-taking strategies, test content and study materials will be discussed at the meeting.

Applications for the March 4 or June 17 test can be obtained at the School of Education Office, CH-148. Questions about test requirements should be directed to Dr. Gerry Rossi, Literacy Task Force Chair, in CH-154 or Al Constantine, Director of Field Experiences, in CH-148.A.

Drug Testing Panel Convened

In support of National Collegiate Drug Awareness Week, the Center for Personal and Professional Development (CPPD) and the Lower Shore Prevention Resource Center are sponsoring a panel entitled, "Drug Testing: Issues and Perspectives." The panel will convene on Wednesday, Febraury 8, at 7 p.m. in the Nanticoke Room of the University Center.

National Collegiate Drug Awareness Week is a nationally unified and comprehensive drug prevention week to help colleges and universities focus on the issues of drug abuse. To assist in this effort, the panel has been designed to address a number of issues related to drug testing to educate students who, as a part of their job search after graduation, will be expected to undergo a drug test. In addition, student life staff will have an opportunity to explore with policy makers the trends in university programs aimed at countering use of drugs and alcohol on campus. Other topics to be addressed by guest panelists include drug use among student athletes and lab procedures used to screen for various drugs.

Guests panelists include Pat Lamboni, Head SSU Athletic Trainer; Terry Rupert, Head Coach; Diane Hayes, Supervisor of Medical Technology at Peninsula General Hospital and Medical Center; Chip Silverman, Special Advisor to the Governor for Substance Abuse Policy; Joanne Ogden, Program Director of New Beginnings and consultant to several local corporations on issues related to drug testing. Bob Short, Director of Addiction Service for the Wicomico County Health Department, will deliver closing remarks.

For more information regarding this program, contact Terry Clay, career development speciaist in the CPPD, 543-6070.

Minority Workshop Presented

Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity Inc., the Dean of Students Office and the Center for Personal and Professional Development presents: A Social and Academic Adjustment Workshop for Minorities in a College Environment.

"With over 350 minority students now enrolled at SSU, it is imperative that we begin to address some of their specific concerns," said John Fields, associate dean of students and director of minority affairs.

Toward that end, the organizations are hosting this event on Saturday, February 25, in the Wicomico Room of the University Center. The event will take place from 8:30 a.m. until 3 p.m., and the guest speaker will be Edwin Nichols, Ph.D., industrial psychologist and assistant to the division director, education and service system liaison at the National Institute of Mental Health.

Dr. Nichols was educated at Assumption College, Windsor, Canada; Eberhardt-Karls Universitat, Tubingen, Germany; and Leopoline-Franciscea Universitat, Innsbruck, Austria, where he received his Doctor of Philosophy in psychology and psychiatry cum laude. He has held positions as: visiting professor at the University of Ibandan, Nigeria; associate director, Cleveland Job Corps Center for Women; Department of Psychiatry at Meharry Medical College; and clinical psychologist at the Kansas Neurological Institute. His awards include being a fellow of the Austrian Ministry of Education; a visiting scholar at the Bellagio Study Center, Rockefeller Foundation, Italy; and Who's Who in America.

All SSU students, faculty and staff are invited to register for the minority workshop. RSVP 's will be accepted no later than February 11 through the Dean of Students Office, 543-6080.

Special People Give Special Help

As a result of some special help from the Wicomico Teen Adult Center in Sharptown, SSU's athletic playing fields have never looked better, according to Les Lutz, director of the Horticulture Department.

Thanks to a contract negotiated this summer, the Teen Adult Center sent over four of its clients, all mentally handicapped, along with a job coach to groom the University's athletic complex located on both sides of Bateman Street in town.

Working five days a week from early September through Thanksgiving, 9 a.m. - 3 p.m., the clients would mow, mulch, weed, rake—all facets of grounds maintenance necessary for the upkeep of the 25 acres of fields, diamonds and tracks.

We didn't have the staff to maintain the grounds on the campus proper as well as the athletic complex grounds," said Lutz explaining why outside help was sought. "And the job done by the people from the Teen Adult Center was excellent. They would start out scared to death of certain things, but the job coach would push them and they'd wind up doing a marvelous job."

The praise pleases but hardly surprises Don Hackett, executive director of the Teen Adult Center. The Center which recently celebrated its 20th year of existence, "develops the potential of handicapped persons to the fullest and provides as normal an environment as possible for them," said Hackett.

"To integrate handicapped persons into society," he continued, "requires increased public awareness that they can be dependable and competent workers."

The Center seeks to accomplish that by working through its "Supported Employment" program with businesses and agencies such as SSU.

"Our arrangement at SSU," said Hackett, "gave four of our individuals the opportunity to perform a variety of work skills. They had been trained at the Teen Adult Center, but the on-site training by the job coach is very important.

"The job coach, primarily Irene Winder, in this instance," said Hackett, "ensures that the job is done in accordance with the instructions received by the Salisbury State Horiculture staff. Daily, a task analysis was provided for the workers, breaking down tasks into smaller steps. Each worker knew what his job was for that day. The job coach monitored and supervised their performance."

Hackett found the working relationship between the Center and SSU to be beneficial to both parties.

"We received the opportunity to be involved in a work-training program, to use and display the work skills developed here," said Hackett. "And, as a side benefit, our clients got the opportunity to interact and mingle with non-handicapped people. Salisbury State received needed maintenance service, complete with the assurance that a workforce would be on the job every day. If a regular worker was ill, a substitute was provided. We have over 150 people available."

Lutz is so pleased with the program, that he says it will be expanded come springtime. By April, Center workers will also be policing the main campus grounds in the early morning, cleaning loading docks, working the University greenhouse, looking after plants in the University Center and continuing maintenance efforts at the athletic complex.

"We are pleased with everything that has happened through our relationship with the Teen Adult Center," said Lutz. "The workers are quick to learn and do a good job."

Washington. He was a reference assistant in the education library at Indiana last year, but prior to that was a self-employed electrician in Jonesborough, TN for seven years.

Kenneth Kanarr, data processing user services coordinator in the Computer Services Department, received his B.S. with a major in physics and a minor in microelectronics from Salisbury State. He was formerly the micro coordinator/student supervisor at SSU, evaluating proposed new microcomputer hardware and software, supervising 45 students as computer lab monitors and administering the overall operation of five different facilities supported by Computer Services.

Kathryn Reading, a counselor in the Center for Personal and Professional Development, earned her B.A. with a major in religion from Davidson (NC) College and her M.Ed. with a specialization in counseling and consulting psychology from Harvard University. She came to SSU from Wor-Wic Tech Community College in Salisbury where she was director of admissions. Prior to that she was the assistant to the dean of students at Kenyon (OH) College.

Lindsay Roseberry, a librarian at Blackwell Library, received her B.A. with a major in Russian from The University of the South (TN) and her M.L.S. from the University of Kentucky. Previously she was an assistant cataloger at Lane Public Library in Hamilton, OH, and circulation assistant at DuPont Library in Sewanee, TN.

Jill Sweely, the assistant director of financial aid, earned her B.S. majoring in health and physical education from Indiana University of Pennsylvania and her M.S. in counseling from Shippensburg (PA) University. At Shippensburg she was a graduate assistant in both the Financial Aid Office as well as the Psychology Department.

Kathleen Truax, services specialist for the Physical Plant, earned her A.A. (Associate of Arts) from the Minnesota Area Vocational Technical Institution majoring in landscape horticulture. She has since graduated from her studies at Longwood Gardens in Pennsyvania where she supervised 13 employees. At Longwood, she had general horticultural duties and concentrated on vegetable gardening, perennials, communications, public service, management and internships. She also was a horticultural intern at the Dallas (TX) Arboretum and Botanic Society.

Paul Zimmerman, an admissions counselor, received his B.A. and M.Ed. from Salisbury State, majoring in leisure studies as an undergraduate and guidance and counseling as a graduate student. Prior to his appointment he was a recreation specialist with the U.S. Naval Academy, planning and programming athletic and recreational activities in the Recreational Services Department at the Naval Academy complex.

Sports Update by Barry Packer

For those Salisbury State sports fans who have been gone since the middle of December, welcome back to something called consistent, winning, exciting and overpowering basketball.

When last you left the teams under the direction of Ward Lambert and Jim Berkman, the men's team had just finished last in the Gull Classic, and had fallen to 2-5. The women's team had just lost by one to Marymount in the Gull Championship game, and dropped to 6-3, not bad by many standards. Yet, considering the Gulls went 20-6 last season, it really wasn't where they wanted to be.

And, then when the women came back from break and lost three of their next four, even though they were at the same spot they were last year, they hoped to have been better than 7-6. And, the men didn't expect to be 2-8 either. Early in January, [illegible] upped it to 4-10, splitting four games.

Since then each team has gone 4-0. Yet, it has not been an ordinary 4-0. It has been a dominating 4-0. The men's team has beaten Virginia Wesleyan 89-72, Eastern 100-87, Mary Washington 98-86 and York 92-77, an average score of 94.7-80.5. The women, meanwhile, destroyed Goucher 106-31, Eastern 79-51, Mary Washington 92-56 and Shenandoah 85-59, an average score of 90.5-49.2.

And, while each win has been a complete team effort, standout performances have come from the two on the court dominators, Andre Foreman and Dawn Webb.

In the win at Eastern, Foreman went over the 1,000-point mark, and now has 1,060 points in 43 games. In the most recent rankings, he is 12th in Division III in scoring (23.8 ppg) and ninth in the country in rebounding (12.7 rpg).

And Webb. She may just go down as the greatest player in Salisbury State history. In the win at Eastern, she became the first women's basketball player to score, 1,000 points and garner 1,000 rebounds in her career. Currently, she is ninth in the country in scoring (21.8 ppg) and sixth in rebounding (16.1 rpg). However, those numbers were before these last three games, during which she scored 95 points and pulled down 57 rebounds.

Included in the win over Shenandoah, she broke Gail Tattterson's Gladding's 12-year old record for points in a game, which stood at 38, but is now 40. This is the sixth record that Webb holds. And before the end of her career, sometime between the end of February and the beginning of March, many more Sea Gull records may be written by Webb.

Mathematical Sciences Position

The Department of Mathematical Sciences has an opening for fall. A strong commitment to the mathematical sciences point of view (a blending of pure and applied mathematics, statistics and computer science) and good teaching recommendations are essential. Candidates must be able to teach students with diverse backgrounds (this includes the ability to communicate effectively in English, both orally and in writing). Rank and salary will be commensurate with credentials and experience. A Ph.D. in one of the mathematical sciences is required for a tenure-track position. Applicants not possessing a Ph.D. will be considered for a one-year contractual position. Non-U.S. citizens must have U.S. Immigration and naturalization authorization to accept employment in this country.

Initial screening will be based on each applicant's academic background and teaching experience supported by recommendations. Final selection will be made on the basis of the foregoing, a personal interview and a formal lecture on a topic of the candidate's choice.

Send letter of application, resume and three letters of recommendation to:

Search Committee
Department of Mathematical Sciences
Salisbury State University
Salisbury, Maryland 21801

Screening of applications will begin on March 15 and continue until the position is filled.

Salisbury State University is an Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer. Women, minorities and the disabled are encouraged to apply.

John M. Mervine, Sr., center, president of Nanticoke Homes, gave a lecure and presentation to students of The Franklin P. Perdue School of Business. The event was sponsored by the Salisbury State Chapter of Phi Beta Lambda. Also appearing are Dr. Thomas E. Bellavance (right), and Dr. Robert C. Winder, faculty advisor to Phi Beta Lambda.

Man and Nature Series Set for Spring Semester

A Salisbury State professor has organized a group of faculty, staff, students and townspeople who hope to infuse into all academic courses a changed concept of man's place in the natural world.

Bernard A. Fusaro, a professor of mathematical sciences, and the Man and Nature group he heads, will present a series of events this spring related to concepts they have been developing since last summer.

The series will begin on Monday, February 27, with a keynote address by David Brower titled, "It's Healing Time on Earth."

Brower is a founder of the Sierra Club and later founded Friends of the Earth, another national organization. He is the subject of John McPhee's book, "Encounters with the Archdruid," now in its 16th printing. Through March and April five other lectures and panel discussions will approach the Man and Nature theme from several directions, from the present and future of Chesapeake Bay to the ethics and philosophy of environmental awareness.

On March 27 there will be a lecture by former Delaware governor Russell W. Peterson, called, "An Earth Ethic: the University, the Biosphere and Our Grandchildren."

While serving as governor from 1969 to 1973, Peterson pushed through the legislature the Delaware Coastal Zone Act, one of the nation's first attempts by a state government to recognize the importance of coastal wetlands and to control their destruction and development.

A past president of the Audobon Society, he has won awards for his environmental activism from national and international organizations such as the National Wildlife Federation and World Wildlife Fund. In 1988 he received an honorary doctorate from SSU.

Another speaker on April 4 will be Chief Joseph Neale Raincrow of the East Coast Shawnees, for 20 years an administrator and teacher at American University in Washington.

On April 10 a summation of the series will be presented by Colman McCarthy, Washington Post columnist specializing in issues relating to the environment and peace.

During the series of special programs there will be related exhibits in Blackwell Library and the Atrium Gallery at the University Center. Films, a drama, poetry readings and philosophy society symposium relating to the theme are scheduled through March, April and May.

A high point will be Earth Day, in April, the first such observance at the University in several years. It is being chaired by Harry E. Womack, a professor of biology.

'Savor the Symphony'

"Savor the Symphony" is the theme of a fundraiser to support the Salisbury Symphony Orchestra on Friday, March 17 from 7-9:30 p.m. The event is sponsored the WMDT-TV and Salisbury State.

Patrons of the orchestra will have the opportunity to sample specialties of area restaurants, caterers and wine and cheese shops while enjoying a series of mini-concerts.

Throughout the evening the Salisbury Symphony Ensembles (String Quartet, Brass Quintet and the Chamber Ensemble) will perform. The entire orchestra will provide the finale. Patrons can sample the free food and beverages supplied by the exhibitors and listen to music while strolling through the University's Center Wicomico Room.

"A young, vital and growing orchestra, the Salisbury Symphony Orchestra is greatly in need of funds to continue its phenomenal growth since its birth three years ago," said Elaine Wheeler, the event coordinator. "The orchestra attracts quality musicians from all over the Eastern Shore who travel, rehearse and perform at their own expense. However, music scores, quality instruments and program support are very expensive. This event will go a long way toward enabling the orchestra to upgrade itself in so many ways, improvements which will be appreciated by music lovers of all ages."

Organizers hope to raise $10,000 for the orchestra. The orchestra was formed in 1985 by Dr. Thomas G. Elliot, chair of the Department of Music, and the orchestra conductor.

A lot of people came up to me when I first got here and asked if I would be willing to form the orchestra," Elliot said recently.

He said he thought it would be difficult to come up with 50 or 60 good musicians willing to spend the time it takes to be a member of a symphony orchestra.

He began with a nucleus-a string quartet, the members of which were excited about the idea of having a symphony orchestra.

"I made hundreds of phone calls," Elliot said. "Finally, in January of 1986, we had our first rehearsal."

Elliot said there were only 20 musicians in the first season of the Salisbury Symphony Orchestra. About 50 is a good average size, he said. Now they have 64 members.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Department of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever you may reside. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep your first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away from alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit area or a place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you need an escort to or from your car, call Public Safety at 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact Public Safety, located in HH room 022, 543-6222.

Personal Counseling

Personal counseling is provided for students by the Center for Personal and Professional Development (CPPD), located in the University Center, room 263. The CPPD is open 8:30 a.m.-7 p.m., Monday - Thursday, and 8:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m. on Friday. Only personal counseling services will be available after 4:30 p.m. on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. On Thursday, only career planning and placement services will be offered after 4:30 p.m.

Appointments may be made in person or by calling 543-6070. Walk-in hours are 1-3 p.m., Monday-Thursday. All counseling is confidential and free of charge to SSU students.

Maggs ID Procedure

Beginning this spring, all Maggs PAC users must present a valid SSU ID card to be held by the gym student worker. IDs will be collected before entering the main gym, weight room and Nautilus Center.

This is for both the students' and staff's benefit. It will keep Maggs available only for University members and eligible guests.

Please remember to bring your ID card for both recreational and intramural play. If you have any questions, contact Tom Stitcher or Mike Butler at 543-6350.

Financial Aid

Financial Aid Applications for 1989-90 are available in the Financial Aid Office, Room, 243, Holloway Hall. For priority funding, both the FAF and SSU Financial Aid Application must be received by the Financial Aid Office by March 1.

February Open House

The University invites all prospective students and their families to an Open House on Saturday, February 11, from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Originating at the University Center, in the Wicomico Room, the Open House includes an informal coffee hour featuring presentations by faculty members and administrators about various aspects of the University and a walking tour of the campus and its facilities hosted by an SSU student. Individual counseling with representatives of the Admissions-Financial Aid Office is available at the conclusion of the Open House.

The University urges all students to visit Salisbury State University as part of the college selection process.

For more information on either Salisbury State University or the Open House, call the Admissions Office at 543-6160.

Attention DECmate Users

Thanks to the Computer Center, the Publications Department is able to convert information stored on a DECmate disk to typset material.

We ask that anyone who has access to a DECmate utilize this time-saving procedure.

Please call the Publications Department at 543-6030 for more information.

Honors Convocation Deadline

The Honors Convocation Committee would like to remind faculty and adminstration that deadlines for awards are coming up in early March.

Awards given by departments listed in last year's Convocation program will be included in the 1989 program upon request. Please respond to the Academic Dean's office no later than March 8. Departments wishing to include new awards may petition the Honors Convocation Committee for inclusion in the program. This petition, completed on an appropriate form, must be returned to the Academic Dean's office by March 1. Honor organizations are reminded to select new members so that all names of recipients can be submitted by March 8.

For additional information please contact the Dean of Students office in the University Center or call 543-6080.

Rights and Privacy Act

SSU will assume the right, under the provisions of the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act, to provide student directory information without prior consent of the student. Directory information is defined as a student's name, local address (if listed), date and place of birth, major field of study, participation in officially recognized activities and sports, weight and height of an athletic team member, dates of attendance, degrees and awards received, most recent previous educational agency or institution attended and listing of officers of student organizations (including names and addresses).

In the event a student wants more or less than directory information released, please notify the Office of the Dean of Students, at 543-6080, or stop by room 212, University Center.

Brochures on Student Code of Conduct, Judicial System And Sexual Harassment Policy

To better provide students with information on expectations for responsible citizenship and procedures for judicial proceedings, a written Student Code of Conduct is published along with a Judicial System Guide. Topics included in the Code of Conduct include academic and computer dishonesty; theft; possession, storage, use of firearms; drug and alcohol use; misuse of college property; false information; assault and verbal harassment; violence and extremism; disruptive behavior; sexual harassment; and hazing.

The Judicial Guide explains disciplinary proceedings in residence halls and campuswide, the function of student advocates, procedural and due process, sanctions and appeals.

The University Sexual Harassment Policy describes informal and formal procedures for handling complaints. Copies of all three brochures will be widely circulated to students and will be available from the University Center Information Desk and Dean of Students Office, Room 212 University Center.

Student Insurance

Students and/or their dependents now have an opportunity to enroll in a very flexible and convenient insurance plan—The Sentry Student Security Plan.

Any full or part-time student who is registered and attending a state accredited college or university that formally authorizes the Sentry plan is eligible to enroll. There are no restrictions based on the number of credits or non-credit scholastic hours. Coverage may also be maintained during the summer vacations and up to one term after graduation. This program offers several good options. Please stop by the Health Center for a brochure or application. SSU has authorized this insurance program.

School of Education Competency Requirements

The School of Education requires that students who apply for admission to the Professional Teacher Education Program must complete specific tests in reading, writing, mathematics and speech. Starting with 1988 fall semester the tests used to satisfy the competency requirements will be two sections from the Core Battery of the National Teacher Examination (NTE). The two sections are the Test of Communication Skills and the Test of General Knowledge. Communication Arts 250, Instructional Communication, will continue to satisfy the speech requirement.

If students wish to apply for admission to the Professional Teacher Education Program for Fall, 1989 and have not taken the current education competency tests, they must sign up for the March 4, 1989 NTE testing session. The registration is due by January 30 for the March testing and May 15 for the June testing. To qualify for admission to the Profesional Teacher Education Program, students must achieve a score on these tests equal to or better than the qualifying score for Maryland certification requirements. Students who do not achieve a satisfactory score may retake one or both of the tests at the next testing session.

There will be an NTE workshop on Thursday, Februrary 16, at 3:30 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the University Center for students who will be taking the Test of Communication Skills and the Test of General Knowledge in March. Test-taking strategies, test content and study materials will be discussed at the meeting.

Applications for the March 4 or June 17 test can be obtained at the School of Education Office, CH-148. Questions about test requirements should be directed to Dr. Gerry Rossi, Literacy Task Force chair, in CH-154 or Al Constantine, director of Field Experiences, in CH-148.A.

Attention May Graduates

Commencement Exercises will be held on Saturday, May 27, at 10 a.m. in the Wicomico Youth & Civic Center. Further information regarding graduation will follow shortly.

Minority Workshop Presented

Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity Inc., the Dean of Students Office and the Center for Personal and Professional Development presents: A Social and Academic Adjustment Workshop for Minorities in a College Environment.

"With over 350 minority students now enrolled at SSU, it is imperative that we begin to address some of their specific concerns," said John Fields, associate dean of students and director of minority affairs.

Toward that end, the organizations are hosting this event on Saturday, February 25, in the Wicomico Room of the University Center. The event will take place from 8:30 a.m. - 3 p.m., and the guest speaker will be Edwin Nichols, Ph.D., industrial psychologist and assistant to the division director, education and service system liaison at the National Institute of Mental Health.

All SSU students, faculty and staff are invited to register for the minority workshop. RSVP's will be accepted no later than February 11 through the Dean of Students Office, 543-6080.

Mathematical Sciences Position

The Department of Mathematical Sciences has an opening for fall. A strong commitment to the mathematical sciences point of view (a blending of pure and applied mathematics, statistics and computer science) and good teaching recommendations are essential. Candidates must be able to teach students with diverse backgrounds (this includes the ability to communicate effectively in English, both orally and in writing). Rank and salary will be commensurate with credentials and experience. A Ph.D. in one of the mathematical sciences is required for a tenure-track position. Applicants not possessing a Ph.D. will be considered for a one-year contractual position. Non-U.S. citizens must have U.S. Immigration and naturalization authorization to accept employment in this country.

Initial screening will be based on each applicant's academic background and teaching experience supported by recommendations. Final selection will be made on the basis of the foregoing, a personal interview and a formal lecture on a topic of the candidate's choice.

Send letter of application, resume and three letters of recommendation to:

Search Committee
Department of Mathematical Sciences
Salisbury State University
Salisbury, Maryland 21801

Screening of applications will begin on March 15 and continue until the position is filled.

Salisbury State University is an Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer. Women, minorities and the disabled are encouraged to apply.

Sierra Club Speaker

Joan Willey, chair for the Potomac Region of the Sierra Club, will conduct an issues forum titled, "Citizens Campaign for the Environment '89," on Wednesday, February 15, from 6:30-8:30 p.m. in the University Center, room Nanticoke A.

The program, sponsored in part by the SSU Outdoor Club, will consider non-tidal wetlands, recycling enhancement and toxic pollution in the surface water.

The Sierra Club, a national non-profit organization, attempts to generate concern for environmental issues within the general public and to propose remedies for those concerns.

Personnel News

BEST WISHES to the following employees: Janice French of Data Processing upon the birth of her first child, David, on January 17; Dr. Barbara Schultz (formerly Barbara Townsend) of the Education Department upon her marriage to Dr. John D. Schultz on January 7; and Thurlow C. Leister upon his retirement which was effective February 1.

DEADLINE APPROACHING - Employees enrolled in the Spending Accounts (health and/or dependent care) must submit their 1988 receipts prior to the end of March to be eligible for reimbursement. Any money left in one's account on March 31 will be returned to the state coffers as legally permitted by Federal law.

WELCOME to new employees: Wanda Yackley in Data Processing; Edward Daubert in Maintenance; Sandra Ballard in Food Service; Michael Layschock in Physical Plant; and Terry Cohen and Laurel Campbell in Public Relations.

TAX SHELTER PROGRAM participants take note: If you are sheltering the maximum amount of money permitted for your particular program and you are simultaneously in the old retirement system with the state of Maryland, you need to reduce the amount you contribute to the tax shelter by the amount you are contributing to the retirement system. If you fail to make such an adjustment you will be in conflict with the newest IRS regulations. Further information on tax shelters can be found in the IRS publication No. 571 which should be available at the local tax office in the old Post Office Building in downtown Salisbury.

The Personnel and Payroll Departments have moved their offices to Holloway Hall: rooms 222 and 223 for Personnel, room 221 for Payroll.

Atrium Basket Exhibit

Baskets, baskets, baskets! The University Center's Gallery is currently exhibiting baskets made on Delmarva, the Chesapeake Basket Guild is supplying the exhibit.

The guild has only 12 members, to date, but they are very talented and busy people. The organization was started in 1988 with the purpose of bringing together basket weavers to share and learn new skills. The group includes both experienced and novice men and women who sponsor exhibits and workshops from time to time. They meet monthly at the Dorchester Arts Center in Cambridge. For information call the Arts Center at 228-7782.

The exhibit of 93 baskets is displayed on bales of hay, rustic crates and pallets, among old wagon wheels and basket-making equipment. Egg and produce baskets created with specific functions in mind are displayed alongside free form creations in which form, rather than function, is the purpose. There is great variety in the materials used, as well as size and shape.

To view the exhibit visit the Atrium Gallery between February 4-24. It will be open weekdays 11 a.m.-3 p.m. and weekends 1-4 p.m. The Gallery in Blackwell Library is running a basket show called "BasketWeave" from February 8-March 2.

Morgan State Choir

The internationally recognized Morgan State University Choir will appear in concert on Wednesday, February 15, at 8 p.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium. The choir initiates a month's long celebration of Afro-American history at SSU.

The outstanding 50-member choir, under the direction of Dr. Nathan Carter, has a distinguished history. It has toured both the United States and Europe, recording with the London Symphony and Helsinki Philharmonic Orchestras.

It also has sung with the Baltimore Symphony and New York Philharmonic. Last season the choir was the guest of the Oakland Symphony in California where it performed scenes from "The Life of a Martyr," about the late Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

In its home town of Baltimore, the choir has earned kudos and support, performing in the Concert Hall of the Peabody Conservatory of Music, the Meyerhoff Symphony Hall and the Lyric Opera House, as well as the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington, D.C. Its last performance in Salisbury was in 1987.

Admission to the concert is $2 at the door. Other Black History Month events include a minority student workship on February 25, which examines the problems of blacks and other minorities on a predominantly white campus; a screening of Cry Freedom on February 26, a movie about the friendship between a black activist and a liberal white newspaper editor in South Africa; and American Pictures on March 13, a multimedia show and discussion with Jacob Holdt of Denmark, who spent five years photographing America's underclass.

For further information on any of these activities, contact the Black Student Union at 543-6188 or the Dean of Students Office at 543-6080.

Tassle Worth the Hassle

"The tassle is worth the hassle," says a plaque greeting students at the entrance of the bookstore. How much is it worth? For 41 recent SSU graduates, its immediate value is $1 million—in scholarships to graduate schools across the country.

An unofficial poll by SSU faculty advisors of their 1988 and 1987 graduates revealed students winning scholarships worth an estimated $1,004,454 over the length of their graduate degree programs.

Just as significantly, the SSU alums are enrolled in some of the top-ranked graduate programs in the country, from Carnegie Mellon University (CMU) and the University of Minnesota to Purdue and the Ivy League University of Pennsylvania.

Patricia Jenkins of Baltimore, for example, was teaching school in St. Mary's County when she decided to get her master's in English from SSU. "It whetted my appetite for more," she said. This year she began an assistantship valued at $46,000 at Purdue where she is now working on her Ph.D. in English and rhetoric. Charles Hill of Salisbury, a 1987 SSU alumnus, won a teaching assistantship in rhetoric to CMU. He was one of only seven people accepted into its program. Both rhetoric programs are top-ranked nationally.

Edward Sumstine, also of Salisbury, a political science graduate, was awarded a Ph.D. assistantship to Minnesota. According to an American Council of Education survey, Minnesota's political science program is ranked eighth nationally, Sumstine said.

Carol Culp of Rockville and Ocean City was awarded a full tuition and support scholarship valued at $80,000 to Penn for her Ph.D. in clinical psychology. Penn's psychology department is of international stature, according to Dr. Natalia Stovall, SSU professor and Culp mentor.

The scholarships took the form of grants, waivers of tuition and fees, advanced placement, teaching assistantships and research fellowships. Other members of the classes of '88 and '87 were enrolled in graduate school this fall, according to the poll, but either were not on scholarship or couldn't be reached for a dollar value if they were.

Most of those going on are from the schools of liberal arts and science.

A sense that we're attracting a better caliber of student to Salisbury is taking hold, said Dr. K. Nelson Bulter, vice president of Academic Affairs. This translates into increased interest in graduate studies.

"The difference between 10 years ago and today is night and day," agreed Dr. Raymond "Tony" Whall, director of the SSU Honors Program for gifted students. The average SATs for students currently in the Honors Program is 1170, with high school GPAs of 3.45. "And there are a lot of students here with these qualifications who are not in it." Ten years ago the program didn't exist.

At the bookstore, "The tassle is worth the hassle," is sold in a cross stitch needlework kit. It is a popular gift among seniors, according to the store manager.

Burroughs Honored

At the recent annual Maryland Tennis Association (MTA) meeting at the Radisson Hotel in Annapolis, Dean Burroughs, head tennis coach was honored.

Burroughs received the Maury Schwartzman Player Development Award. A new award sponsored by the MTA and the Bare Hills Tennis Club, Burroughs was the top choice as its first recipient. The award recognizes annually a coach or teaching pro who most significantly contributes to developing players in the sport of tennis.

Burroughs was cited for his varied tennis career in providing opportunity for growth and development for youth aspiring in the sport. In addition to heading the men's varsity tennis team at Salisbury State the past 15 years, he coached the women's team for seven years. Annually, for the past 14 years he has directed the SSU Tennis Camp, plus several junior and adult tennis tournaments which serve to provide competition for local and regional players.

As chair of the Mid-Atlantic Tennis Association Schools and Colleges Committee since 1977, Burroughs has organized and coached the Junior Davis Cup and Corish Cup teams. College players from throughout the Mid-Atlantic region compete on these teams.

Nationally, Burroughs has served as director of four NCAA National Tennis Championships. Salisbury State has hosted three tournaments, the latest being the NCAA Division III Men's National Championship in 1987.

Schwartzman, for whom the award was named, is the long-time respected tennis pro at the Bare Hills Tennis Club in Baltimore. He was in attendance to present the award.

Clio Film Coming

The Art Department will present the 1988 Clio Award winners in international television commercials on Thursday, February 16 at 7:30 p.m. in Caruthers Hall Auditorium. Admission to the film is free and open to the public.

The film which is annually presented by the Art Department includes the winners in the international categories. Last year's winners were chosen from 17,000 entries submitted from 44 countries around the world. The entries are from a variety of categories and include non-profit sponsors as well as conventional clients.

The Clio Awards announcement has been a popular event every year. Japan, Great Britain, Germany and the U.S. are usually well represented. The international content of the film grants a rare insight into the approach advertisers around the world apply to the respective audiences. The international language of humor is easily understood by all.

Viewing the cream of the past year's commercials gives the viewer a very different perspective on the impact of the 30-second art form. The film will run approximately 45 minutes.

Learn to Sail

"The Runner," a 17-foot cabin sloop was recently donated to the University by Mrs. Ardis A. Welch of Baltimore.

The boat is named in honor of her two sons who ran on the track team at Salisbury State. "The Runner" will be available to all members of the Sailing Club who have been certified as skippers.

The Salisbury Club is open to all students, faculty, administrators and their families.

The club will meet on Tuesday, February 14, at 7 p.m. in room 204 of Maggs to discuss plans for the spring and organize training sessions. Anyone interested in sailing, regardless of experience, is welcome.

WORKSHOPS

SENIOR PLACEMENT AND INTERVIEW BRIEFING - This one-session workshop is designed to inform students and alumni of the career services, options and assistance available to them and is required of those who register with the Career Planning Office. Introductory level information includes resumes, graduate school, governmental employment and job campaign techniques. Intermediate level training is provided in interview skills. Students and alumni who wish to participate in on-campus interviews must complete this training.

Wednesday, February 15, 1:15-2:15 p.m.; Tuesday, February 28, 5-6 p.m.; Thursday, March 9, noon-1 p.m.

RESUME WRITING - This one-session workshop is designed to help develop one of the job campaign's basic tools. A discussion of such topics includes various formats, uses of resume, printing, cover letters and sections of the resume. Handouts are provided. Bring your draft resume if you have one.

Thursday, February 16, 3-4:30 p.m.; Monday, February 27, 1-2:30 p.m.; Tuesday, March 7, 3:30-5 p.m.

INTERVIEW SKILLS - A must for every senior. This one-session workshop is designed to assist in preparing for the professional job interview. A review of such topics includes non-verbal behavior, dress, questions, interview phases and preparation. Handouts are provided. It is suggested that you have already attended a senior interview and placement briefing.

Tuesday, February 21, 2-3:30 p.m.; Wednesday, March 1, 3:30-5 p.m.; Thursday, March 9, 3:30 - 5 p.m.

All workshops require sign-ups. Contact Placement Services Office, University Center, room 263, or call 543-6075.

SENIOR RESUME BOOK - Placement Services often gets requests from employers who want to review resumes of Salisbury State seniors so they can contact them about a job opening. To participate, bring a resume to Placement Services. It will be filed according to major and made available to interested employers.

The Salisbury State University Nursing Honor Society welcomed seven new members into its organization at its recent induction ceremony. Sigma Theta Tau is an international nursing honor society which recognizes academic excellence and professional leadership in the areas of education, research, publication, administration and clinical practice in nursing.

Mary Ann Hensinger, M.S.N., director of nursing at Wor-Wic Tech Community College, was the keynote speaker. Her topic was "Excellence in Nursing."

ADs at NCAA

Dr. William Lide, athletic director, and Dean Burroughs, associate athletic director, recently attended the 1989 National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) Convention held in San Francisco, CA.

As delegates representing the SSU Athletic Department they were part of a record gathering of more than 1,800 people. The San Francisco Hilton served as convention center for the event.

teaches in the Department of Mathematical Sciences, a seemingly unrelated field. However, he is also informed on environmental issues and well grounded in Eastern and American Indian philosophies.

The concept he hopes to introduce is not a subject to be taught in a special course. It goes beyond specific environmental concerns to a fundamental change in man's view of his place in the natural world.

It is Fusaro's belief that all academic subjects, whether in his field of mathematics or in the sciences or humanities, are currently taught from a point of view which puts man and his needs and achievements at the center of all things. He wants to introduce a return to some of the ancient perceptions of humans as but one part of the whole earth. Such an approach would place issues such as man's mistreatment of other living things, or his degradation of the environment for short-term gain, in the context of the earth as one living and interdependent system.

Fusaro uses the term "naturism" for this fundamental idea. Last summer he invited faculty and other staff members who shared his ideas to form a group which would begin a turn around from the prevailing "man-in-control" view of most subjects to an "in-step-with-nature" view.

"Here is a golden opportunity to induce beneficent change. It is also a legitimate way for Salisbury State University to distinguish itself," Fusaro said. It is his stated belief that "colleges need a coherent plan for ensuring that all graduates have a solid environmental experience."

Besides the schedule of spring lectures, panels and exhibits, the Man and Nature group will award five $100 prizes for the best contributions by undergraduates to the theme. The awards will be made for dance choreography, essay, poetry or dramatic skit.

The public is invited to all of the special events. For more information, call the Public Relations Office at 543-6030.

He said it was important for musicians in the area to have the opportunity to play in the orchestra.

"This is a once in a lifetime chance for most people," he said. "The opportunity to be in a symphony orchestra is unheard of. This is something they were salivating for."

Elliot said music teachers have told him the numbers of young children taking the violin have doubled since the orchestra's inception.

"My aim is to make this orchestra a mecca," he said, "a place people will come to."

Tickets for "Savor the Symphony" are $20 per person and are available by calling the Office of Research and Development at 543-6175 or the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council at (301) 543-ARTS, any of the Peninsula Bank branches during regular lobby hours or the two John Hanson Savings Banks in Salisbury.

A PUBLICATION FOR UNIVERSITY FACULTY, FRIENDS, STAFF AND STUDENTS

FEBRUARY 16, 1989 VOL. X NO. 17

Giant in the Conservation Movement Launches SSU Nature Series

David Brower, chairman and founder of Earth Island Institute and who has been in conservation battles since 1938 initiates the first in a series of Man and Nature events at the University on Monday, February 27, at 7:30 p.m.

His keynote address, titled "It's Healing Time on Earth," will be in the Wicomico Room of the University Center.

Brower joined the Sierra Club in 1933 and was first elected to its board of directors in 1941. He was its first executive director (1952-69), and saw the club's membership grow from 2,000 to 77,000.

He successfully urged the formation of the Sierra Club Foundation in 1960. He founded Friends of the Earth (along with the League of Conservation Voters) in 1969 and initiated the founding of independent Friends of the Earth (FOE) organizations in other countries. FOE is multinational, operating in 30 countries.

He was elected to the Sierra Club board again in 1983 and 1986. He was a leader in establishing national parks and seashores in Kings Canyon, North Cascades, the Redwoods, Cape Cod, Fire Island and Point Reyes ('rays'), and in protecting primeval forest in Olympic National Park and wilderness on San Gorgonio. His was a major role in keeping dams out of Dinosaur National Monument and the Grand Canyon, in establishing the National Wilderness Preservation System, the Outdoor Recreation Resources Review Commission (which resulted in the Land and Water Conservation Fund), and in raising the twin questions, What kinds of growth must we have? and What kinds can we no longer afford?

Through Fate of the Earth conferences, which he initiated in 1982, he is currently attempting to bring peace, environmental and other groups together to achieve peace on and with the earth. He is currently absorbed in the Restoring-the-Earth movement and in urging and planning for United Nations and Nongovernmental Organization (NG) conferences on Environmental Restoration and Protection in Stockholm in 1992.

His awards include the National Parks Association Award, the Paul Bartsch Award (Audubon Naturalist Society of the Central Atlantic States), the Brooklyn College Library Association Award, the John Muir Award (Sierra Club), the Golden Ark Award (the Prince of the Netherlands), the Golden Gadfly Award (Media Alliance, San Francisco) and the Rose Award, World Environment Festival. He was also nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize (1978-79) and has received honorary degrees from Hobart and William Smith Colleges, Claremont College Graduate School, University of San Francisco, University of Maryland, the Starr King School for the Ministry, the Colorado College, the New School for Social Research and Sierra Nevada College.

Professor Garrett Hardin, for one of Brower's honorary degrees wrote: "David R. Brower—charismatic leader of crusades for the liberation of the temple of nature from its oppressors, archbishop of the church of the wilderness, archdeacon of the cathedral of the environment, archenemy of all who would sell our heritage in nature for a mess of pottage, and, by universal and unchallenged acclaim, the first, the greatest, and indeed the only archdruid." (John McPhee's Encounters With the Archdruid is about Brower and is now in its 16th printing.)

Comments about his efforts have ranged widely, and he especially likes what Russell Train said when he was chairman of the Council on Environmental Quality in the Nixon administration: "Thank God for Dave Brower; he makes it so easy for the rest of us to appear reasonable."

Other Man and Nature events will take place at SSU throughout the spring semester. The concept of Man and Nature programs go beyond specific environmental concerns to a fundamental change in man's view of his place in the natural world, according to the organizer of the series, Dr. Ben Fusaro of the Mathematical Sciences Department.

Such an approach would place issues such as man's mistreatment of other living things, or his degradation of the environment for short-term gain, in the context of the earth as one living and interdependent system.

Marat/Sade: A Play Which Provokes

"When asked 'Is life worth living?,' 19th century English author Samuel Butler answered, 'That is a question for a fetus, not for a man.' To despair because man's extreme efforts to modify (social or economic) conditions...frequently result in new humiliations is to be either an intellectual sissy or a moral coward," wrote drama critic Harold Clurman in 1966.

Clurman was provoked to this outburst after seeing Marat/Sade, a play by Peter Weis, which a week earlier had opened on Broadway. Weis's drama of "total theatre" which runs March 3-5 and 9-11 at Holloway Hall on stage still provokes, a quarter century after it was written.

Originally shown in Europe with "stunning effect," according to The New York Times, Marat/Sade made use of two historical facts: In the early 19th century, the famous—infamous—Marquis de Sade was confined to the French lunatic asylum at Charenton where he staged plays; and the revolutionary Jean-Paul Marat was stabbed in a bathtub by Charlotte Corday at the height of the Reign of Terror during the French Revolution.

From these, Weis, a Jewish refugee from Nazi Germany who ultimately settled in Sweden, wrote a

Maggs ID Procedure

Beginning this spring, all Maggs PAC users must present a valid SSU ID card to be held by the gym student worker. IDs will be collected before entering the main gym, weight room and Nautilus Center.

This is for both the students' and staff's benefit. It will keep Maggs available only for University members and eligible guests.

Please remember to bring your ID card for both recreational and intramural play. If you have any questions, contact Tom Stitcher or Mike Butler at 543-6350.

Attention DECmate Users

Thanks to the Computer Center, the Publications Department is able to convert information stored on a DECmate disk to typset material.

We ask that anyone who has access to a DECmate utilize this time-saving procedure.

Please call the Publications Department at 543-6030 for more information.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Department of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever you may reside. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep your first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away from alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit area or a place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you need an escort to or from your car, call Public Safety at 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact Public Safety, located in HH room 022, 543-6222.

Personal Counseling

Personal counseling is provided for students by the Center for Personal and Professional Development (CPPD), located in the University Center, room 263. The CPPD is open 8:30 a.m.-7 p.m., Monday - Thursday, and 8:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m. on Friday. Only personal counseling services will be available after 4:30 p.m. on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. On Thursday, only career planning and placement services will be offered after 4:30 p.m.

Appointments may be made in person or by calling 543-6070. Walk-in hours are 1-3 p.m., Monday-Thursday. All counseling is confidential and free of charge to SSU students.

Honors Convocation Deadline

The Honors Convocation Committee would like to remind faculty and adminstration that deadlines for awards are coming up in early March.

Awards given by departments listed in last year's Convocation program will be included in the 1989 program upon request. Please respond to the Academic Dean's office no later than March 8. Departments wishing to include new awards may petition the Honors Convocation Committee for inclusion in the program. This petition, completed on an appropriate form, must be returned to the Academic Dean's office by March 1. Honor organizations are reminded to select new members so that all names of recipients can be submitted by March 8.

For additional information please contact the Dean of Students office in the University Center or call 543-6080.

Rights and Privacy Act

SSU will assume the right, under the provisions of the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act, to provide student directory information without prior consent of the student. Directory information is defined as a student's name, local address (if listed), date and place of birth, major field of study, participation in officially recognized activities and sports, weight and height of an athletic team member, dates of attendance, degrees and awards received, most recent previous educational agency or institution attended and listing of officers of student organizations (including names and addresses).

In the event a student wants more or less than directory information released, please notify the Office of the Dean of Students, at 543-6080, or stop by room 212, University Center.

Brochures on Student Code of Conduct, Judicial System And Sexual Harassment Policy

To better provide students with information on expectations for responsible citizenship and procedures for judicial proceedings, a written Student Code of Conduct is published along with a Judicial System Guide. Topics included in the Code of Conduct include academic and computer dishonesty; theft; possession, storage, use of firearms; drug and alcohol use; misuse of college property; false information; assault and verbal harassment; violence and extremism; disruptive behavior; sexual harassment; and hazing.

The Judicial Guide explains disciplinary proceedings in residence halls and campuswide, the function of student advocates, procedural and due process, sanctions and appeals.

The University Sexual Harassment Policy describes informal and formal procedures for handling complaints. Copies of all three brochures will be widely circulated to students and will be available from the University Center Information Desk and Dean of Students Office, Room 212 University Center.

Student Insurance

Students and/or their dependents now have an opportunity to enroll in a very flexible and convenient insurance plan—The Sentry Student Security Plan.

Any full or part-time student who is registered and attending a state accredited college or university that formally authorizes the Sentry plan is eligible to enroll. There are no restrictions based on the number of credits or non-credit scholastic hours. Coverage may also be maintained during the summer vacations and up to one term after graduation. This program offers several good options. Please stop by the Health Center for a brochure or application. SSU has authorized this insurance program.

School of Education Competency Requirements

The School of Education requires that students who apply for admission to the Professional Teacher Education Program must complete specific tests in reading, writing, mathematics and speech. Starting with the 1988 fall semester the tests used to satisfy the competency requirements will be two sections from the Core Battery of the National Teacher Examination (NTE). The two sections are the Test of Communication Skills and the Test of General Knowledge. Communication Arts 250, Instructional Communication, will continue to satisfy the speech requirement.

If students wish to apply for admission to the Professional Teacher Education Program for fall 1989, and have not taken the current education competency tests, they must sign up for the March 4, 1989 NTE testing session. The registration is due by January 30 for the March testing and May 15 for the June testing. To qualify for admission to the Profesional Teacher Education Program, students must achieve a score on these tests equal to or better than the qualifying score for Maryland certification requirements. Students who do not achieve a satisfactory score may retake one or both of the tests at the next testing session.

There will be an NTE workshop on Thursday, Februrary 16, at 3:30 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the University Center for students who will be taking the Test of Communication Skills and the Test of General Knowledge in March. Test-taking strategies, test content and study materials will be discussed at the meeting.

Applications for the March 4 or June 17 test can be obtained at the School of Education Office, CH-148. Questions about test requirements should be directed to Dr. Gerry Rossi, Literacy Task Force chair, in CH-154 or Al Constantine, director of Field Experiences, in CH-148.A.

Atrium Basket Exhibit

Baskets, baskets, baskets! The University Center's Gallery is currently exhibiting baskets made on Delmarva. The Chesapeake Basket Guild is supplying the exhibit.

To view the exhibit visit the Atrium Gallery between February 4-24. It will be open weekdays 11 a.m.-3 p.m. and weekends 1-4 p.m. The Gallery in Blackwell Library is also running a national basket show called "Basket-Weave" from February 8-March 2.

Ed Nabb of the Nathan Foundation presents Dr. Bellavance $40,000 for scholarships

Nathan Foundation Support Nears Half Million $

The Nathan Foundation of Dorchester County recently presented $40,000 to the Salisbury State University Foundation, Inc. to finance four-year scholarships. The scholarships, amounting to $8,000 each, are for five Dorchester County students attending Salisbury State.

The check was presented to Dr. Thomas E. Bellavance by Ed Nabb, president of the Nathan Foundation. To qualify for the scholarship, Nabb said, one has to secure a guidance counselor's recommendation. The selection process begins in May.

The Nathan Foundation has been making scholarship money available to Salisbury State-bound students since 1962. The Foundation's 17-year investments in SSU now totals nearly $450,000.

The scholarships are always at Salisbury State, because, Nabb said, "We can buy more quality there for our dollar than we can at any other institution in the state of Maryland."

Bellavance said distribution of the scholarship money is closely controlled by the University. "There's been a very good track record for these students," he said.

The Nathan Foundation specifies that the money be used only for the benefit of citizens of Dorchester County and goes to organizations that serve people of every race, color and creed.

The Nathan Foundation was created in 1962 following the instruction in the will of Milford Nathan, who died in 1956. Later the foundation was supported further from the estate of Bertha Nathan, Milford's sister, who passed away in 1981.

SSU News Guidelines

The SSU News is a newletter for the campus community published each Thursday during fall and spring semesters, unless noted. The deadline is 4:30 p.m. on the Friday prior to publication.

Any story relating to the life of the campus, whether it be of interest to students, faculty or staff, is welcomed. Newsletter items should be typed and double-spaced.

Because stories are usually proofed and typeset on a first come, first served basis, don't feel you have to wait until Friday to get your article to the Public Relations Office (HH 264).

Because we cannot canvass the campus personally, we are grateful to those who keep us current on the activities and issues affecting University life. Our office looks forward to hearing from you.

The ROMs Are Coming!

By Karen Carey

The compact disk as a medium for recording music is familiar to most of us. For faithful reproduction of music, there is no better recording medium. But the compact disk is also used to store computer-readable information. The advantage of the compact disk is that it holds as much information as 1,500 floppy disks.

There are now several hundred commercially available databases on compact disk, running the gamut from public domain software to the King James Bible. Blackwell Library currently has one such database available to the public, with a second one on the way.

The database that is currently here is called ABI-Inform. It contains citations to and abstracts from articles in business periodicals published over the last five years. This workstation originally arrived on a trial basis last September. It has been so well received that the decision was made to keep it. Most users have no difficulty conducting searches on the databases, but reference librarians are available to offer assistance if needed.

A second database, this one in education, should be up and running before the end of February. This one will include citations to journal articles and to other materials in education. This database corresponds to the printed indexes known as ERIC, which includes both Current Index to Journals in Education and Resources in Education.

Yet another database is expected in March. This one is called Compact Disclosure and contains information from corporate annual reports. It is expected that Compact Disclosure will only be here for 31 days, so it is important that those who have an interest in this area should try it out and tell us what you think.

Finally, for those of you who have not visited the Library since Christmas, there have been some changes made. The new carpet has been installed. Two glass rooms have been added on the first floor. The first of these now holds the three new copiers, the second will hold the online terminal and the CD-ROM workstations. It is hoped that enclosing these machines will help reduce the noise level in the library.

Outdoor Club Caving In

The next Outdoor Club trip will be to Breathing Cave in Bath County, VA, February 24-26. Sign-ups and a clinic on caving techniques will take place at the mandatory meeting on Monday, February 20, at 6 p.m. in the Nanticoke Room A of the University Center. Students who have never been caving before are welcome to attend. There are about 12 spaces available. The following meeting at 6 p.m. on February 27 in the Nanticoke Room A, will feature a presentation by Dan Parks, Appalachian Trail thru-hiker. This program will preview the backpacking trip on the weekend of March 3-5.

Academic Dorm Hall on Campus

An academic dorm hall on campus with courteous noise levels and a learning atmosphere will go into effect the fall semester. No minimum GPA's are required to be included in the academic dorm hall. Only students that are serious about their studies need apply. If you are interested in being a part of a new tradition at Salisbury State call Mike at 548-9377 or send your name and address:

Mike Arlinsky,
Campus Box 2741

WORKSHOPS

SENIOR PLACEMENT AND INTERVIEW BRIEFING - This one-session workshop is designed to inform students and alumni of the career services, options and assistance available to them and is required of those who register with the Career Planning Office. Introductory level information includes resumes, graduate school, governmental employment and job campaign techniques. Intermediate level training is provided in interview skills. Students and alumni who wish to participate in on-campus interviews must complete this training.

Tuesday, February 28, 5-6 p.m.
Thursday, March 9, from noon-1 p.m.

RESUME WRITING - This one-session workshop is designed to help develop one of the job campaign's basic tools. A discussion of such topics as various formats, uses of resume, printing, cover letters and sections of the resume is featured. Handouts are provided. Bring your draft resume if you have one.

INTERVIEW SKILLS - A must for every senior. This one-session workshop is designed to assist in preparing for the professional job interview. A review of such topics as non-verbal behavior, dress, questions, interview phases and preparation is featured. Handouts are provided. It is suggested that you have already attended a senior interview and placement briefing.

Tuesday, February 21, 2-3:30 p.m.; Wednesday, March 1, 3:30-5 p.m.
Thursday, March 9, 3:30-5 p.m.

SENIOR RESUME BOOK - We often get requests from employers who want to review resumes of Salisbury State seniors, so they can contact you about a job opening. To participate, just bring a resume to our office. We will file it according to major and make this book available to interested employers.

RECRUITING FAIR - The Ohio State University will host an International Recruiting Fair February 18-19. This recruiting fair is for education majors.

Teacher Recruitment Day '89 - Wednesday, March 22. Sponsored by Delaware State College.

More information on either of these fairs may be obtained from the Placement Services Office, University Center, room 263, or call 543-6075.

Student Rush Tickets Available to Annapolis Brass-New York Woodwind Quintet Concert

On Monday, February 20, at 8 p.m. at Trinity Methodist Church, the Annapolis Brass Quintet and New York Woodwind Ensemble will perform in concert. Their appearance is sponsored by the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council.

This third concert, "Brass Winds," of the Annapolis Brass Quintet's' fifth season in Salisbury, will be part of the New York Woodwind Quintet's anniversary of an astounding five decades of performing together.

The New York Woodwind Quintet is one of the world's most celebrated chamber ensembles. The Woodwind Ensemble has toured every part of the world, commissioning new works by an extraordinary variety of composers and playing a major role in the development of American chamber music. Bernard Holland of The New York Times wrote in 1983, "these players are a persuasive advertisement for the virtues of age and experience, and their playing . . . (has) a wonderful spirit . . . and a sophisticated professionalism. . . ."

The Wind Quintet will join the Brass in a vaired program that ranges from a 17th Century Suite to a brand new work commissioned for brass and wind quintets. The tickets are $12 ($10 for SWAC members), with a special student price of $6 at the door, on a space available basis. Tickets are available at any of the 11 branches of Peninsula Bank or the two Salisbury locations of John Hanson Bank. For more information please contact the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council at 543-ARTS (2787).

Mathematical Sciences Position

The Department of Mathematical Sciences has an opening for fall. A strong commitment to the mathematical sciences point of view (a blending of pure and applied mathematics, statistics and computer science) and good teaching recommendations are essential. Candidates must be able to teach students with diverse backgrounds (this includes the ability to communicate effectively in English, both orally and in writing). Rank and salary will be commensurate with credentials and experience. A Ph.D. in one of the mathematical sciences is required for a tenure-track position. Applicants not possessing a Ph.D. will be considered for a one-year contractual position. Non-U.S. citizens must have U.S. Immigration and naturalization authorization to accept employment in this country.

Initial screening will be based on each applicant's academic background and teaching experience supported by recommendations. Final selection will be made on the basis of the foregoing, a personal interview and a formal lecture on a topic of the candidate's choice.

Send letter of application, resume and three letters of recommendation to:

Search Committee
Department of Mathematical Sciences
Salisbury State University
Salisbury, Maryland 21801

Screening of applications will begin on March 15 and continue until the position is filled.

Salisbury State University is an Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer. Women, minorities and the disabled are encouraged to apply.

Man and Nature Series To Begin

A Salisbury State professor has organized a group of faculty, staff, students and townspeople who hope to infuse into all academic courses a changed concept of man's place in the natural world.

Bernard A. Fusaro, a professor of mathematical sciences, and the Man and Nature group he heads, will present a series of events this spring related to concepts they have been developing since last summer.

The series will begin on Monday, February 27, with a keynote address by David Brower titled, "It's Healing Time on Earth."

Brower is a founder of the Sierra Club and later founded Friends of the Earth, another national organization. He is the subject of John McPhee's book, "Encounters with the Archdruid," now in its 16th printing. Through March and April five other lectures and panel discussions will approach the Man and Nature theme from several directions, from the present and future of Chesapeake Bay to the ethics and philosophy of environmental awareness.

The public is invited to all of the special events. For more information, call the Public Relations Office at 543-6030.

WSCL Needs Volunteer Announcers

WSCL has openings for volunteer announcers. The station needs people who, in addition to adding valuable experience to their resumes wish to contribute their time to bringing quality radio to the Delmarva Peninsula.

Experience as an announcer is not required. WSCL has its own training program, but reliability is important. A commitment of several hours a month is needed to work in this exciting field. Call 543-6895 during regular business hours and ask to speak with Pam Andrews for further information.

WSCL is a public radio station based on campus and provides classical music, news and information programming.

Phi Kappa Phi Eligibility

The University chapter of the national academic honor society of Phi Kappa Phi is preparing for its annual initiation of new members. The society is interdisciplinary, drawing from all departments within the University.

The purpose of Phi Kappa Phi is to recognize and encourage superior scholarship in all academic disciplines. The society hopes that by recognizing and honoring those persons who have excelled in scholarship, in whatever field, it will stimulate others to strive for excellence.

Membership is elected from the top five percent of the senior class with all candidates having substantially higher than a 3.6 grade point average on a 4.0 scale. Juniors, whose academic performance so merits, also are eligible for consideration by the society.

Those students interested in being considered for membership in Phi Kappa Phi should contact Dr. G. Ray Thompson HH 380, 543-6251 or 543-6245, by February 28.

KPK Initiation

Kappa Psi Kappa sorority is proud to announce its new Theta and Iota class initiates. These new sisters were initiated December 12, in a ceremony in the Social Room of Holloway Hall. The new sisters are Sarah Moran, Valerie Anderson, Dawn Beeker, Tracey Hawkins, Carreen Koubek and Sandra Vickers. We would also like to welcome our new advisor, Linda Benson, placement coordinator in the Office of Personal and Professional Development. Ms. Benson brings experience to the sorority as a member of the national organization Alpha Omicron Pi.

If you are interested in pledging Kappa Psi Kappa, there will be two interest meetings; Monday, February 20, at 6:30 p.m. in the basement of Manokin Hall, and Tuesday, February 21, at 6:30 p.m. in the basement of Nanticoke Hall.

Lide at Rotary

Dr. William E. Lide, director of athletics, was the guest speaker at the Pocomoke Rotary Club Dinner on January 23 honoring the Pocomoke High School Soccer State Champions. Lide's message was titled, "What is a True Champion?"

Lide is a member of the Salisbury State University Speaker's Bureau. The Speaker's Bureau offers area organizations several speakers discussing a variety of subjects. There is no charge for the service.

For further information, contact the SSU Public Relations Office at 543-6030.

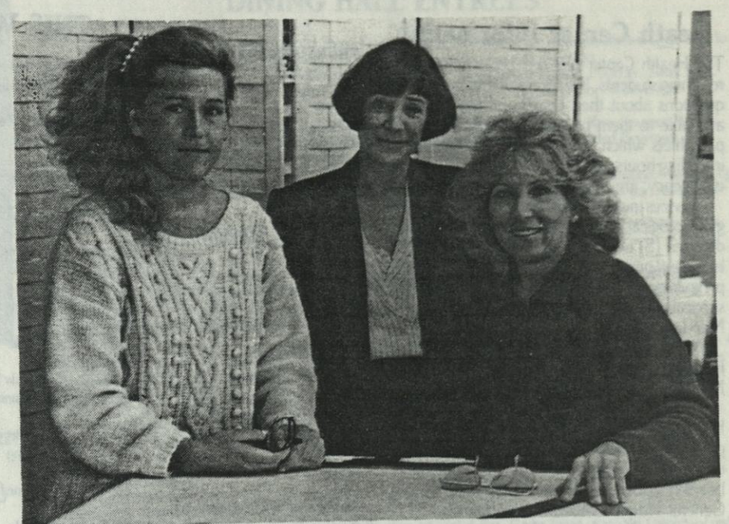
'Savor the Symphony'

"Savor the Symphony" is the theme of a fundraiser to support the Salisbury Symphony Orchestra on Friday, March 17 from 7-9:30 p.m. The event is sponsored the WMDT-TV and Salisbury State.

Patrons of the orchestra will have the opportunity to sample specialties of area restaurants, caterers and wine and cheese shops while enjoying a series of mini-concerts.

Throughout the evening the Salisbury Symphony Ensembles (String Quartet, Brass Quintet and the Chamber Ensemble) will perform. The entire orchestra will provide the finale. Patrons can sample the free food and beverages supplied by the exhibitors and listen to music while strolling through the University's Center Wicomico Room.

Tickets for "Savor the Symphony are $20 per person and are available by calling the Office of Research and Development at 543-6175 or the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council at (301) 543-ARTS, any of the Peninsula Bank branches during regular lobby hours or the two John Hanson Savings Banks in Salisbury.



Judith Pielemeier, executive director of the University Alumni Association (center), congratulates Carol Bloodsworth (right) and Gretchen Altergott (left) on the national recognition awarded their design of the Alumni Scene. The Scene, an SSU publication read by 10,000 alumni annually, was hailed for its design excellence in a national competition by the Admissions Marketing Report. The contest is an annual event for educational publications. Other merit winners included Seton Hall University and Penn State U.

Bloodsworth, University publications director who graduated from the University of Maryland at College Park, has been at SSU for 10 years. She has taught college design courses and worked in commercial advertising. Altergott, University graphic designer who received her B.A. in art from Salisbury State, has exhibited her works including oils and collages, at Christophers on the Plaza in Salisbury. Both are members of the University and College Design Association.

Basketball! by Barry Packer

Just as basketball is a religion in places like Chapel Hill, NC; Norman, OK; and Bloomington, IN, so may the same be said for Salisbury, MD, and more specifically Salisbury State University during the past couple of weeks.

As of Monday, Jim Berkman's women had won four in a row and eight of its last ten, and had clinched a spot in the Eastern States Athletic Conference playoffs. The Gulls upped their record to 15-8 and 78-3 in the ESAC, including a dramatic win over arch-rival Frostburg on Saturday night.

Ward Lambert's men have won their last three, and seven of their last nine to, after a 1-8 start, move right into the thick of the ESAC playoff picture, with a record of 11-12, and a 6-4 Conference record, including a 91-75 win over Frostburg in the second half of Saturday's doubleheader.

Should Frostburg have lost to Shenandoah on Monday night, at Frostburg, that would clinch a post-season birth for the Gulls. If Frostburg were to beat the Southern Division Champion Hornets, the Gulls and Bobcats would have a one-game playoff Monday, February 20, with the Gulls having the home-court advantage as a result of a coin-toss.

And, while much of the focus and attention in the three Division I cities surround individuals like J.R. Reid, Stacey King and Jay Edwards, in Salisbury, the names that instantly roll off the tongue first are All-American candidates Dawn Webb and Andre Foreman.

Webb, a senior, is re-writing the Gull record book, and at present count holds 12 records with another a six definite possibility. Foreman, a sophomore, was a Second-Team All-Region performer as a freshman, and there is no reason he shouldn't repeat.

Webb and Foreman, their hustle and grace, talent and determination, are great players. They make everyone around them better. And, they, along with the development of their teams have driven the interest of Salisbury State basketball to a frenzy.

Witness the countless stories in the newspapers, on television and radio; the appearance of the Baltimore Sun, to spend a day last week doing a story on the basketball teams, and Webb and Foreman; and the outstanding gathering of the clan for the Frostburg twin-bill.

It may not be Chapel Hill, Norman or Bloomington, but Salisbury State basketball is at a high.

Poland '89

For the adventurous, high spirited and curious, SSU will again offer a summer study-tour: Destination Poland!

A country with 1000 years of history and rich cultural traditions, the land of Chopin and Paderewski was once the largest country in Europe. Now Poland is the most defiant in the Soviet Bloc, the home of Solidarity and the Pope. With triumph are also mixed tragedy: the Partitions, the horror of Auschwitz.

Learn all about it this summer in a special course, earn college credits and top it off with a two-week tour of Poland. See Warsaw, the capital with its fascinating Old Town. Visit Chopin's birthplace. View the heart of a people at the Shrine of the Black Madonna. Marvel at the medieval magnificence of Krakow. Experience Auschwitz. Come to an understanding of a brilliant, vibrant nation.

For further information, come to an Interest Meeting, Wednesday, March 1, at 7:30 p.m. in the Pocomoke room of the University Center, or contact the History Department at 543-6245.

Heath Center Information

The Health Center staff welcomes new and returning students. It realizes students may have questions about their health and the services available to them on campus. Information pamphlets which cover a variety of topics including hours, services and what to do in an emergency, are available in the Health Center.

Services include treatment for injuries, illness, gynecological problems, sexually transmitted diseases (STD's), immunizations, mononucleosis and pregnancy testing, contraceptive and pregnancy counseling, dental and medical/surgical referrals and Planned Parenthood of Maryland Clinic.

New spring hours at the Health Center are from 8 a.m. - 12:30 p.m. and 1:30 - 4 p.m. Monday - Friday.

Students are seen on a walk-in basis by the Health Center nurses. Those students requiring physician evaluation will be scheduled to see the University physician. Urgent problems may be referred to the emergency room at Peninsula General Hospital Medical Center.

Planned Parenthood of Maryland patients are seen by appointment only. The telephone number to use to schedule an appointment is 543-6265. No appointment is necessary for current patients of Planned Parenthood of Maryland who utilize the supply clinic on Tuesday from 4 - 6 p.m.

An $18 fee per semester is included in the fee structure for all full-time students. Part-time students who wish to utilize Health Center services must pay $5 per visit at the time services are rendered. Part-time students who do not pay are eligible for limited services only, such as blood pressure checks, weight checks, emergency first aid and health education screening programs.

Off-campus health care providers, including physicians, dentists, hospitals, radiologists and medical laboratories, will bill students for services and supplies. All students are urged to carry health insurance. Insurance information is available in the Health Center or in the Dean of Students Office.

Health Center nurses are Brenda Hooks, director; Ann Patey, assistant director; and Rosemary Cupp; Barbara Ryan and Karen Rickards. The physician is Dr. Louis H. Himes, II. Jana Long is medical aid/secretary.

The Student Health Advisory Committee (SHAC), is a group of students who provide input regarding student health concerns and also serve as a liasion between the Health Center and the student population. If you, or someone you know, are interested in serving on this committee, please contact Hooks at the Health Center by calling 543-6262.

NOTE: Has anyone borrowed the video tape "People Like Us"? It is about STD's If you have the tape or know someone who does have it, return the tape to the Health Center or call 543-6262.

Attention May Graduates

Commencement Exercises will be held on Saturday, May 27, at 10 a.m. in the Wicomico Youth & Civic Center. Further information regarding graduation will follow shortly.

Motorcycle Auction

The Department of Public Safety will hold a public auction to dispose of an abandoned 1978 Honda motorcycle.

The auction will be Tuesday, February 28, at 11 a.m. in Holloway Hall Annex.

Prospective buyers may inspect the motorcycle from 1 - 2 p.m. Monday, Wednesday, and Friday by contacting the Public Safety Office, 543-6222, Holloway Hall Room 022.

Richard J. Ortero

'Information Engineering' Head Initiates Great Leader Lecture Series

Richard J. Ortero, chief executive officer of RJO Enterprises, Inc., a diversified information engineering company, will initiate this spring's Great Leader Lecture Series on Wednesday, February 22, at 11 a.m. The series, sponsored by The Franklin P. Perdue School of Business, is held in the Wicomico Room of the University Center. It is free and open to the public.

RJO was recently recognized by Inc. magazine as the 24th fastest growing company in the U.S. and by Washington Technology as the eighth fastest growth high technology firm in the nation.

Ortero, also chairman of the board of directors and president of RJO, founded his firm in 1979. A company that provides full life cycle services in command and control, telecommunications, computer systems, aerospace systems and electronics, the Lanham, MD, headquartered firm now numbers 500 employees. It has offices in six additional states. Prior to founding RJO, Ortero was a vice president with ARINC Research Corporation for all the government and commercial markets, with special emphasis in the design, development and implementation of shared communications networks supporting the airline, banking, maritime, railroad, securities and insurance businesses.

Ortero received his Bachelor of Science from the New Jersey Institute of Technology, his Master of Science from George Washington University, and M.B.A. from the Sloan School of Business at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He also held the rank of captain in the U.S. Air Force, with service in Vietnam.

Ortero holds a number of leadership positions in the small and disadvantaged business communities, including serving as a member of the board of directors of the Latin American Manufacturers Association, vice president and co-founder of the National Federation of 8(a) companies and chairman of the Coalition of Minority Businesses.

He is frequently asked by the Small Business Administration to speak to new small 8(a) and minority firms on his areas of expertise which include organizational development, strategic business planning, financing small business growth and cultural development within high growth firms.

The next speaker in the Great Leader Series will be William B. Potter, chief executive officer of Preston Corporation. His presentation will be on Tuesday, March 7, at 11 a.m.

theatrically incisive drama of ideas where the spectator was confronted with a political choice—between Sade, the extreme individualist, and Marat, the extreme collectivist. This confrontation not so much answers as asks questions.

The full title of the play is The Persecution and Assassination of Jean Paul Marat as Performed by the Inmates of the Asylum of Charenton Under the Direction of the Marquis de Sade, and as it suggests, contains a play within a play. The time is 1808. The setting the bath hall of the asylum. Historically, the enlightened director of Charenton did believe in the theraputic value of having inmates act out plays, and Sade, who was incarcerated there, did write scripts—in Weis's telling, a dramatization of the death of Marat. All of the roles in Sade's play, including Marat who historically was confined to a bathtub because of an incurable skin disease, are assigned to inmates. Their audience is the asylum director, his family and guests. The inmates perform their parts in the context of their own madness and despair, and do so in the hope of a psychic liberation—as Marat/Sade is intended to be for audiences.

"Through song, dance, mime, declamation and the key device of a play within a play, Weiss...(has) sought to overthrow conventional notions of what makes a drama dramatic and what, in fact, drama is for," said Newsweek of the original production. "...from it rise some of the most powerful effects and most disturbing phenomena..."

Said Time magazine, Marat/Sade "is a hypodermic needle plunged directly into the playgoer's emotional blood stream...it shreds the nerves; it vivisects the psyche—and it may scare the living daylights out of more than a few playgoers."

(For these reasons, T. Paul Pfeiffer, director of the SSU production, does not recommend Marat/Sade for children. "It's at least a PG-13," he said.)

Playing the title roles are Jeffrey Patterson of Bel Air as Sade and Jon Dietrich of Georgetown, DE, as Marat. Katherine Filson of Ellicott City plays Charlotte Corday. Matthew Mazzucca of Little Silver, NJ, plays her lover, Duperret. Robert Forester of Salisbury is the asylum director.

Costume design is by Pfeiffer. Lighting and set design are by Gerald Patt.

A PUBLICATION FOR UNIVERSITY FACULTY, FRIENDS, STAFF AND STUDENTS

FEBRUARY 23, 1989 VOL. X NO. 18

Kidwell Gives $50,000

Irving L. Kidwell, chairman of the board of College Park Contracting, Inc., College Park, MD, recently made a $50,000 gift to the Perdue School of Business.

Kidwell is a leading building contractor in Maryland and has been supportive of several state projects.

Said Maryland Governor William Donald Schaefer, "This is an example of the kind of partnership that is so important to Maryland's future. Business and government must work together to ensure that Maryland citizens get the very best possible education."

In recognition of the Kidwell gift, the University will name one of the case rooms in the new Perdue School in his honor. The east wing of Holloway Hall is currently being renovated to house the Perdue School. The $2.2 million project, due to be completed and operational by spring semester 1990, was funded through state appropriations at last year's General Assembly.

Case rooms will be central to the Perdue School's instruction program. The case rooms will be designed in tiers like small auditoriums to give opportunities to large groups of students for close association and discussion with professors and visiting lecturers.

"A major gift to the Perdue School is a solid and lasting investment in this region's future," said Dr. Bellavance. "A named room secures that investment. It is visible assurance that the donor is a permanent shareholder in an historic venture."

Denzel Washington as Biko in Cry Freedom

Film Banned in South Africa to Show

By Jim Welsh

Cry Freedom, the filmed story of African activist Stephen Biko, founder of South Africa's Black Consciousness Movement, and Donald Woods, the South African journalist who championed Biko's cause, directed by Academy Award winner Sir Richard Attenborough, will be screened at Salisbury State as one of the presentations headlining Afro-American History events on campus.

Denzel Washington plays Biko, who died in a South African jail in 1977 as a consequence of alleged police brutality and his resistance to Apartheid, a policy established by the ruling white minority that restricts the nation's 26 million blacks from influencing national affairs. Kevin Kline plays Donald Woods, the editor of the Daily Dispatch, who was ultimately proclaimed a banned person by the South African government, and who helped to bring Biko's struggle to international attention. The screenplay is based upon two books Woods later went on to write, Biko and Asking for Trouble, both of which were banned by the

Regency Performs February 25

Regency, one of the finest acapella musical groups performing at colleges today, gives a concert on Saturday, February 25, at 8 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the University Center. The performance is free and open to the public.

Regency, winners of the National Association of Campus Activities 1988 Performing Artists of the Year, 1986 Campus Jazz Artists of the Year and 1985 Campus Contemporary Music Artists of the Year Awards, blends swing, classic, Motown, Beatles, country and western and current Top 40s sounds with humor and high energy into its own unique style.

The five-member group from Baltimore parlays dynamic stage presence, original choreography and a high degree of audience involvement into an energetic and entertaining show. Regency has played to college and university audiences across the country with acclaim.

For more information, contact the SSPB at 543-6197.

SSU Nature Series

David Brower, chairman and founder of Earth Island Institute and who has been in conservation battles since 1938 initiates the first in a series of Man and Nature events at the University on Monday, February 27, at 7:30 p.m.

His keynote address, titled "It's Healing Time on Earth," will be in the Wicomico Room of the University Center.

For more information, call the Public Relations Office at 543-6030.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Department of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever you may reside. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep your first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away from alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit area or a place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you need an escort to or from your car, call Public Safety at 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact Public Safety, located in HH room 022, 543-6222.

Honors Convocation Deadline

The Honors Convocation Committee would like to remind faculty and adminstration that deadlines for awards are coming up in early March.

Awards given by departments listed in last year's Convocation program will be included in the 1989 program upon request. Please respond to the Academic Dean's office no later than March 8. Departments wishing to include new awards may petition the Honors Convocation Committee for inclusion in the program. This petition, completed on an appropriate form, must be returned to the Academic Dean's office by February 24. Honor organizations are reminded to select new members so that all names of recipients can be submitted by March 8.

For additional information please contact the Dean of Students office in the University Center or call 543-6080.

SSU News Guidelines

The SSU News is a newletter for the campus community published by the Public Relations Office each Thursday during fall and spring semesters, unless noted. The deadline is 4:30 p.m. on the Friday prior to publication.

Any story relating to the life of the campus, whether it be of interest to students, faculty or staff, is welcomed. Newsletter items should be typed and double-spaced.

Because stories are usually proofed and typeset on a first come, first served basis, don't feel you have to wait until Friday to get your article to Public Relations (HH 264).

Because the PR cannot canvas the campus personally, the staff is grateful to those who keep it current on the activities and issues affecting University life. Public Realtions looks forward to hearing from you.

Academic Dorm Hall on Campus

An academic dorm hall on campus with courteous noise levels and a learning atmosphere will go into effect the fall semester. No minimum GPAs are required to be included in the academic dorm hall. Only students that are serious about their studies need apply. If you are interested in being a part of a new tradition at Salisbury State call 548-9377 or send your name and address to:

WSCL Needs Volunteer Announcers

WSCL has openings for volunteer announcers. The station needs people who in addition to adding valuable experience to their resumes wish to contribute their time to bringing quality radio to the Delmarva Peninsula.

Experience as an announcer is not required. WSCL has its own training program, but reliability is important. A commitment of several hours a month is needed to work in this exciting field. Call 543-6895 during regular business hours and ask to speak with Pam Andrews for further information.

WSCL is a public radio station based on campus and provides classical music, news and information programming.

School of Education Competency Requirements

The School of Education requires that students who apply for admission to the Professional Teacher Education Program must complete specific tests in reading, writing, mathematics and speech. Starting with the 1988 fall semester the tests used to satisfy the competency requirements will be two sections from the Core Battery of the National Teacher Examination (NTE). The two sections are the Test of Communication Skills and the Test of General Knowledge. Communication Arts 250, Instructional Communication, will continue to satisfy the speech requirement.

If students wish to apply for admission to the Professional Teacher Education Program for fall 1989, and have not taken the current education competency tests, they must sign up for the March 4, 1989 NTE testing session. The registration is due by January 30 for the March testing and May 15 for the June testing. To qualify for admission to the Profesional Teacher Education Program, students must achieve a score on these tests equal to or better than the qualifying score for Maryland certification requirements. Students who do not achieve a satisfactory score may retake one or both of the tests at the next testing session.

There will be an NTE workshop on Thursday, Februrary 16, at 3:30 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the University Center for students who will be taking the Test of Communication Skills and the Test of General Knowledge in March. Test-taking strategies, test content and study materials will be discussed at the meeting.

Applications for the March 4 or June 17 test can be obtained at the School of Education Office, CH-148. Questions about test requirements should be directed to Dr. Gerry Rossi, Literacy Task Force chair, in CH-154 or Al Constantine, director of Field Experiences, in CH-148.A.

Heath Center Information

The Health Center staff welcomes new and returning students. It realizes students may have questions about their health and the services available to them on campus. Information pamphlets which cover a variety of topics including hours, services and what to do in an emergency, are available in the Health Center.

Services include treatment for injuries, illness, gynecological problems, sexually transmitted diseases (STDs), immunizations, mononucleosis and pregnancy testing, contraceptive and pregnancy counseling, dental and medical/surgical referrals and Planned Parenthood of Maryland Clinic.

New spring hours at the Health Center are from 8 a.m. - 12:30 p.m. and 1:30 - 4 p.m. Monday - Friday.

Students are seen on a walk-in basis by the Health Center nurses. Those students requiring physician evaluation will be scheduled to see the University physician. Urgent problems may be referred to the emergency room at Peninsula General Hospital Medical Center.

Planned Parenthood of Maryland patients are seen by appointment only. The telephone number to use to schedule an appointment is 543-6265. No appointment is necessary for current patients of Planned Parenthood of Maryland who utilize the supply clinic on Tuesday from 4 - 6 p.m.

An $18 fee per semester is included in the fee structure for all full-time students. Part-time students who wish to utilize Health Center services must pay $5 per visit at the time services are rendered. Part-time students who do not pay are eligible for limited services only, such as blood pressure checks, weight checks, emergency first aid and health education screening programs.

Off-campus health care providers, including physicians, dentists, hospitals, radiologists and medical laboratories, will bill students for services and supplies. All students are urged to carry health insurance. Insurance information is available in the Health Center or in the Dean of Students Office.

Health Center nurses are Brenda Hooks, director; Ann Patey, assistant director; and Rosemary Cupp; Barbara Ryan and Karen Rickards. The physician is Dr. Louis H. Himes, II. Jana Long is medical aid/secretary.

The Student Health Advisory Committee (SHAC), is a group of students who provide input regarding student health concerns and also serve as a liasion between the Health Center and the student population. If you, or someone you know, are interested in serving on this committee, please contact Hooks at the Health Center by calling 543-6262.

NOTE: Has anyone borrowed the videotape "People Like Us"? It is about STDs If you have the tape or know someone who does have it, return the tape to the Health Center or call 543-6262.

Attention May Graduates

Commencement Exercises will be held on Saturday, May 27, at 10 a.m. in the Wicomico Youth & Civic Center. Further information regarding graduation will follow shortly.

Motorcycle Auction

The Department of Public Safety will hold a public auction to dispose of an abandoned 1978 Honda motorcycle.

The auction will be Tuesday, February 28, at 11 a.m. in Holloway Hall Annex.

Prospective buyers may inspect the motorcycle from 1 - 2 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday by contacting the Public Safety Office, 543-6222, Holloway Hall, room 022.

The ROMs Are Coming!

By Terry Daenzer, Reference Librarian

The compact disk as a medium for recording music is familiar to most of us. For faithful reproduction of music, there is no better recording medium. But the compact disk is also used to store computer-readable information. The advantage of the compact disk is that it holds as much information as 1,500 floppy disks.

There are now several hundred commercially available databases on compact disk, running the gamut from public domain software to the King James Bible. Blackwell Library currently has one such database available to the public, with a second one on the way.

The database that is currently here is called ABI-Inform. It contains citations to and abstracts from articles in business periodicals published over the last five years. This workstation originally arrived on a trial basis last September. It has been so well received that the decision was made to keep it. Most users have no difficulty conducting searches on the databases, but reference librarians are available to offer assistance if needed.

A second database, this one in education, should be up and running before the end of February. This one will include citations to journal articles and to other materials in education. This database corresponds to the printed indexes known as ERIC, which includes both Current Index to Journals in Education and Resources in Education.

Yet another database is expected in March. This one is called Compact Disclosure and contains information from corporate annual reports. It is expected that Compact Disclosure will only be here for 31 days, so it is important that those who have an interest in this area should try it out and tell us what you think.

Finally, for those of you who have not visited the Library since Christmas, there have been some changes made. The new carpet has been installed. Two glass rooms have been added on the first floor. The first of these now holds the three new copiers, the second will hold the online terminal and the CD-ROM workstations. It is hoped that enclosing these machines will help reduce the noise level in the library.

Orchestra Openings

The Salisbury Symphony Orchestra at Salisbury State has openings for players: trombone, violin, viola, cello, bass, flute and bassoon.

Any interested students should contact Dr. Thomas G. Elliot, chair of the Department of Music, at 543-6385.

Phi Kappa Phi Eligibility

The University chapter of the national academic honor society of Phi Kappa Phi is preparing for its annual initiation of new members. The society is interdisciplinary, drawing from all departments within the University.

The purpose of Phi Kappa Phi is to recognize and encourage superior scholarship in all academic disciplines. The society hopes that by recognizing and honoring those persons who have excelled in scholarship, in whatever field, it will stimulate others to strive for excellence.

Membership is elected from the top five percent of the senior class with all candidates having substantially higher than a 3.6 grade point average on a 4.0 scale. Juniors, whose academic performance so merits, also are eligible for consideration by the society.

Those students interested in being considered for membership in Phi Kappa Phi should contact Dr. G. Ray Thompson HH 380, 543-6251 or 543-6245, by February 28.

Poet Marilyn Nelson Waniek

Waniek Reads Works

Poet Marilyn Nelson Waniek reads from her books and collections of verse on Tuesday, March 7, at 7:30 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the University Center.

Her books are For The Body (1978) and Mama's Promises (1985), both published by Louisiana State University Press, and two collections of verse for children.

Waniek was born in Cleveland, OH in 1946, and spent her childhood as an Air Force brat in Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Colorado, California, New Hampshire and Maine. She graduated from the University of California, Davis and holds postgraduate degrees from the University of Pennsylvania (M.A.) and the University of Minnesota (Ph.D).

Married and the mother of two young children, she is a professor of English at the University of Connecticut, Storrs.

Personnel Notes

Mammogram Screening Update—Arrangements have been made to have the state of Maryland's mammogram screening unit come to the University on Monday, September 11. Exact location and time constraints will be determined at a later date and all will be notified.

Blue Cross/Blue Shield members, regardless of which plan they may be participating in, will be able to be reimbursed for the $50 cost via a special arrangement the state has made with the insurance company.

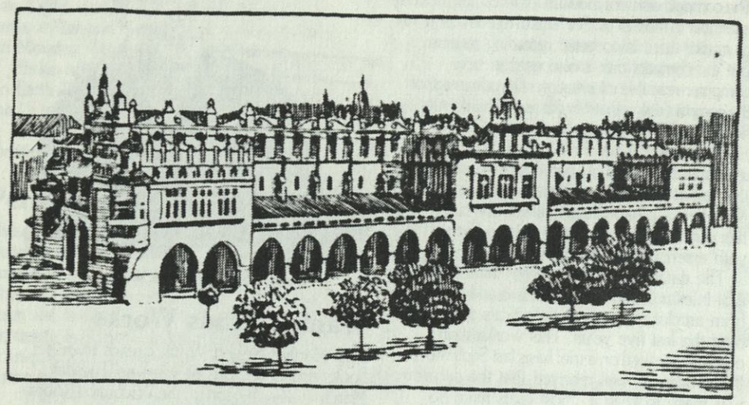
Delmarva Health Plan members will not be able to be reimbursed, as the Delmarva Health Plan directors believe the mammogram should be administered as part of a total physical examination which they provide, free of charge, to their members. Sign up for the mammogram screening has been reopened and state employees or their spouses may call the Personnel Office (543-6035) and have their names added to the list of people to be screened.

Nursing Scholarships

The deadline for applications for the Garland D. and Vivian J. Bull Nursing Scholarship and the Marilyn Seidel Nursing Scholarship is Wednesday, March 1. Completed applications should be submitted to Kathy Schafer of the Department of Nursing.

Financial Aid

Financial Aid Applications for 1989-90 are available in the Financial Aid Office, Room 243, Holloway Hall. For priority funding, both the FAF and SSU Financial Aid Application must be received by the Financial Aid Office by March 1.



Cloth Hall, Krakow

Poland '89

For the adventurous, high spirited and curious, SSU will again offer a summer study-tour: Destination Poland!

A country with 1000 years of history and rich cultural traditions, the land of Chopin and Paderewski was once the largest country in Europe. Now Poland is the most defiant in the Soviet Bloc, the home of Solidarity and the Pope. With triumph are also mixed tragedy: the Partitions, the horror of Auschwitz.

Learn all about it this summer in a special course, earn college credits and top it off with a two-week tour of Poland. See Warsaw, the capital with its fascinating Old Town. Visit Chopin's birthplace. View the heart of a people at the Shrine of the Black Madonna. Marvel at the medieval magnificence of Krakow. Experience Auschwitz. Come to an understanding of a brilliant, vibrant nation.

For further information, come to an Interest Meeting, Wednesday, March 1, at 7:30 p.m. in the Pocomoke room of the University Center, or contact the History Department at 543-6245.

Celebrity Auction

Imagine Mayor Paul Martin of Salisbury babysitting your children, Mayor "Fish" Powell of Ocean City taking you out to dinner, or WBOC TV's Scorchy Tawes taking you on a personalized boat trip to Smith Island.

The Lower Shore Committee on Employment of the Handicapped will be holding a Celebrity Auction, Friday, March 3, at 8 p.m., in the Chesapeake Room of the Salisbury Sheraton. These celebrities and a host of others will be auctioned off to the highest bidder. All proceeds from the auction will be used for scholarships for handicapped students at Salisbury State.

Tickets are $10 at the door.

Special Events Survey

The Special Events Committee of the Salisbury State Program Board presents Club Flamingo as its theme for Spring Fling Week. The Spring Fling Dance is Friday, April 7, and the band is "Y-NOT."

If interesteed in helping with any of the events, please plan to attend one of the committee meetings on Thursdays at 3 p.m. in the Pocomoke Room of the University Center. For more information, call Rhonda Williams at the SSPB Office, 543-6197.

To better serve the student body, SSPB would like to find out which students prefer, a semi-formal or formal dance.

Semi-formal is defined as nice clothes (no shorts), dress shirts, dress pants, dresses, skirts.

Formal is, for men, sports jackets, tie, suit, and for women, dresses, gowns.

Please indicate which you would prefer by marking the appropriate box below:

☐ semi-formal ☐ formal

Return ballots to the University Center information desk by Friday, March 3.

CPPD Evening Hours

Beginning this semester, the Center for Personal and Professional Development (CPPD) will stay open until 7 p.m., Monday-Thursday. Friday hours will remain unchanged, 8:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m.

By offering extended hours four days a week, the Center hopes to better serve all students but, in particular, those students who find it difficult to utilize CPPD services earlier in the day.

Located on the second floor of the University Center, the CPPD provides students with personal counseling, career planning and job placement services. Appointments can be made in person or by calling 543-6070. Walk-in hours are 1-3 p.m., Monday-Thursday. All counseling is confidential and free to University students.

Outdoor Club Marches on

The Outdoor Club meeting at 6 p.m. Monday, February 27, in the University Center Nanticoke Room A will feature a video on arctic preservation. There will also be final sign up and an obligatory planning session for the backpacking trip in northern Virginia on the weekend of March 3-5. The hike will be for a variety of ability levels: beginning backpackers as well as those preparing for the spring break hike on the Appalachian Trail in Georgia and North Carolina.

The meeting at 6 p.m. on Monday, March 6, in the UC Pocomoke Room will feature a canoeing presentation in preparation for the spring break canoeing trip in Florida. This will be the final date for paying deposits ($40) for the spring break hiking and canoe trips.

Bike Club News

The SSU Bike Club recently met to elect officers and to organize a calendar of activities for spring semester. Elected to office were: Mike Lepre, president; Chris Hall, vice president; Jennifer Giannantonio, secretary; William Nichols, treasurer; and Eric Garvin and Mike Murray, club representatives.

Supporting the club as faculty/staff advisors and lending their specialties are: Dean Burroughs, advisor; Paul Zimmerman, club racing; Jim Berkman, triathlon training; Avery Saulsbury and Brad Taylor, freshman orientation; Gary Grodzicki and Bill Horne, touring; and Joe Gilbert, League of American Wheelmen representative.

The club meets Mondays (when class is in session) at 8 p.m. in the Unviersity Center, Pocomoke Room. All interested cyclists are welcome.

Anyone desiring a copy of the new club brochure, which outlines activities planned for the year, may pick up one at the Campus Recreation Office in Maggs (first floor).

Plans are now being made for the exciting spring break tour in Florida. Attend the next meeting and bring a friend.

First Aid and Safety

The cardiopulmonary resuscitation and the basic first aid certification cards are in. Those students who took the course over the winter term can pick up those certifications forms from Pat Lamboni's office. Best time is between 1:30 p.m. and 3:30 p.m., Monday-Friday.

Gull Cagers Hope to Hang More Banners

As the 1988-89 basketball season winds down for the Sea Gulls, the possibility of hanging two more Eastern States Athletic Conference Championship banners on the wall of the Maggs Center is strictly in the hands of coaches Ward Lambert, Jim Berkman and their players.

Dawn Webb and Andre Foreman, Vicki Miller and Joe McCahon are all in control of their own destiny.

For Webb, a legitimate Division III All-American candidate, this weekend is time for her to take charge one more time. The Gulls will play host to Allentown in the first round of the ESAC championships on Friday, while Southern Division champion Frostburg will play either Marywood or Cabrini in Friday's early game.

Saturday's championship tilt could well be Act III of "All in the Rivalry" 1988-89 style. The Gulls went to Frostburg during the second week in January and were beaten by atheir hosts. Yet, just about a month later, the Bobcats came to Salisbury and Webb's 35 led the Gulls to a 71-68 win. And, should the Gulls and Bobcats both win on Friday, they will meet for the championship.

In men's play, either the Bobcats or the Gulls are off to the ESAC party at Shenandoah College in Winchester, VA. Wednesday marked the fourth time that the cross-state rivals squared off this year with FSU winning the two in the mountains, and the Gulls one on the Shore. SSU was hoping at press time for two wins at Maggs, with last night's the second.

Should that happen, the Gulls will face Cabrini in the opening round, while host Shenandoah would meet Allentown.

Paul Pfeiffer with the cast of Marat/Sade

Marat/Sade Challenge to Cast

I think one of the most challenging things for actors is creating a character...who's done things the actor has never done," said T. Paul Pfeiffer, director of Marat/Sade, which opens March 3 at Holloway Hall on stage, ". . . which is a reason for doing the play."

Pfeiffer's two dozen actors have more than a challenge in playwright Peter Weiss's fictionalized account of an encounter between the Marquis de Sade and the French Revolutionary, Jean Paul Marat. Marat/Sade is set in a insane asylum.

The time is 1808. The inmates are acting in a play written by Sade, himself an inmate. The SSU students must portray some unusual people who in turn are portraying some historically unusual people.

"I have them (the students) write a biography of the inmates they're playing," said Pfeiffer. "The inmate does not necessarily have to be insane. He or she may be a political prisoner or may be an orphan who was confined at the asylum," which is more prison than hospital, Pfeiffer added. "I ask them to decide how long they've been in prison. Were they part of the (French) Revolution?" he continued. The attempt is to create original, individualized characters.

Leading the company are Jeffery Patterson as the Marquis de Sade and Jon Dietrich who plays an inmate acting Jean Paul Marat. Patterson played the title role in Tartuffe at SSU and has served as operations manager of WSUR. He is a senior majoring in communication arts. Dietrich appeared as Matt in SSU's The Fantasticks and performed last summer at the Commander Boardwalk Cabaret Dinner Theatre in Ocean City. He is a junior majoring in economics.

Katherine Filson of Ellicott City is a freshman making her SSU stage debut as an inmate playing Charlotte Cordey, the murderess of Marat. Matthew Mazzucca of Little Silver, NJ, plays another inmate acting Duperret, Cordey's lover. Mazzucca is a senior communication arts major. Craig Pettinati, a senior communication arts major who will be directing Crimes of the Heart this spring, plays a third inmate portraying Jacques Roux a radical priest of the French Revolution. Robert Forrester, an SSU alumnus, plays the asylum director, Coulmier.

Other prison inmates are portrayed by Heather Campbell, Jefferson Boyer, Alex Melocik, Will Shupe, Mark Pullen, Glenn Glazer Gynene Stroup, D.J. Forsthoffer, Ruth Larson, Cheryl Howard, Eva Antoniotti and Todd Koester. The male asylum nurses are Steve Forian, Mike Scott and David Layfield. Sisters of Charenton are Susan Rogers Dawn Kanyuck and Suzanne Bennett. Singers are David Cherry, Darryl Dillard, Pam Kinnamon and Martha Pfeiffer. Marie Cook and Joann McCartney respectively play the wife and daughter of the asylum director.

Performances are March 3,4 and 9,10 and 11 at 8 p.m. with a 2 p.m. Sunday matinee on March 5. Admission is free to SSU students, faculty and staff. Call the theatre box office at 543-6228 for reservations and information.

Charleston Trip

This spring break the History Club will sponsor a visit to Charleston, SC.

During the 18th century this southern city rivaled Philadelphia as the cultural center of the English colonies. Charleston is also the site of historic Fort Sumter and of The Citadel, South Carolina's unique military academy.

The club leaves Salisbury for Charleston at 6 a.m., Sunday, March 19, and returns on Wednesday, March 22. The cost per person is $30 for transportation and lodging. Meals are not included.

Please pay Mrs. Ellen Fykes in the History Department (543-6243) or Dr. Tim Miller in HH 378 (543-6243) before 4 p.m., Friday, March 3.

This trip is only open to registered students, faculty and staff.

Congratulations Housekeepers

The Housekeeping Department congratulates the housekeepers listed for zero sick leave taken during calendar year 1988.

On February 8, at a special ceremony, each housekeeper was presented a certificate for outstanding achievement by Melvin G. Smullen, assistant director of Physical Plant for Building Services, followed by a letter of appreciation from the director of Administrative Services, Richard N. Yobst.

Artist Sought

The Furnace Town Foundation is seeking artists to exhibit at the fourth annual Fish,n Fowl Day art exhibit on April 23. The exhibit and sale is open to all artists and students and will be held in the Old Nazareth Church at Furnace Town, near Snow Hill, from noon-5 p.m.

All art forms are encouraged, including sculpture, photography and painting. In keeping with the theme, subject matter is restricted to fish and fowl (fins and feathers).

Fish 'n Fowl Day, in addition to the art exhibit which in 1988 featured the works of over a dozen artists, offers demonstrations of carving, painting, silk-screening, weaving, printing and blacksmithing. Exhibits are also in place to show the importance of fish and fowl in the area. A BBQ chicken dinner is available, as are oyster sandwiches, baked goods and other concession items.

Entry deadline is March 15 in order for exhibiting artists to be included in all pre-event publicity. Entries will be accepted until April 1. For applications and further information write Furnance Town Art Exhibit, P.O. Box 207, Snow Hill, MD 21863 or call 632-1265.

Arts Council Scholarship

The Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council has announced that March 10 is the deadline date for all Herbert D. Brent Scholarship applications.

The Brent Scholarship is awarded to high school seniors and college freshman, sophomores and juniors majoring in the arts. Established in memory of the late Herbert D. Brent, a leading arts supporter in the community, these scholarships are limited to use for tuition and fees for the 1989-90 academic year. Awards of up to $500 will be made to a maxiumum of two young artists.

Applications must be received by the Arts Council office, P.O. box 884, Salisbury, MD 21801, no later than March 10. (No late entries will be accepted.) All applicants will be interviewed by the Arts Council Scholarship Committee on Saturday, April 15. Artists must submit a portfolio and performers must audition for the committee at the time of that interview. Scholarship recipients will be announced in May.

For more information or to obtain an application, call the Arts Council at 543-ARTS.

WSUR On the Air

Salisbury State's student radio station officially returned to the airwaves from its new home in the University Center on February 20.

WSUR broadcasts to students on campus through campus cable TV channel 11. WSUR also may be heard by anyone on or off campus on 107.5 cable FM.

WSUR deejays announce campus events and also air public service announcements for local community activities. Contact General Manager Susan Dedeyan at 543-6195 for further information.

Federal Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988

Federal Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988 contains compliance provisions for institutions such as Salisbury State.

In essence, the Act applies to those institutions receiving either federal contracts in excess of $25,000 or any federal grant of any size. The University is required pursuant to that act to have a board approved policy in place which prohibits the use, distribution, dissemination, or sale of drugs. The University is required to take certain steps to enforce its Board approved policy. Such steps include:

1. Publish a notice to employees that controlled substances are prohibited in the workplace and specifying sanctions for violations thereof.

2. Establishing a drug-free awareness program to inform employees about the dangers of drugs, the employer's drug-free policy, the availability of counseling and treatment and the penalties for violations.

3. Making it a requirement that employees, as a condition of employment, will abide by the notice and will notify the employers of any statutory convictions for a workplace violation no later than five days after such conviction.

4. Notifying the granting or contracting agency of an employee's conviction within 10 days after receiving notice from the employee.

5. Imposing a sanction on, or requiring treatment of, a convicted employee.

6. Making a good faith effort to maintain a drug-free workplace.

Finally, the University must certify to the Board of Regents that it has taken the above steps on or before March 1, 1989. Dr. Bellavance appointed an Ad Hoc Committee in January 1989, to establish a policy to comply with this Act. That committee was composed of Joseph K. Gilbert, Mary Gene Jenkins, John Fields, Charles Cipolla, Elizabeth Rettew, Robert Long, Robert McBrien, Mary Ellen Elwell and Robert Spery.

The Policy Statement has been approved by the committee and Dr. Bellavance.

SSU Policy on Drug-Free Workplace

Salisbury State University, as an employer, strives to maintain a workplace free from illegal use, possession, or distribution of controlled substances—(as defined pursuant to Controlled Substances Act, 21 U.S.C. Sections 801, et seq.) Unlawful manufacture, distribution, dispensation, possession or use of controlled substances by University employees in the workplace is prohibited under University policy.

In addition to any legal penalities under federal and state law, employees found to be in violation of this policy may be subject to corrective action under applicable University personnel polices. Sanctions shall be considered and imposed on a case by case basis and may range from required counseling to termination of employment.

It is a condition of employment at Salisbury State that all employees, including classified, contractual, faculty and administration whether full or part time, abide by the provisions of this notice and policy and notify the employer of any drug statute conviction for a workplace violation no later than five days after such conviction. The University shall in the event of such conviction impose a sanction upon the employee and/or require treatment for the employee.

The University supports programs aimed at the prevention of substance abuse by University employees. Employees are encouraged to seek assistance for substance-dependency problems. Employee-assistance counseling and leaves of absence to attend rehabilitation programs are appropriate means for dealing with these problems. To determine the availability of such prevention programs including counseling, inquiries should be directed to the University Personnel Office or the University Center for Personal and Professional Development.

Life Insurance Program

University of Maryland Insurance Program (Commerical Life Insurance Co. of New Jersey) is willing to accept applications for life insurance at any time during the year, but will not guarantee acceptance until after it has examined the medical statement applicants are required to provide. (During an open enrollment period it will accept customers for a fixed minimum amount of insurance regardless of their physical condition).

Please contact the Personnel Office in Holloway Hall, room 222, for additional information.

Secretarial Vacancy

Effective April 1 there will be an opening for a full-time, permanent secretary in the Music Department. Interested "in-house" applicants should submit a resumé to the Personnel Office, Holloway Hall, room 222, prior to March 1.

Nursing Applications Due

The application deadline for enrollment in the nursing major for fall 1989 semester is Friday, March 10.

This applies to those pre-nursing students anticipating registering for Nursing 300, Professional Nursing Concepts, for all, as well as other students interested in the major. The application form may be obtained from the Department of Nursing.

Applications received after March 10 will be considered on a space available basis. The application deadline for the spring 1990 semester is October 1.

'BasketWeave' on Display

"BasketWeave," a national juried show featuring both traditional baskets and new, experimental approaches to basketry, will be on display at the University Gallery, located on the second floor of Blackwell Library, through March 2.

The exhibition was organized by The Diary Barn Southeastern Ohio Cultural Arts Center of Athens, OH, whose craft shows of quilts, furniture and decorative arts have received national reknown. The SSU exhibition of 38 works by 31 artists, five of whom are Japanese, is a smaller version of the original show which opened in Athens last July with works by 56 artists from 23 American states and Japan.

In addition to such traditional forms as the Nantucket Lightship basket and various types of Shaker baskets, the exhibition also includes basket-like forms constructed of copper strips, wire, shredded American currency and film. Some of the works are closer to sculpture, such as Norie Hatakeyama's plaited paper cubes, which recall the geometric forms and patterns of recent Minimalist sculpture; or Rivkah Sweedler's and Walter H. Barkas's collaborative works representing the stylized heads of a bald eagle and a jackass, which are reminiscent of Eskimo masks or the arts of certain northwest coast American Indian tribes. Turned upside down, both heads are functional baskets.

To coincide with this national juried show, the University Center's new Atrium Gallery is sponsoring an exhibition of baskets from Delmarva which runs through March 4. The exhibition was organized by the Chesapeake Basket Guild, headquartered in Cambridge and features traditional baskets in all shapes and sizes as well as some experimental baskets, all made by members of the Guild.

"BasketWeave" was juried by Jane Sauer and Rachel Nash Law. Sauer, a full-time studio artist, lecturer and workshop instructor, has been associated with the Arrowmont School of Arts and Crafts, the Main Craftsman's Association, and the Delaware Center for the Contemporary Arts. Law is curently researching and writing a book on white oak basketmaking. In making their selections, the jurors considered a work's design, techique, material, quality of workmanship, relationship of the material to the scale and function of the piece and, in the case of the experimental pieces, the strength of the maker's "personal artistic statement."

A pamphlet with statements by the jurors and participating artists is available free of charge to visitors.

Gallery talks on "BasketWeave," given by the University Gallery's education coordinator, Karen Mitchell, take place each Tuesday at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. Mitchell also conducts tours of the exhibition for small groups, which may be scheduled by calling the Gallery at, 543-6271 about one week in advance of the desired date.

The University Gallery, located on the second floor of Blackwell Library, is open Monday - Thursday from 10 a.m.-5 p.m., Saturday and Sunday from 1-5 p.m., and Monday and Wednesday from 5-8 p.m. The Atrium Gallery, located in the University Center next to the bookstore, is open weekdays from 11 a.m.-3 p.m. and weekends from 1-4 p.m.

South African government.

The film itself went on to test the limits of censorship in South Africa. The world was astonished when the Publications Appeal Board in Pretoria ruled on November 27, 1987, that Cry Freedom could be shown in South Africa "uncut and without any restrictions." This decision was later challenged by Home Affairs Minister Stoffel Botha in July 1988, and government officials threatened to prosecute distributors of the film under the Internal Security Act, which forbade the broadcasting or publication of anything said by a "banned" person.

On July 29, 1988, the Publications Appeal Board again ruled that the film should be shown, arguing that although "biased against the police," the film "did not endanger race relations or state security." This decision was immediately overruled by Minister of Information Stoffel Van Der Merwe, who confiscated 30 prints of the film seven hours after Cry Freedom opened in Johannesburg, empowered by the Media Emergency Regulations Act.

Cry Freedom can be seen at 7 and 9:15 p.m., Sunday, February 26, in the Wicomico Room of the University Center. It is free and open to the public.

Leading Adlerian Psychologist To Speak March 13

Don C. Dinkmeyer,Jr., one of the foremost Adlerian psychologists in the United States, who has developed outstanding programs for counselors, teachers and parents working with children, will speak on Monday, March 13, at 7:30 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the University Center. He is the fourth annual Aimee and Raymond Dixon Distinguished Educators lecturer.

Dinkmeyer is president of the North American Society of Adlerian Psychology, an international organization which supports, "an optimistic psychology promoting a healthy way of life," according to Dr. Robert McBrien, director of the Center of Personal and Professional Development at SSU. Adlerian psychology has been used creatively in counseling, therapy, education, community programs and the arts, he said. McBrien, who describes himself as "the sole Adlerian" on the SSU campus, has successfully used its psychology and techniques in his own practice for more than a quarter century. They include progams developed by Dinkmeyer.

Dinkmeyer brings "a national perspective on what's happening in helping to understand children and helping children to understand themselves," said John Hollis, director of Personnel and Public Information for the Seaford school district. Hollis, who like McBrien, has taken workshops from Dinkmeyer, calls him "the most impressive parent trainer I've seen." Among counselors, educators and psychologists, Dinkmeyer is a well-known name, he added.

Training programs for children, their parents, teachers and counselors, developed by Dinkmeyer with his father, Don Dinkmeyer, are used in every state as well as Canada, Mexico and Japan, said McBrien. In fact, the Turnabout Counseling Center in Sussex County has just hired someone to teach the Dinkmeyers' STEP program, Hollis said.

At the heart of their approach is "the encouragement process", which operates on the principle that misbehaving children are "discouraged kids," said McBrien and Hollis. "Praising kids doesn't necessarily raise self-esteem," Hollis continued. "Helping them achieve their goals is what makes them happy."

Hollis believes this is "the best way to help kids deal with that thing called peer pressure, which is a problem today," a problem, he adds, that can lead to the use of drugs. "It is an optimistic program," and one he feels that is needed. "Parenting is the most important job we'll ever have, and the one we're least trained for in the 1980s and '90s."

Dinkmeyer, with his father, has co-authored DUSO (Developing Understanding of Self and Others), STEP (Systematic Training for Effective Parenting) and STET (Systematic Training for Effective Teaching) programs as well as others in parenting and coping with drugs.

He has co-authored three books, Consultation in the Schools and two editions of Adlerian Counseling and Psychotherapy. He also has contributed to several other books and journals including, Psychology: A Journal of Human Behavior, The Humanist Educator, the American Journal of Family Therapy, InfoChange and Elementary School Guidance and Counseling.

He has performed workshops and consultations across the country. In 1981 he introduced Adlerian parent education to Japan.

Psychologist Alfred Adler was a contemporary of Freud and Jung. The three are considered giants in the field of psychotherapy. The senior Dinkmeyer, along with Adler disciple, Rudolf Dreikurs, are credited with introducing a systemic approach to Adler's psychology in the United States. The younger Dinkmeyer himself was exposed to his father's educational programs while growing up in the 1950s and '60s, and can speak to their efficacy firsthand.

The SSU presentation is expected to be about 90 minutes long. The public, especially parents and teachers, are invited to attend. Admission is free. For further information, contact Dr. Maurice Bozman in the School of Education and Professional Studies at 543-6282.

'Savor the Symphony'

Seven area restaurants and beverage firms have signed on to support "Savor the Symphony," a fundraiser for the Salisbury Symphony Orchestra at Salisbury State University on Friday, March 17, from 7-9:30 p.m. The event is sponsored by WMDT-TV and Salisbury State.

Patrons of the orchestra, while enjoying a series of mini-concerts, will be able to enjoy the specialities of the following: Accomac Vineyards, English's Family Restaurants, Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co., Phillips Restaurants, S.T. Moore & Co., Sheraton Salisbury Inn and TCBY (The Country's Best Yogurt).

Throughout the evening the Salisbury Symphony Ensembles (String Quartet, Brass Quintet and the Chamber Ensemble) will perform. The entire Orchestra will provide the finale. Patrons can sample free food and beverages supplied by the exhibitors and listen to music while strolling through the University's Center Wicomico Room.

Tickets for "Savor the Symphony" are $20 per person and are available by calling the Salisbury State Office of Research and Development at 543-6175 or the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council at 543-ARTS, any of the Peninsula Bank Branches during regular lobby hours or the two John Hanson Savings Banks in Salisbury.

Mitzi Perdue, May Gruber Head 'Women of Enterprise' Symposium on March 3

"Women of Enterprise," a symposium sponsored by The Franklin P. Perdue School of Business, will be held Friday, March 3, at noon in the Salisbury Room of the Ruth Powell Dining Hall.

The Symposium will feature three unique personalities. May Gruber took control of Pandora, Inc. and in 20 years built a $40 million business which she recently sold to Gulf & Western. Her two recently published books, Pandora's Pride and Sky Hooks and Track Shoes, provide a unique perspective into the world of work.

Mitzi Perdue, farmer, author and broadcaster, heads the 35,000 member American Agri-Women. Her insights on women in agriculture are filled with wisdom and humor. A Harvard graduate, Perdue has a unique message for current and prospective business executives.

Serving as a moderator for the symposium is Nan Clements, business editor for the Wilmington News Journal. Clements has succeeded in a male dominated publishing world and now heads an award-winning department for the Gannett subsidiary.

According to Dr. Timothy Mescon, dean of the Perdue School, "It is essential that the Perdue School fete the diverse accomplishments of women in business and this first symposium provides an open forum to examine the threats and opportunities confronting women of enterprise."

The symposium, which will begin with a luncheon that is free and open to the public, is part of the Perdue School's ongoing effort to provide unique programs to the Delmarva Business community. For information or to reserve a seat at the free luncheon please call 543-6316.

CPPD Evening Hours

Beginning this semester, the Center for Personal and Professional Development (CPPD) will stay open until 7 p.m., Monday-Thursday. Friday hours will remain unchanged, 8:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m.

By offering extended hours four days a week, the Center hopes to better serve all students but, in particular, those students who find it difficult to utilize CPPD services earlier in the day.

Located on the second floor of the University Center, the CPPD provides students with personal counseling, career planning and job placement services. Appointments can be made in person or by calling 543-6070. Walk-in hours are 1-3 p.m., Monday-Thursday. All counseling is confidential and free to University students.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Department of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever you may reside. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep your first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away from alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit area or a place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you need an escort to or from your car, call Public Safety at 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact Public Safety, located in HH room 022, 543-6222.

Honors Convocation Deadline

The Honors Convocation Committee would like to remind faculty and adminstration that deadlines for awards are coming up in early March.

Awards given by departments listed in last year's Convocation program will be included in the 1989 program upon request. Please respond to the Academic Dean's office no later than March 8. Departments wishing to include new awards may petition the Honors Convocation Committee for inclusion in the program. This petition, completed on an appropriate form, must be returned to the Academic Dean's office by February 24. Honor organizations are reminded to select new members so that all names of recipients can be submitted by March 8.

For additional information please contact the Dean of Students office in the University Center or call 543-6080.

Gull's Nest Hours

9 a.m.-8 p.m. - Monday-Thursday
9 a.m.-6 p.m. - Friday
Noon-6 p.m. - Saturday and Sunday

SSU News Guidelines

The SSU News is a newletter for the campus community published by the Public Relations Office each Thursday during fall and spring semesters, unless noted. The deadline is 4:30 p.m. on the Friday prior to publication.

Any story relating to the life of the campus, whether it be of interest to students, faculty or staff, is welcomed. Newsletter items should be typed and double-spaced.

Because stories are usually proofed and typeset on a first come, first served basis, don't feel you have to wait until Friday to get your article to Public Relations (HH 264).

Because the PR cannot canvas the campus personally, the staff is grateful to those who keep it current on the activities and issues affecting University life. Public Realtions looks forward to hearing from you.

WSCL Needs Volunteer Announcers

WSCL has openings for volunteer announcers. The station needs people who in addition to adding valuable experience to their resumes wish to contribute their time to bringing quality radio to the Delmarva Peninsula.

Experience as an announcer is not required. WSCL has its own training program, but reliability is important. A commitment of several hours a month is needed to work in this exciting field. Call 543-6895 during regular business hours and ask to speak with Pam Andrews for further information.

WSCL is a public radio station based on campus and provides classical music, news and information programming.

Waniek Reads Works

Poet Marilyn Nelson Waniek reads from her books and collections of verse on Tuesday, March 7, at 7:30 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the University Center.

Her books are For The Body (1978) and Mama's Promises (1985), both published by Louisiana State University Press, and two collections of verse for children.

Waniek was born in Cleveland, OH in 1946, and spent her childhood as an Air Force brat in Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Colorado, California, New Hampshire and Maine. She graduated from the University of California, Davis and holds postgraduate degrees from the University of Pennsylvania (M.A.) and the University of Minnesota (Ph.D).

Married and the mother of two young children, she is a professor of English at the University of Connecticut, Storrs.

Personnel Notes

Mammogram Screening Update—Arrangements have been made to have the state of Maryland's mammogram screening unit come to the University on Monday, September 11. Exact location and time constraints will be determined at a later date and all will be notified.

Blue Cross/Blue Shield members, regardless of which plan they may be participating in, will be able to be reimbursed for the $50 cost via a special arrangement the state has made with the insurance company.

Delmarva Health Plan members will not be able to be reimbursed, as the Delmarva Health Plan directors believe the mammogram should be administered as part of a total physical examination which they provide, free of charge, to their members. Sign up for the mammogram screening has been reopened and state employees or their spouses may call the Personnel Office (543-6035) and have their names added to the list of people to be screened.

Special Events Survey

The Special Events Committee of the Salisbury State Program Board presents Club Flamingo as its theme for Spring Fling Week. The Spring Fling Dance is Friday, April 7, and the band is "Y-NOT."

If interesteed in helping with any of the events, please plan to attend one of the committee meetings on Thursdays at 3 p.m. in the Pocomoke Room of the University Center. For more information, call Rhonda Williams at the SSPB Office, 543-6197.

To better serve the student body, SSPB would like to find out which students prefer, a semi-formal or formal dance.

Semi-formal is defined as nice clothes (no shorts), dress shirts, dress pants, dresses, skirts.

Formal is, for men, sports jackets, tie, suit, and for women, dresses, gowns.

Please indicate which you would prefer by marking the appropriate box below:

☐ semi-formal ☐ formal

Return ballots to the University Center information desk by Friday, March 3.

The ROMs Are Coming!

By Terry Daenzer, Reference Librarian

The compact disk as a medium for recording music is familiar to most of us. For faithful reproduction of music, there is no better recording medium. But the compact disk is also used to store computer-readable information. The advantage of the compact disk is that it holds as much information as 1,500 floppy disks.

There are now several hundred commercially available databases on compact disk, running the gamut from public domain software to the King James Bible. Blackwell Library currently has one such database available to the public, with a second one on the way.

The database that is currently here is called ABI-Inform. It contains citations to and abstracts from articles in business periodicals published over the last five years. This workstation originally arrived on a trial basis last September. It has been so well received that the decision was made to keep it. Most users have no difficulty conducting searches on the databases, but reference librarians are available to offer assistance if needed.

A second database, this one in education, should be up and running before the end of February. This one will include citations to journal articles and to other materials in education. This database corresponds to the printed indexes known as ERIC, which includes both Current Index to Journals in Education and Resources in Education.

Yet another database is expected in March. This one is called Compact Disclosure and contains information from corporate annual reports. It is expected that Compact Disclosure will only be here for 31 days, so it is important that those who have an interest in this area should try it out and tell us what you think.

Finally, for those of you who have not visited the Library since Christmas, there have been some changes made. The new carpet has been installed. Two glass rooms have been added on the first floor. The first of these now holds the three new copiers, the second will hold the online terminal and the CD-ROM workstations. It is hoped that enclosing these machines will help reduce the noise level in the library.

Orchestra Openings

The Salisbury Symphony Orchestra at Salisbury State has openings for players: trombone, violin, viola, cello, bass, flute and bassoon.

Any interested students should contact Dr. Thomas G. Elliot, chair of the Department of Music, at 543-6385.

Nursing Scholarships

The deadline for application for Maryland State Nursing Scholarships is May 5.

Students must have a 3.0 GPA on a 4.0 scale from high school or in nursing postsecondary level coursework. All applicants must be residents of Maryland and must attend a Maryland college.

Both full and half-time students are eligible. Recipients must maintain a 3.0 GPA and satisfactory progress toward a nursing degree or diploma according to the requirements of the eligible institution attended.

For more application information, contact the Financial Aid Office at 543-6165.

Jane Agar Scholarship

Applications for the Jane Agar Scholarship sponsored by The Eastern Shore Business and Professional Women of Accomack and Northampton counties are now available in the Financial Aid Office.

Applicants must be residents of the Eastern Shore of Virginia. Three $500 awards will be made.

The candidates for scholarship shall be chosen by the club on proven scholastic ability, character and future citizenship and not necessarily on critical financial need.

'The Seventh Seal' At Honors House

The Philosophical Society and Phi Sigma Tau are sponsoring the movie The Seventh Seal, directed by Ingmar Bergman, on Tuesday, March 7, at 6:30 p.m.

Bergman's classic philosophical film stars Max von Sydow. The movie will be shown at the Honor's House; discussion will follow. All are welcome.

'American Pictures'

Jacob Holdt, a native of Denmark, came to the United States to see what life was like. He arrived with $40 in his pocket and spent five years traveling across the country taking pictures as he went. Hitchhiking more than 100,000 miles and staying in the homes of more than 400 Americans, including the Rockefellers, Holdt sold his blood to buy film.

Holdt will present "American Pictures," the photographic chronicle of his journey, on Monday, March 13, at 6:30 p.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium. Based on more than 15,000 photographs, "American Pictures" captures aspects of American life few have seen. It has been presented on over 150 university campuses throughout the U.S. and inspired a European best-selling book by the same name.

The public is invited to attend this multimedia presentation and discussion at no charge.

Strong Gerontological Program at SSU

"America is an aging society," said Dr. Elizabeth J. Barfield, dean of the School of Nursing and Health Sciences.

"By that I mean that the proportion of older people to young have changed dramatically since 1950. The number of elderly (65 and over), for instance, has doubled since then to over 28 million - equal to the population of Canada - while the population of older aged (85 and over) has more that quadrupled to 2.6 million. Better health care and the decline in the birth rate mean that we can expect at least one in five Americans to be elderly by the year 2020."

This tilt in the balance of the aging population—dubbed by some the "graying of America"—brings with it an increased demand for personnel and facilities specializing in gerontological (aging related) health care. Nursing ranks high on that list of priorities, and Barfield is addressing the lack of them in the field by strengthening the gerontological health component in the four-year nursing major at SSU.

While the care of older adults has always been a part of a nursing education, gerontological nursing as a whole has too long lacked the emphasis given to other fields.

The popular image of a nurse taking the temperature of a sick child or wearing a mask in the operating room has shaped the expectations of people entering the profession. In fact, nursing has increasingly become a science combining the personal touch with an expanding array of technological accessories. Gerontology offers a wide range of nursing experiences in preventative care, acute care and long-term care of the aged.

A three-year grant froom the Department of Health and Human Services Division of Nursing provided the funding for the project which was devised to address the needs of the large, medically underserved elderly population of the lower Delmarva Peninsula.

"The recent merging of Maryland's higher educational facilities into an overall state university system meant we were able to collaborate with the School of Nursing, University of Maryland at Baltimore, to obtain the services of Dr. Edna M. Stilwell," said Barfield. "Dr. Stilwell, a nationally recognized leader in the field of gerontological nursing, has been invaluable in helping us set up a program that will give students a thorough grounding in all aspects of care of the aged and provide them with opportunities to develop leadership roles in gerontological nursing practice."

Within their nursing program, students study the care of older people in a variety of settings such as day care centers, nursing homes, acute care facilities and at Salisbury's Coastal Hospice. An emphasis is placed on the aging process, response to illness and the psycho-social implications of aging. They explore new ways of organizing services to the elderly. "Contrary to popular belief, most older people live independently," said Barfield. "In fact, only 5 percent of today's elderly live in nursing homes."

"Aging is not a disease," said Stilwell. "Changes occur at every stage of life, and nurses play an essential role in maintaining our older citizens' comfort and independence. Dr. Barfield's program is a credit to both the Eastern Shore and the field of gerontology as a whole."

Cooper Gives Organ Concert At Longwood Gardens

The bright colors of spring march into Longwood Gardens with Salisbury organist Nancy J. Cooper on March 12, at 2:30 p.m. As bold-faced pansies and spring bulbs step to the beats of famous marches performed by the artist, delphiniums guard the walkways to the Conservatory Ballroom where the concert will be held.

Unreserved seating for 350 is available on a first-come basis. The performance is included in the regular Gardens' admission of $6 for adults, $1.50 for children 6-14, and free for children under six.

Longwood Gardens is located on US Rt. 1, near Kennett Square, PA. The Gardens are open outside daily from 9 a.m. - 5 p.m., and the Conservatory is open from 10 a.m. - 5 p.m. daily. The Conservatory is currently featuring spring flower displays.

For further information, call (215) 388-6741.

Celebrity Auction

Imagine Mayor Paul Martin of Salisbury babysitting your children, Mayor "Fish" Powell of Ocean City taking you out to dinner, or WBOC TV's Scorchy Tawes taking you on a personalized boat trip to Smith Island.

The Lower Shore Committee on Employment of the Handicapped will be holding a Celebrity Auction, Friday, March 3, at 8 p.m., in the Chesapeake Room of the Salisbury Sheraton. These celebrities and a host of others will be auctioned off to the highest bidder. All proceeds from the auction will be used for scholarships for handicapped students at Salisbury State.

Tickets are $10 at the door.

Charleston Trip

This spring break the History Club will sponsor a visit to Charleston, SC.

During the 18th century this southern city rivaled Philadelphia as the cultural center of the English colonies. Charleston is also the site of historic Fort Sumter and of The Citadel, South Carolina's unique military academy.

The club leaves Salisbury for Charleston at 6 a.m., Sunday, March 19, and returns on Wednesday, March 22. The cost per person is $30 for transportation and lodging. Meals are not included.

Please pay Mrs. Ellen Fykes in the History Department (543-6243) or Dr. Tim Miller in HH 378 (543-6243) before 4 p.m., Friday, March 3.

This trip is only open to registered students, faculty and staff.

Life Insurance Program

University of Maryland Insurance Program (Commerical Life Insurance Co. of New Jersey) is willing to accept applications for life insurance at any time during the year, but will not guarantee acceptance until after it has examined the medical statement applicants are required to provide. (During an open enrollment period it will accept customers for a fixed minimum amount of insurance regardless of their physical condition).

Please contact the Personnel Office in Holloway Hall, room 222, for additional information.

Secretarial Vacancy

Effective April 1 there will be an opening for a full-time, permanent secretary in the Music Department. Interested "in-house" applicants should submit a resumé to the Personnel Office, Holloway Hall, room 222, prior to March 1.

Nursing Applications Due

The application deadline for enrollment in the nursing major for fall 1989 semester is Friday, March 10.

This applies to those pre-nursing students anticipating registering for Nursing 300, Professional Nursing Concepts, for all, as well as other students interested in the major. The application form may be obtained from the Department of Nursing.

Applications received after March 10 will be considered on a space available basis. The application deadline for the spring 1990 semester is October 1.

Attention May Graduates

Commencement Exercises will be held on Saturday, May 27, at 10 a.m. in the Wicomico Youth & Civic Center. Further information regarding graduation will follow shortly.

Artist Sought

The Furnace Town Foundation is seeking artists to exhibit at the fourth annual Fish,n Fowl Day art exhibit on April 23. The exhibit and sale is open to all artists and students and will be held in the Old Nazareth Church at Furnace Town, near Snow Hill, from noon-5 p.m.

All art forms are encouraged, including sculpture, photography and painting. In keeping with the theme, subject matter is restricted to fish and fowl (fins and feathers).

Fish 'n Fowl Day, in addition to the art exhibit which in 1988 featured the works of over a dozen artists, offers demonstrations of carving, painting, silk-screening, weaving, printing and blacksmithing. Exhibits are also in place to show the importance of fish and fowl in the area. A BBQ chicken dinner is available, as are oyster sandwiches, baked goods and other concession items.

Entry deadline is March 15 in order for exhibiting artists to be included in all pre-event publicity. Entries will be accepted until April 1. For applications and further information write Furnance Town Art Exhibit, P.O. Box 207, Snow Hill, MD 21863 or call 632-1265.

Arts Council Scholarship

The Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council has announced that March 10 is the deadline date for all Herbert D. Brent Scholarship applications.

The Brent Scholarship is awarded to high school seniors and college freshman, sophomores and juniors majoring in the arts. Established in memory of the late Herbert D. Brent, a leading arts supporter in the community, these scholarships are limited to use for tuition and fees for the 1989-90 academic year. Awards of up to $500 will be made to a maxiumum of two young artists.

Applications must be received by the Arts Council office, P.O. box 884, Salisbury, MD 21801, no later than March 10. (No late entries will be accepted.) All applicants will be interviewed by the Arts Council Scholarship Committee on Saturday, April 15. Artists must submit a portfolio and performers must audition for the committee at the time of that interview. Scholarship recipients will be announced in May.

For more information or to obtain an application, call the Arts Council at 543-ARTS.

Faculty Wellness Program

Just a reminder for those who have taken a break from the Faculty Wellness Program. Aerobics classes continue Monday-Thursday, 5-6 p.m. Classes are also offered Monday, Wednesday and Friday, 12:10-1:10 p.m.

The Monday and Wednesday evening classes are for the advanced person while the Tuesday and Thursday classes, as well as the noon classes, are low impact. The Nautilus Program also continues at the same times.

T'ai-Chi Ch'uan

The Office of Continuing Education will sponsor a non-credit course on T'ai-chi Ch'uan on Thursdays, 7 - 8 p.m., from March 2 - May 4 in the Dance Studio of Maggs. Tuition and fees are $32.

The course will be taught by Dr. Ben Fusaro, who has studied this form of Chinese physical culture both in the U.S. and in Taiwan. He has been teaching T'ai-chi in Wicomico County since 1976.

Call Continuing Education at 543-6170 for information.

'BasketWeave' on Display

"BasketWeave," a national juried show featuring both traditional baskets and new, experimental approaches to basketry, will be on display at the University Gallery, located on the second floor of Blackwell Library, through March 2.

The exhibition was organized by The Diary Barn Southeastern Ohio Cultural Arts Center of Athens, OH, whose craft shows of quilts, furniture and decorative arts have received national reknown. The SSU exhibition of 38 works by 31 artists, five of whom are Japanese, is a smaller version of the original show which opened in Athens last July with works by 56 artists from 23 American states and Japan.

The University Gallery, located on the second floor of Blackwell Library, is open Monday - Thursday from 10 a.m.-5 p.m., Saturday and Sunday from 1-5 p.m., and Monday and Wednesday from 5-8 p.m. The Atrium Gallery, located in the University Center next to the bookstore, is open weekdays from 11 a.m.-3 p.m. and weekends from 1-4 p.m.

'Nanticoke Naturalist' to Moderate Panel Discussion of Bay

"If the people have the freedom to exercise free speech and enjoy their privacy," said Dr. Robert Hedeen, Salisbury State University biology professor and author of numerous books and scientific papers on the environment, "they must also have the right to a decent environment, a protection of their commons."

"Why is this clear? Because," continued Hedeen, "if we do not have a decent environment all the rest of our rights will prove to be nothing but illusions." Hedeen will be among the panelists on Monday, March 6, at 7:30 p.m. discussing "A New Ethic for the Chesapeake Bay." Moderated by Dr. Thomas W. Jones, chair of the SSU Biology Department, the panel discussion will be held in the Nanticoke Room of the University Center.

Sponsored by the Faculty Cultural Affairs Committee and the Salisbury State Program Board, this additional installment in the University's on-going Man and Nature program is free and open to the public.

Hedeen, a native Texan, resides in Salisbury but for many years has owned a cottage on the Nanticoke River near Tyaskin where he has worked as a part-time oyster tonger and crab trotliner while studying the natural history of the Chesapeake system.

"It is true," said Hedeen, "that the right to a decent environment is rarely articulated in the courts, but until the fairly recent destruction of the commons there has been no need to insist on such a right.

"Now that this destruction is widespread—involving, of course, much more than the Chesapeake Bay—the time has come for the courts to implement within the system this fundamental right held by the people."

Hedeen received his B.A., M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in zoology from the University of Texas at Austin.

Trained as a medical entomologist, he served as an officer in the Regular Army of the United States from 1950 to 1960. His military assignments included command, research and teaching in the U.S. and oversees.

Leaving the Army in 1960, Hedeen accepted the position of entomologist director of the Cook County (Chicago) Illinois arthropod abatement program.

In 1969 he returned to teaching as associate professor of biology at Chicago City College and became professor and department chair at Salisbury State in 1971. He served as chair until 1976.

He has published some 35 scientific papers dealing with the biology and control of arthropods of medical importance, including a series of papers updating the mosquito fauna of Western Europe.

He has always been an avid outdoorsman and student of natural history, and for the last 15 years has devoted most of his attention to these fields of endeavor.

He has published two books on natural history: Naturalist on the Nanticoke: the Natural History of a River on Maryland's Eastern Shore, Tidewater, 1982; and The Oyster: the Life and Lore of the Celebrated Bivalve, Tidewater, 1986.

He has also published numerous articles on fishing, hunting, and natural history for various magazines, including Chesapeake Bay Magazine, Fur-Fish-Game, Outdoor America, Delmarva Heartland and Texas Game and Fish.

Since 1985 he has published over 210 articles concerning the natural history of the Eastern Shore in The Salisbury News and Advertiser under the byline of "Shore Naturalist."

Roderick Nash, Environmental Renaissance Man, at SSU March 11

Dr. Roderick Nash

Dr. Roderick Nash, professor of history and environmental studies at the University of California, Santa Barbara and author of Wilderness and the American Mind, will lecture on "The Rights of Nature" on Saturday, March 11, at 8:30 p.m. in Caruthers Hall Auditorium.

In 1967 the publishing industry commended Wilderness and the American Mind as one of the 50 best books published that year. Fourteen years later a national board of newspaper editors included it on The Los Angeles Times list of the 100 most significant books published in the U.S. since World War II.

A national leader in the field on conservation, environmental management and environmental education, Nash has a special interest in problems related to the wilderness and its preservation. He played a leading role in Santa Barbara's response to the oil spill of 1969, writing the internationally publicized Santa Barbara Declaration of Environmental Rights. In 1970 Nash founded a multidisciplinary major called environmental studies at USCB. A year later the program won a $60,000 General Electric Foundation Educational Incentive award in a nationwide competition involving 640 colleges and universities.

In 1988 Nash received the William G. Anderson Award of the American Alliance for Health, Physical Education and Recreation in consideration of significant contributions to those fields. He served as the 1983 Henry David Thoreau Lecturer and in 1982 the Charles A. Lindbergh Fund named him a Lindbergh Fellow. The award recognizes "individuals whose research strives to create a better balance between technological progress and the preservation of the environment." His previous research and writing have been supported by Resources for the Future, the Rockefeller Foundation, the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and the National Endowment for the Humanities. He is a frequent consultant to the National Park Service, the U.S. Forest Service, the Bureau of Land Management, the State of Alaska, National Geographic and the Rockefeller Foundation. Nash began his interest in wilderness as a fishing guide in Ontario and Wyoming. In 1957 he became one of the nation's first professional river guides, conducting trips on the Snake River in Wyoming's Grand Teton National Park. Currently regarded as one of the most experienced whitewater rafters in the American West, he has rowed and paddled more than 35,000 miles including 50 runs of the Colorado River through the Grand Canyon. In this connection he has been featured in Sunset and Newsweek magazines and has appeared on television in episodes of the Western Outdoorsman and The Today Show as well as in National Geographic specials. Nash had made first descents of rivers in Alaska, California and Peru, and has cruised the Inside Passage to Alaska in his own vessel. A graduate of Harvard University with an M.A. and Ph.D. from the University of Wisconsin, Nash's other publications include the first collection of documents relating to environmental history (The American Environment, 1968, revised edition, 1976), a revisionist study of social and intellectual developments in the U.S. in the 1920s (The Nervous Generation, 1970), and a biographical approach to basic U.S. history with chapters ranging from Christopher Columbus to Jane Fonda (From These Beginnings, 1973, revised editions, 1978 and 1983). The Big Drops (1978), co-authored with Robert Collins and published by the Sierra Club, concerns whitewater boating on the 10 most challenging rivers in the American West. His most significant recent work is The Rights of Nature: A History of Environmental Ethics (1988).

Nash's lecture, sponsored by the Faculty Cultural Events Committee and the Salisbury State Program Program Board, is part of the University's on-going Man and Nature series. It is free and open to the public.

Audubon Exhibit

An exhibit of 10 Audubon elephant prints selected from Salisbury State University's collection will open Saturday, March 4, in Atrium Gallery located in the University Center next to the bookstore.

John James Audubon, a 19th century artist, naturalist and author,is best known for his life-sized paintings of North American birds. Among his publications, "Birds of America" stands out. These birds were remarkable for their accuracy of color, style and realism.

Each of the 10 prints selected are distinctive in different ways. For instance, the Canvasback Duck is thought to be the only bird done in the state of Maryland.

Videos pertaining to Audubon as well as other artists of nature in America will run daily in the exhibit. The video schedule will be Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 2 p.m., Tuesday and Thursday at 10 a.m., and nightly at 7 p.m. (except during spring break, March 18-26.)

Finally a slide-lecture presented by Edward Graham, curator and director of the Audubon Wildlife Sanctuary in Mill Grove, PA, will take place Tuesday, March 14, at 7:30 p.m. in the Nanticoke Room of the University Center.

The exhibit will run through March 25. The exhibit, videos and lecture are free and the public is invited.

Outdoor Club Tripping On

The next Outdoor Club trips will be over spring break, from Friday, March 17 to Sunday, March 26. There will be a backpacking trip on the Appalachian trial in Georgia and North Carolina, and a canoeing trip on the St. Mary's River in Florida. Initial sign-ups for these will be at the meeting on Monday, March 6; a $50 deposit will be due for each. On Monday, March 13, there will be a mandatory meeting for all students going on the spring break trips; the balance will be due at this time. At the meeting on Monday, March 27, all equipment must be returned. Meetings will take place on Monday at 6 p.m. in the Nanticoke Room A in the University Center. All students are welcome to attend.

'Cabaret' Bus Trip

The Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council will be sponsoring a bus trip on Saturday, May 13, to see a matinee performance of Cabaret, the musical.

Preston Trucking Chief Next Great Leaders Lecturer

William B. Potter, chairman and chief executive officer of Preston Corporation, makes the next presentation in the Great Leader Lecture Series on Tuesday, March 7, at 11 a.m.

Sponsored by The Franklin P. Perdue School of Business, the lectures held in the Wicomico Room of the University Center are free and open to the public.

Preston Corporation announced last month that net income in 1988 was $7,346,988 up 20.7 percent from 1987 and revenues stood at $593 million, up an impressive 17.5 percent. Over the past decade, under the energetic and impressive leadership of Potter, Preston's revenues have increased 290 percent.

Preston Corporation is a holding company which through its subsidiaries transports freight by truck. Its largest subsidiary, Preston Trucking Company, is a major less-than-truckload (LTL) carrier in the northeast quadrant of the United States. Preston has other subsidiaries which operate throughout the country and Canada.

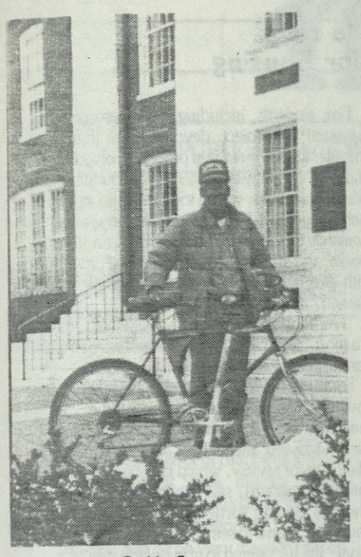
Potter received his A.B. from Princeton and M.B.A. from Emory University. Following his formal educational training he assumed a management trainee position with Mercantile Safe Deposit & Trust Company in Baltimore.

He had a distinguished 14-year career with Mercantile culminating with his appointment as executive vice president in 1976. Later that year, Potter, who had been on the Preston Board since 1969, was named executive vice president and director of Preston Trucking and eight months later moved into the presidency of Preston.

In 1983 he was named president and director of Preston Corporation and 1986 moved into the role of chairman and CEO.

Cited as one of the top 100 companies to work for in America, "The 151 Line," under Potter's guide, the more than 6,000 Preston "associates" and "coordinators" have dedicated themselves to a commitment to excellence that is simple and direct . . . "Preston People, make the difference."

For more information on Potter's presentation or other aspects of the Great Leader Series, call the Perdue School at 543-6315.



Buddy Conway

Dedication!

After Buddy Conway of the Physical Plant couldn't get his car started Frdiay morning to come to work, he grabbed his bicycle and pedaled in instead. The trip from his downtown home through the blizzard took about 15 minutes. Once on campus he spent the rest of the morning helping to keep pathways navigable for students and staff here. Congratulations on duty beyond the call!

School of Education Competency Requirements

The School of Education requires that students who apply for admission to the Professional Teacher Education Program must complete specific tests in reading, writing, mathematics and speech. Starting with the 1988 fall semester the tests used to satisfy the competency requirements will be two sections from the Core Battery of the National Teacher Examination (NTE). The two sections are the Test of Communication Skills and the Test of General Knowledge. Communication Arts 250, Instructional Communication, will continue to satisfy the speech requirement.

If students wish to apply for admission to the Professional Teacher Education Program for fall 1989, and have not taken the current education competency tests, they must sign up for the March 4, 1989 NTE testing session. The registration is due by January 30 for the March testing and May 15 for the June testing. To qualify for admission to the Profesional Teacher Education Program, students must achieve a score on these tests equal to or better than the qualifying score for Maryland certification requirements. Students who do not achieve a satisfactory score may retake one or both of the tests at the next testing session.

Applications for the March 4 or June 17 test can be obtained at the School of Education Office, CH-148. Questions about test requirements should be directed to Dr. Gerry Rossi, Literacy Task Force chair, in CH-154 or Al Constantine, director of Field Experiences, in CH-148.A.

Books on 'Man and Nature' At Book Rack

The Book Rack, the campus bookstore located in the University Center, has several books in stock related to the Man and Nature series as well as some Sierra Club books from Random House. The books range in subject matter from flowers and shells to field and project guides.

Books currently in stock are:

Bahm, A.J., Tao Teh King, an interpretation of Lao-tzu's famous work as 'Nature & Intelligence.' Lao-tzu's short, simple yet profound work on nature-mysticism provides a substrate for the Humanism/Naturism theme. Bahm takes a philosophy-of-science approach to Lao-tzu.

Blakney, R.B., The Way of Life, translation of Lao-tzu's 'Tao Te Ching.' Blakney takes a poetic-religious approach to Lao-tzu.

Carson, Rachel, Silent Spring. This seminal work has become a classic. It needs to be made available to the younger generation and others unfamiliar with it.

Hedeen, Robert A., Naturalist on the Nanticoke and The Oyster. Hedeen, an SSU biology professor, will be the main speaker on Monday, March 6, during a panel discussion of the Chesapeake Bay.

Henderson, Hazel, The Politics of the Solar Age. Henderson is the hairshirt of establishment economics. She is an economist, environmentalist and futurist. Her message is that the environment—and not fiscal policies, etc.—is the basis for the health of the political economy.

McPhee, John, Encounter With the Archdruid. This book is about David Brower who delivered the Man & Nature program keynote address. Brower was the prime mover in founding the Sierra Club, Friends of the Earth, and the Earth Institute.

ROTC Grads Honored

Second Lieutenants Christopher Milstead from Rison, MD, and John Stromberg from Ellicott City, MD, commissioned through the ROTC program have both been selected by the Department of the Army to receive the top 5 percent fellowship award.

ROTC students in the top 5 percent of their class compete for this award on a national level. Recipients receive a full-tuition scholarship to attend graduate school after their fourth year of service. The awardees are given time off from their regular duties to attend school as full-time students and also receive full pay and allowances while using the scholarship.

Milstead is currently attending the Field Artillery Officer Basic Course at Fort Sill, OK, and Stromberg is attending the Military Intelligence Officer Basic Course at Fort Huachuca, AZ.

Webb Receives Standing Ovation in Final Game

by Barry Packer

As Joe Murphy's whistle sounded with 12 seconds left in the Eastern States Athletic Conference women's basketball consolation game on Saturday night at Billera Hall on the campus of Allentown College, an end to an era arrived.

Perhaps the greatest Salisbury State women's basketball player, and without a doubt, one of the most outstanding people both on the court and off to represent Salisbury State athletics, took her final bow.

Dawn Webb fouled out of the consolation loss to Cabrini, but, she did it the way she played every game, whether it be a 50-point romp or a cut throat battle with Frostburg—with hustle, desire, heart, determination and class.

On this night, she did what seemingly she has been doing during every game since she donned her maroon and gold uniform with number 35 on the backscoring and passing, diving for loose balls and getting rebounds.

And rebounds, and more rebounds—29 to be exact.

Which set another school record for Webb—most rebounds in a game.

That record joined the other 18 Webb owns in her autobiography—"The Salisbury State University Women's Basketball Record Book."

She holds the records for most points rebounds and blocked shots in a game, a season and a career and perhaps the best tribute to her is the success of the teams she's played on. There is a saying that goes, "a great player makes everyone he or she plays with even better."

During Webb's career, the Sea Gulls were 67-38 and captured a conference championship as well as other tournament trophies. During the last two years, the Gulls played in seven different tournaments.

Out of those seven, she was named to the All-Tournament Team on five occasions and was voted the Most Valuable Player for the remaining two.

This past weekend, with 32 points, 49 rebounds, three assists, five blocks and five steals, she was named to her seventh All-Tournament Team.

And just maybe her career was summed up during the loss to Cabrini. During the 38-plus minutes that she played, the Cabrini fans, as most opposition fans did during Webb's career, were yelling "number 35 is pushing" or "number 35 is holding" or "number 35 went over the top."

And when Murphy whistled down number 35 for her fifth personal, she received a standing ovation. And not just from Salisbury State players and fans, but from Cabrini fans and players, the scorekeeper, from Frostburg coaches and players. From everyone who appreciates hustle and desire, dedication and heart and talent for the way that basektball was meant to be played.

For everyone who appreciates Dawn Webb.

SSU Students Design Computer Program to Help Eastern Shore of Virginia Residents Looking for Housing

For Josephine Collins, who heads a county and state funded local housing aid program for Eastern Shore of Virginia residents, the new computer software can't come soon enough.

She and an assistant serve more than 200 families and have a waiting list of between 400 and 600 from Accomack and Northampton counties looking for help in finding housing. Each spring Collins must do a state required review which takes two months to complete, sandwiched between her regular duties. These duties include monthly listings as well as responding to more than 30 phone calls daily. All will be helped by a new computerized information system, which should speedup paperwork and service that the office provides.

"It's going to be great," she said. "It's going to make a big difference." To be operational this spring, there's an added plus to Virginia taxpayers: The new computer program is absolutely free.

Designed by students at Salisbury State University, it will be used by the Accomack and Northampton Housing and Redevelopment (ANHRC) rental assistance program. "If an outside consultant had been hired," said Dean Defino, the instructor in the computer science 410 class who oversaw the students's work at Salisbury State, "it might have cost between $5,000 and $7,000 in fees to design, and that's a conservative estimate."

It's also money the rental assistance program couldn't have afforded. In per capita income Virginia's two Eastern Shore counties rank in the lower quadrant of the state's 96 counties, said Karon Eichelberger, a former management assistant with ANHRC. "The majority of Accomack and Northampton's 45,000 residents earn a living off the water or in agriculture. These rural families are scattered in and about 19 towns, villages and hamlets."

"Many would not be able to afford rents for standard housing without this program," said former rental assistance program administrator Kathy O'Keefe.

The ANHRC has a mandate to help lower and moderate income families find "safe, sanitary and decent" housing in the private sector, she continued. "The rental assistance program phone is constantly busy with calls from hundreds of current and prospective clients."

The office must maintain accurate running files on all families, and available housing and rent subsidy, which is computed by formula. The ability to provide accurate information quickly is critical. The new SSU program will replace a current manual filing system held together by a drawer of index cards.

For the SSU students, the program was a two-fold challenge. Taken on as a class project, they not only were learning the process for designing a software program, but to do so, had to learn the program language of the computer software that was available in the housing office.

"Needless to say, the challenge is greater when students have to create a program compatible with existing software which might not be the most appropriate for the job," said Defino. It's much like trying to fix a dinner on a stove whose temperatures are calibrated in Celsius, following recipes in Farenheit. Some conversion is necessary to make the dinner turn out.

Five students, including Eichelberger who suggested the project, devoted more than a semester to it. A three step process evolved: first, studying the manual system, with its state and federal guidelines, which took a month to learn; then adapting it to the computer programs available in the office, which took another six weeks; and finally, creating the actual program with menu, screens and a 16 page user's manual, another month's work.

"The longest process was feeling out the situation," said Don Newcomb, a student from Cambridge who was part of the group.

For Eichelberger, who lives in Parksley, VA, however, the most time consuming part lies ahead. A few gliches in the proposed system were discoverd after it was submitted to the office staff for review, which is not unusual for untested programs, said Defino. Eichelberger, who has already earned a class grade and graduated, wants to see the program go operational. She has agreed to iron out the wrinkles for her former colleagues so the housing office staff can begin transferring their files to computer. Recently the office gained a new computer and they are eager to begin, she said. She plans to revise the program this spring.

Defino gave his students the ultimate compliment on their project: "After that experience, I think they could create a database system for a small company." Their grade: a perfect 100.

A PUBLICATION FOR UNIVERSITY FACULTY, FRIENDS, STAFF AND STUDENTS

MARCH 9, 1989 VOL. X NO. 20

Japanese Prints At Gallery

An exhibition of 36 prints by some of Japan's best known contemporary printmakers is currently on display at the University Gallery, located on the second floor of Blackwell Library.

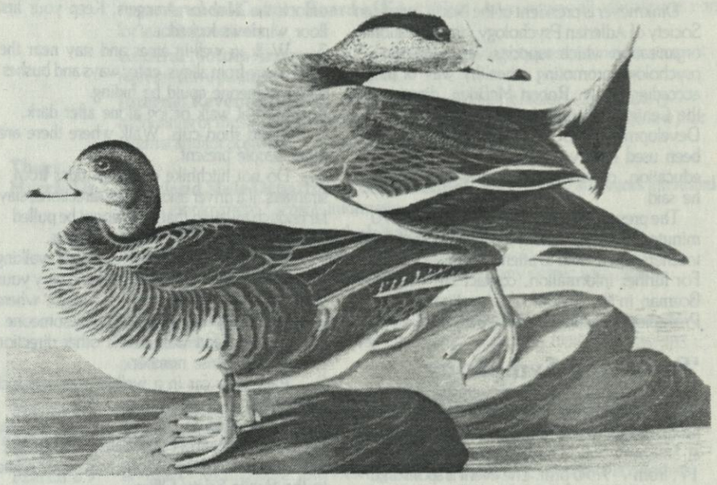
Curated by Andrew Stasik, director of the International Graphic Arts Foundation which is circulating the exhibition nationally, "Modern Japanese Prints" will be on view through March 30, except for the period March 17 through March 26, when the Gallery is closed for spring vacation.

According to Ursula Ehrhardt, the Gallery's director, the exhibition consists primarily of works from the last two decades.

"The style and imagery of these works corresponds more closely to recent developments in modern art than to traditional Japanese art," Ehrhardt said, "though several artists do make reference to earlier Japanese traditions." Both Shiko Munakata and Sadao Watanable, for example, were influenced by the Japanese Folk Art movement of the 1920s and 1930s, which sought to revive the handicraft traditions of the Edo period.

One can also see a continuing interest in the woodcut, the traditional Japanese printmaking technique, but it is now more often used for abstract images than for scenes of daily life," Ehrhardt said.

The University Gallery is open Monday - Thursday, from 10 a.m. - 5 p.m., Saturdays and Sundays, from 1 - 5 p.m., and Mondays and Wednesdays, from 5 - 8 p.m. Gallery talks on the exhibition are given each Tuesday at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. by Karen Mitchell, the Gallery's education coordinator. Group tours of the exhibition may be aranged by calling the Gallery about one week in advance of the desired tour date.



'American Widgeon' from Birds of America. Artist John James Audubon

Slide Lecture on Audubon

Edward W. Graham, an expert on John James Audubon and 22-year curator-director of Mill Grove, will give a slide lecture on Audubon's work with North American birds on Tuesday, March 14. The slide-lecture, part of the Man and Nature series, begins at 7:30 p.m. in the Nanticoke Room of the University Center. It's free and the public is invited.

Mill Grove was the first home in America of naturalist-artist Audubon. It is located in Montgomery County, PA and in 1988 it became a national historic landmark. Mill Grove is unique because it was here that Audubon developed his wire amature which he used to hold his bird specimens in life-like positions for drawing. Also, he conducted the first bird banding experiment recorded in America here.

Prior to his position at Mill Grove, Graham was employed at the National Audubon Society Corkscrew Swamp Wildlife Sanctuary in Florida. He has assisted numerous biographers of Audubon including Dr. Alton A. Linsey, Michael Harwood and Mary Durant as well as assisted with the film productions by the BBC, National Gallery of Art and Pennsylvania State University. Graham has also appeared on television, radio shows and contributed articles for magazines and newspapers.

The Atrium Gallery in the University Center exhibits Audubon Elephant prints daily 9 a.m.-9 p.m. through March 27.

'Indian Way to Health' Is Seminar on March 13

Dr. J.T. Garrett, deputy associate director of the Office of Program Operations for the Indian Health Service, will participate in a panel discussion on "The Indian Way to Health and Self-Care" on Monday, March 13, at 7:30 p.m. in the Nanticoke Room of the University Center.

Part of the University's Man and Nature Series, the program's moderator for the evening will be Dr. Edna B. Quinn of the School of Nursing and Health Sciences. The panel discussion is free and open to the public.

Garrett, a member of the eastern band of Cherokee Indians, has been with the Indian Health Service, headquartered in Rockville, MD since 1984. He is particularly responsible for special emphasis programs including youth alcohol and drug prevention, rehabilitation initiative and youth fitness programs.

He was previously the health system administrator at Cherokee Indian Hospital in Cherokee, NC from 1980-84. There he managed a staff of 160 which provided direct patient care and preventive health programs to a population of 10,500 with special emphasis on youth fitness, alcohol prevention and health career planning.

In the preceding years he held managerial positions reviewing and initiating policies and programs on health, safety and industrial hygiene in private industry.

Garrett received his B.S. from Western Carolina University and his Master's of Public Health and Doctor of Education from the University of Tennessee.

For more information on this and other Man and Nature programs call 543-6100.

Leading Adlerian Psychologist to Speak Here

Don C. Dinkmeyer,Jr., one of the foremost Adlerian psychologists in the United States, who has developed outstanding programs for counselors, teachers and parents working with children, will speak on Monday, March 13, at 7:30 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the University Center. He is the fourth annual Aimee and Raymond Dixon Distinguished Educators lecturer.

Dinkmeyer is president of the North American Society of Adlerian Psychology, an international organization which supports, "an optimistic psychology promoting a healthy way of life," according to Dr. Robert McBrien, director of the Center of Personal and Professional Development at SSU. Adlerian psychology has been used creatively in counseling, therapy, education, community programs and the arts, he said.

The presentation is expected to be about 90 minutes long. The public, especially parents and teachers, are invited to attend. Admission is free. For further information, contact Dr. Maurice Bozman in the School of Education and Professional Studies at 543-6282.

'Savor the Symphony'

Seven area restaurants and beverage firms have signed on to support "Savor the Symphony," a fundraiser for the Salisbury Symphony Orchestra at Salisbury State University on Friday, March 17, from 7-9:30 p.m. The event is sponsored by WMDT-TV and Salisbury State.

Tickets for "Savor the Symphony" are $20 per person and are available by calling the Salisbury State Office of Research and Development at 543-6175 or the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council at 543-ARTS, any of the Peninsula Bank Branches during regular lobby hours or the two John Hanson Savings Banks in Salisbury.

CPPD Evening Hours

Beginning this semester, the Center for Personal and Professional Development (CPPD) will stay open until 7 p.m., Monday-Thursday. Friday hours will remain unchanged, 8:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m.

By offering extended hours four days a week, the Center hopes to better serve all students but, in particular, those students who find it difficult to utilize CPPD services earlier in the day.

Located on the second floor of the University Center, the CPPD provides students with personal counseling, career planning and job placement services. Appointments can be made in person or by calling 543-6070. Walk-in hours are 1-3 p.m., Monday-Thursday. All counseling is confidential and free to University students.

Gull's Nest Hours

9 a.m.-8 p.m. - Monday-Thursday
9 a.m.-6 p.m. - Friday
noon-6 p.m. - Saturday and Sunday

Attention May Graduates

Commencement Exercises will be held on Saturday, May 27, at 10 a.m. in the Wicomico Youth & Civic Center. Further information regarding graduation will follow shortly.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Department of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or whereever you may reside. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep your first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away from alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit area or a place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you need an escort to or from your car, call the Department of Public Safety, 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Department of Public Safety, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

State Archives Summer Intern Program

The Maryland State Archives has seven internships available this summer for its 10-week 1989 summer internship program. The internships are available to Maryland college students (graduate or advanced undergraduate).

The purpose of the program is to expose interns to archival procedures. This includes establishing archival control over permanently valuable historical records and assisting researchers by answering mail and working in the public search room.

Qualificatons for candidates include demonstrated academic excellence, preferably with an interest in archival science, history, library science or related fields.

For information and application materials write to Archival Internship Program, Maryland State Archival, 350 Rowe Boulevard, Annapolis, MD 21401. Application deadline is April 3.

Student-Teacher Application Meetings

Students who are eligible to student teach in the fall semester, should follow these steps: contact advisor to determine eligibility and to complete professional program application; and attend one of the meetings on Wednesday, April 19, or Thursday, April 20, both at 3:30 p.m. in Caruthers Hall Auditorium.

Since no other meetings will be held, students must attend a scheduled meeting in order to receive an application for student teaching. Questions about the application process should be directed to Alvah Constantine, Director of Field Experiences, Caruthers Hall, Room 148-A.

Volunteers will prepare and teach individuals how to prepare their own federal and Maryland tax returns. Interested persons should bring their 1988 tax package of forms, wage and earnings statement(s) Form(s) W-2, interests statement(s) from banks(s), Form(s) 1099, a copy of their 1987 tax return (if available), and any other relevant information concerning income and expenses.

Tax assistance is available on Mondays from noon-5 p.m. in the Manokin Room in the University Center. For more information, contact the Perdue School at 543-6315.

Books on 'Man and Nature' At Book Rack

The Book Rack, the campus bookstore located in the University Center, has several books in stock related to the Man and Nature series as well as some Sierra Club books from Random House. The books range in subject matter from flowers and shells to field and project guides.

Books currently in stock are:

Bahm, A.J., Tao Teh King, an interpretation of Lao-tzu's famous work as 'Nature & Intelligence.' Lao-tzu's short, simple yet profound work on nature-mysticism provides a substrate for the Humanism/Naturism theme. Bahm takes a philosophy-of-science approach to Lao-tzu.

Blakney, R.B., The Way of Life, translation of Lao-tzu's 'Tao Te Ching.' Blakney takes a poetic-religious approach to Lao-tzu.

Carson, Rachel, Silent Spring. This seminal work has become a classic. It needs to be made available to the younger generation and others unfamiliar with it.

Hedeen, Robert A., Naturalist on the Nanticoke and The Oyster. Hedeen, an SSU biology professor, will be the main speaker on Monday, March 6, during a panel discussion of the Chesapeake Bay.

Henderson, Hazel, The Politics of the Solar Age. Henderson is the hairshirt of establishment economics. She is an economist, environmentalist and futurist. Her message is that the environment—and not fiscal policies, etc.—is the basis for the health of the political economy.

McPhee, John, Encounter With the Archdruid. This book is about David Brower who delivered the Man & Nature program keynote address. Brower was the prime mover in founding the Sierra Club, Friends of the Earth, and the Earth Institute.

MCEA Meeting

There will be a meeting for MCEA Chapter 72 members on Thursday, March 16, at 4:30 p.m. in the Pocomoke Room in the University Center.

Mary Gene Jenkins will be the guest speaker discussing the effects of the University System on state employees at SSU. Also, Jim Adams from Tongue Insurance will be there to help all understand some of the new insurances available at reduced premiums. A legislative update will be given.

Food will be provided.

Wopat Concert

Dave Wopat presents his "High Tech Pop Rock" concert in the Gull's Nest on Thursday, March 30, at 8 p.m.

His show is a combination of entertainment and musical seminar with some technological explanations along the way.

His "band" consists of several pieces of Yamaha equipment, keyboard, a sequencer, tone generators, a pair of drum synthesizers, Electrovice Entertainer speakers and a pair of guitars.

With that equipment, he is capable of reproducing the sound of a band of almost unlimited size and scope.

Admission is free.

Karna Invited on Panel At Choral Conference

Dr. Duane R. Karna, director of choral activities and assistant professor of music, has been invited to participate as a panelist at the first International Exchange Roundtable to be held at the American Choral Directors Association National Conference in Louisville, KY this spring.

Last summer, Karna was one of 22 choral directors chosen from throughout the U.S. to represent the American Choral Directors Association on the German/American Choral Directors' Exchange Program. During the two-week trip, the 22-member delegation studied with, observed and visited various choral organizations throughout the Federal Republic of Germany.

Because of his participation, the ACDA National Board and its International Advisory Committee invited Karna to participate on a panel discussion regarding international dialogues on choral music and choral exchange programs. The International Exchange Roundtable session will include a report of the 1988 German/American Choral Directors' Exchange as well as encourage discussion of other possible future international choir and conductor exchanges.

Travel grants were awarded to Karna from the Faculty Development Committee, the Department of Music and the SSU Foundation.

'The Arts Are Hot!'

"The Arts Are Hot!" is the theme for a Mexican fiesta buffet to be hosted by the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council on Sunday, March 12, at Whiskers & Wife Restaurant in Tyaskin.

"The Arts Are Hot" will feature an all-you-can-eat Mexican food bar that will include nachos, fajitas, burritos, enchiladas, a do-it-yourself taco bar, and other "hot" Mexican delights. Music will be provided by the Charles Dickens Band.

All proceeds from "The Arts are Hot!" buffet will be used to support the Arts Council's community projects.

Tickets are $15 per person. Reservations should be made by Wednesday, March 8.

For more information or to make reservations call the Arts Council at 543-ARTS.

Arts Rummage Sale

The Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council is sponsoring a Giant Rummage Sale on Saturday, April 1, beginning at 8 a.m. and continuing through the day, indoors at the old office of Hall's Tidewater Travel at 109 South Division St. in downtown Salisbury.

The Rummage Sale, named "Delightful Discards, Act II," is a reprise of a successful fund-raising event sponsored by the Arts Council two years ago. That first act of "Delightful Discards" raised over $3,600 to help support on-going arts programs in the community.

Donated goods of all kinds will be accepted at the rummage sale; clothes, appliances, books, toys, jewelry and dishwares will be accepted and result in a tax deduction for the contributor.

Donations of goods and items may be made until Friday, March 31, and may be delivered directly to 109 S. Division St. during the week of March 27.

For more information on donations or on the sale call the Arts Council at 543-ARTS.

Outdoor Club Tripping on

The next Outdoor Club trips will be over spring break, from Friday, March 17, to Sunday, March 26. There will be a backpacking trip on the Appalachian trail in Georgia and North Carolina, and a canoeing trip on the wild and scenic St. Mary's River in Florida.

On Monday, March 13, there will be a final sign-up and mandatory meeting for all students going on the spring break trips; the balance will be due at this time.

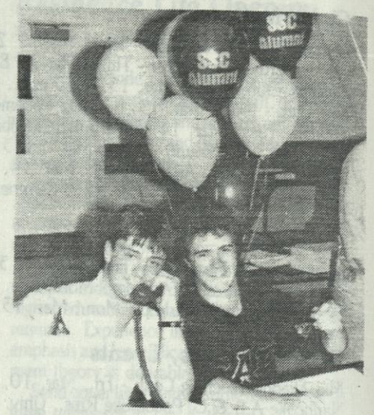
At the meeting on Monday, March 27, all equipment must be returned. Meetings will take place on Monday at 6 p.m. in the Nanticoke Room A in the University Center. All students are welcome to attend.

Alternative Film Series

The Salisbury State Program Board is planning an Alternative Film Series for the '89-'90 academic year and would like suggestions from students and faculty on possible films for the program.

The new series will focus on cult, classic and foreign films, rather than duplicate the commercial programs of the local theaters and cable services. Written suggestions may be dropped off at the University Center's information desk or the SSPB Office.

Anyone interested in helping to plan and promote the film series should contact David Todd at SSPB on the second floor of the University Center or phone 543-6197.



It's Phonathon time again. Students from a variety of campus organizations will be calling on alumni in the next weeks soliciting their financial support for the University. This year's goal is $55,000.

'North Shore'

The film North Shore will be shown in the University Center's Wicomico Room on Sunday, March 12, at 7 and 9:15 p.m. Admission is free.

'American Pictures'

"American Pictures," a multimedia show of a Danish vagabond's personal journey through the American underclass, will be presented on Monday, March 13, at 6:30 p.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium.

Jacob Holdt, a Danish photographer, came to the U.S. to learn about its people. He lived with the Rockefellers, but also became acquainted first-hand with the life of the American underclass, more particularly the black people existing in poverty.

This photo journey with Holdt is an unforgettable experience. He notes that when students at colleges where he has appeared found they had missed a screening, having heard the reactions of their friends, some would drive 870 miles to see it on another campus.

"American Pictures" track record is impressive. Holdt has shown it 14 times to Berkeley, 10 times to Harvard, six times to Stanford, seven times to Yale and six to Cornell. On smaller campuses, such as the University of California at Davis, they have had turnouts of 2,000 students for even the second and third times the show has come around.

It is a multiple-slide presentation with two large pictures shown at the same time. The photos are gripping. Moreover, Holdt's story is profoundly absorbing. He has a vital message to convey.

All the proceeds go to American Pictures Foundation which benefits the people depicted in the photos. The profits from the book he has published also go to this foundation.

Ten departments plus a number of student organziations and several administrative offices are sponsoring the event.

Fast for Joseph House

The Philosophical Society is sponsoring a fast on Wednesday, March 15, to benefit the Joseph House of Salisbury.

Students participating in the fast will pledge the amount of money they would usually spend for food in a 24-hour period. Pledges will be taken prior to the fast and collected that day. Students can participate in this event without actually fasting; they can simply contribute any amount of money they would have otherwise spent on food.

Joseph House is a non-profit organization run by a group of nuns that relies totally on contributions and donations. With the money and food donated, they help provide financial aid for the needy, job counseling assistance, clothing and hot meals, and help find housing for the homeless.

What can students do? All clubs are invited to participate in the fast. If a club wishes to take part, it can assist by making posters, announcing the fast in classes and collecting pledges there, and/or help staff the pledge tables set up around campus.

Why hold a fast? A similar fast was held at SSU a few years ago and was highly successful. The Philosophical Society believes that students should give something back to the community that serves as their home while attending SSU.

Clubs or individuals that want to participate in the event should write to Box 3031 on campus.

Problem: Light bulb out? Dirty room? Need something moved?

Solution: Call Melvin Smullen, ext. 6207, assistant director of Physical Plant for Building Services

Problem: Can't get the action you want?

Solution: Call Jim Brown, ext. 6200, director of Physical Plant

Scholarship Program

The new First Nationwide Network Scholarship Program honors John F. Kennedy's life. The program is open to college juniors who are majoring in political science, government, history, public affairs or business. Approximately 32 $1,000 scholarships will be awarded to students attending targeted schools. Salisbury State is among those schools that have been selected.

Participants in the program will be required to complete a standard application and to write a personal essay, 600-700 words, on one of the JFK quotes featured on the American mural sponsored by First Nationwide Network in the November issue of Life. The application postmark deadline is April 15.

For applications, call (507) 931-1682.

Nursing Applications Due

The application deadline for enrollment in the nursing major for fall 1989 semester is Friday, March 10.

This applies to those pre-nursing students anticipating registering for Nursing 300, Professional Nursing Concepts, for all, as well as other students interested in the major. The application form may be obtained from the Department of Nursing.

Applications received after March 10 will be considered on a space available basis. The application deadline for the spring 1990 semester is October 1.

SSU News Guidelines

The SSU News is a newletter for the campus community published by the Public Relations Office each Thursday during fall and spring semesters, unless noted. The deadline is 4:30 p.m. on the Friday prior to publication.

Any story relating to the life of the campus, whether it be of interest to students, faculty or staff, is welcomed. Newsletter items should be typed and double-spaced.

Because stories are usually proofed and typeset on a first come, first served basis, don't feel you have to wait until Friday to get your article to Public Relations (HH 264).

Because the PR cannot canvas the campus personally, the staff is grateful to those who keep it current on the activities and issues affecting University life. Public Realtions looks forward to hearing from you.

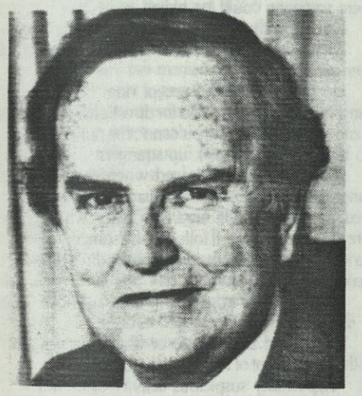
Former Delaware Governor and Environmental Pioneer Speaks on Earth Ethic



Russell W. Peterson

Russell W. Peterson, former governor of Delaware and leading environmentalist, discusses, "An Earth Ethic: The University, The Biosphere and Our Grandchildren," on Monday, March 27, at 7:30 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the University Center.

Environmental, resource and economic problems are mounting," said Peterson recently, "leading in the 1990s, many believe, to a major global crisis. Opportunities for coping with them are here, but time is running out.

"Citizens of the world must steer our course into the future to help ensure over the long run a decent quality of life for people everywhere. To do this calls for a level of understanding, foresight and commitment far beyond that available to most of today's decision-makers.

"There is no acceptable excuse today for leaders—and that includes government, business, academic and citizen leaders—not to know of the interdependence of all life on earth, of the catastrophic implications of continuing the trends of today, and of the means we now have at our disposal for altering these trends."

President Emeritus of the National Audubon Society, founding chairman of the Global Tomorrow Coalition and currently president of the International Council for Bird Preservation, Peterson served as governor of Delaware from 1969-1973.

During his administration he initiated and implemented many innovative measures including the coversion of a commission form of government to a cabinet form and passage of the Delaware Coastal Zone Act. That Act, said Peterson, "has shown the way (to other states) in protecting coastlines by outlawing heavy industry along (Delaware's) unspoiled coast with the subsequent support of state and federal Phonathon is Ringing Bells!

Barbie O'Malley at work during the Phonathon.

University Alumni Association's sixth annual Phonathon is now underway. From its headquarters in Nanticoke C of the University Center, the Phonathon each evening reaches out to hundreds of alumni requesting them to support the 1988-89 annual alumni campaign. This year's goal is to raise $55,000 during the Phonathon to bring the total of the campaign to $75,000.

The Phonathon offers the Alumni Office an opportunity to communicate directly to its constituency. Valuable information is gathered each year from this project including news notes for the next issue of the alumni paper, the Scene, addresses, business and professional updates, and requests from alumni.

Executive Director Judith Pielemeier said, "the annual Phonathon is our best monitor of the pulse of our alumni. I believe the students, who get a good training before making the phone calls, make wonderful callers. Alumni respond well to them and often ask questions about current campus life.

Seven students have been appointed to the Salisbury State University Program Board. The SSPB is an on-campus student-operated organization which plans social, intellectual, cultural and recreational activities for the SSU community. SSPB presentations include: a popular international film series, concerts, appearances by comedians, coffeehouses, weekend and day trips, and tournaments such as ping-pong, cards and chess, as well as dances.

Japanese Prints At Gallery

An exhibition of 36 prints by some of Japan's best known contemporary printmakers is currently on display at the University Gallery, located on the second floor of Blackwell Library.

Curated by Andrew Stasik, director of the International Graphic Arts Foundation which is circulating the exhibition nationally, "Modern Japanese Prints" will be on view through March 30, except for the period March 17 through March 26, when the Gallery is closed for spring vacation.

According to Ursula Ehrhardt, the Gallery's director, the exhibition consists primarily of works from the last two decades.

"The style and imagery of these works corresponds more closely to recent developments in modern art than to traditional Japanese art," Ehrhardt said, "though several artists do make reference to earlier Japanese traditions." Both Shiko Munakata and Sadao Watanable, for example, were influenced by the Japanese Folk Art movement of the 1920s and 1930s, which sought to revive the handicraft traditions of the Edo period.

"One can also see a continuing interest in the woodcut, the traditional Japanese printmaking technique, but it is now more often used for abstract images than for scenes of daily life," Ehrhardt said.

The University Gallery is open Monday - Thursday, from 10 a.m. - 5 p.m., Saturdays and Sundays, from 1 - 5 p.m., and Mondays and Wednesdays, from 5 - 8 p.m. Gallery talks on the exhibition are given each Tuesday at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. by Karen Mitchell, the Gallery's education coordinator. Group tours of the exhibition may be aranged by calling the Gallery about one week in advance of the desired tour date.

CPPD Evening Hours

Beginning this semester, the Center for Personal and Professional Development (CPPD) will stay open until 7 p.m., Monday-Thursday. Friday hours will remain unchanged, 8:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m.

By offering extended hours four days a week, the Center hopes to better serve all students but, in particular, those students who find it difficult to utilize CPPD services earlier in the day.

Located on the second floor of the University Center, the CPPD provides students with personal counseling, career planning and job placement services. Appointments can be made in person or by calling 543-6070. Walk-in hours are 1-3 p.m., Monday-Thursday. All counseling is confidential and free to University students.

Personnel Notes

Health and dependent care spending account participants must submit all receipts for calendar year 1988 prior to the end of March in order to be reimbursed. Any money remaining in an account on that date will revert to the State of Maryland treasury.

Attention parents of full-time college students: be sure to respond to the recent letter from Blue Cross/Blue Shield prescription card offices requesting verification of your child's full-time status. You will be expected to verify the child's full-time status once each quarter (four times per year times the number of years the youngster attends college). The necessary forms may be obtained directly from the Blue Cross/Blue Shield facility. Questions relating to this new procedure may be directed to a toll free number, 1-800-225-1031.

Tax Help

Are you on a limited income, elderly or handicapped and need tax help but can't afford to pay for it? Free federal and Maryland tax preparation assistance is available through the Volunteer Income Tax Assistance (VITA) program sponsored by the Perdue School of Business on Mondays through April 10.

Volunteers will prepare and teach individuals how to prepare their own federal and Maryland tax returns. Interested persons should bring their 1988 tax package of forms, wage and earnings statement(s) Form(s) W-2, interests statement(s) from banks(s), Form(s) 1099, a copy of their 1987 tax return (if available), and any other relevant information concerning income and expenses.

Tax assistance is available on Mondays from noon-5 p.m. in the Manokin Room in the University Center. For more information, contact the Perdue School at 543-6315.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Department of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or whereever you may reside. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep your first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away from alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit area or a place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you need an escort to or from your car, call the Department of Public Safety, 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Department of Public Safety, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

State Archives Summer Intern Program

The Maryland State Archives has seven internships available this summer for its 10-week 1989 summer internship program. The internships are available to Maryland college students (graduate or advanced undergraduate).

The purpose of the program is to expose interns to archival procedures. This includes establishing archival control over permanently valuable historical records and assisting researchers by answering mail and working in the public search room.

Qualificatons for candidates include demonstrated academic excellence, preferably with an interest in archival science, history, library science or related fields.

For information and application materials write to Archival Internship Program, Maryland State Archival, 350 Rowe Boulevard, Annapolis, MD 21401. Application deadline is April 3.

Student-Teacher Application Meetings

Students who are eligible to student teach in the fall semester, should follow these steps: contact advisor to determine eligibility and to complete professional program application; and attend one of the meetings on Wednesday, April 19, or Thursday, April 20, both at 3:30 p.m. in Caruthers Hall Auditorium.

Since no other meetings will be held, students must attend a scheduled meeting in order to receive an application for student teaching. Questions about the application process should be directed to Alvah Constantine, Director of Field Experiences, Caruthers Hall, Room 148-A.

SSU Biology Students Study Genetic Engineering

Advanced biology students are now studying fast developing research in the revolutionary and controversial field of genetic engineering.

In a course called "Contemporary Genetics," Dr. R. Peter Kernaghan, a professor of biology, is showing students how specific hereditary traits can be separated from DNA molecules and be transmitted from one bacterial cell to another.

A working knowledge of the most sophisticated scientific research taking place today "is not just the province of the biggest and most elite institutions," he said.

At Salisbury State, he added, his course is possible because of the recent $2.5 million endowment made by Richard A. Henson to the School of Science and Technology.

he extra money has mede it possible for the Biology Department to acquire such equipment as electrophorectic separators, transilluminators and centrifuges which enables students to extract DNA from a cell, separate pieces of it and actually see them in a gel.

There are about a dozen senior students in Kernaghan's class. "They are really turned on by this," he said.

"Students should know how easy it is to work with DNA in a lab, and the possibilities," he said. "As we learn how to decipher the human code we can find what causes something in the human being to go wrong.

The ultimate goal is to correct the defect." The ability to manipulate DNA molecules, Kernaghan explained, can lead to genetically engineered corrections of defects such as diabetes and ultimately cancer.

"That's where the ability to manipulate DNA is going," he said, and not the bizarre clonings and biological manipulations of science fiction.

Biology has gone through a revolution since he was a college student, Kernagham said. "It has become a science of micro-molecules like physics has become a science of microelectronics." In other words, it has made a quantum leap (a transition to the most minute or molecular basis of life and inheritance).

The change occured almost overnight in 1953 when two young research scientists, James D. Watson and Francis Crick, made a breakthrough other biologist were seeking in research laboratories all over the world.

They discovered that the structure of the DNA molecule, which arries all the genetic information passed from one living thing to another, is a double helix with hydrogen bonds.

For their discovery they won a Nobel Prize. It was an achievement which opened new worlds of biology when Kernaghan was a sophomore at Dartmouth College. When his professor became director of Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory on Long Island where much of the subsequent research was taking place, he followed him there.

He received his doctorate from the University of Connecticut and has been at Salisbury State since 1976.

The billions of pieces of information which reside in a DNA molecule "are the recipe for a human being," Kernaghan said.

"Astounding techniques" are being developed "to decipher that information and single out what controls what."

The newly developing field of genetic engineering is not easily understood by the layman. Experiments with test tube life and the manipulation of genes to create new types of microorganisms are as controversial and frightening as the misuse of atomic energy.

On the other hand, the human curiousity about the nature of living things and the ability to improve the quality of life are powerful motivations.

With the techniques now available, Kernaghan explained, "It is possible to develop a corn plant which could make its own nitrogen eliminating the need for chemical fertilizer, or to insert a hormone gene for insulin in a bacterial cell which could change the life of a diabetic. "The potential to understand the genetic library is real," he said. "It's just fascinating."

'Indian View' Man, Nature Topic

Chief Joseph Raincrow Neale, a freelance lecturer and consultant on American Indian culture, history and traditionalism, will join with colleague Mario Skyryder in a panel discussion on "The Traditional Indian World View" to be held Tuesday, April 4, at 7:30 p.m. in the Nanticoke Room of the University Center.

Part of the University's on-going Man and Nature series, the discussion will be moderated by Dr. Connie White, chair of the SSU English Department. It is free and open to the public.

Neale, tribal chief and traditional spiritual leader of the Yougiogheny River Band of Shawnee Indians in Maryland, was director of international student and faculty exchange at American University in Washington, D.C. from 1961-1988. He was also American Indian student counselor there for 24 years.

A member of the Maryland State Commission on Indian Affairs, Neale has published numerous articles about the American Indian. Those include: "A Bibliography of Resource Materials on American Indians," a teacher training resource project for Montgomery (MD) County public schools; "Ethnic Identity and the American Indian Student," which appeared in The Native American Ethnic Reminder, also used in public schools in Montgomery County; and "An Introduction to North American Indian People," a videotape production created for use in the University of Texas International Educational Exchange Program.

Neale was a member of the Board of Advisors of the English Language Service, Inc., a Washington research association, for 24 years. From 1976-79 he was a member of the Maryland State Commission on Indian Affairs. He was cultural consultant to the Baltimore American Indian Study Center from 1974-75.

For more information on this or other Man and Nature programs call the Public Relations Office at (301) 543-6030.

Delightful Discards

A Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council fundraiser, Delightful Discards, Act II will be held on Saturday, April 1, from 8 a.m. - 4 p.m.

Delightful Discards, Act II is an opportunity for businesses that have recently remodeled, updated equipment or moved locations to get rid of unused old chairs, typewriters or file cabinets. The Arts Council can turn those extras or unused office supplies into a valued asset for someone else.

The Arts Council urges everyone to do their spring cleaning a little early this year and bring the unwanted items to the former offices of John Hall's Tidewater Travel on 109 S. Division St., downtown, beginning Monday, March 27.

Proceeds will go to help fund the Arts Council's on-going community programs.

For more information please call the Arts Council at 543-ARTS.

SSU Choir at WiHi Fine Arts Week

On March 6, members of the Salisbury State University Concert Choir, under the direction of Dr. Duane R. Karna, participated in a choral seminar with vocal students at Wicomico High School. The SSU Concert Choir was invited to Wicomico High School by Phyllis Oldham, choral director, for the high school's annual Festival of Fine Arts Week.

During Fine Arts Week celebrations, members of the Salisbury arts community offer their educational services in seminars and programs at the school. Each student may choose to attend two, one-hour seminars. The choir program was lead by Karna and included performances by the SSU Concert Choir, the Wicomico High School Choir and Katherine Turner, adjunct SSU faculty and instructor of voice.

Afterwards many students expressed an interest in SSU and the various programs which the Department of Music provides, Karna said.

Careers in Liberal Studies

The Department of Liberal Studies joins the Center for Personal and Professional Development this month in sponsoring a Careers Day panel designed to focus specifically on careers and programs of study for liberal studies and undeclared majors.

Two concurrent panel sessions will be held on Wednesday, March 29, starting at 1 p.m. in Nanticoke Rooms A and B in the University Center. One panel will be composed of Salisbury State graduates, while the other panel will consist of representatives from businesses and industries which hire graduates who majored in liberal studies or related fields.

For more information, contact Terry Clay, career development specialist, in the CPPD at 543-6070.

English Assistants

The English Department has available four assistantships (covering tuition plus approximately $4,000) for graduate students pursuing the M.A. in English (writing option).

This two-year program of study (33 credit hours) involves courses in language and rhetoric as well as related areas. In addition to taking courses, each student will work in the Writing Center and in the University's freshman English program.

The department also offers two assistantships (same terms) for students pursuing the M.A. in English (literature option). This program involves mainly literature courses plus required courses in language, rhetoric and literary criticism (33 credit hours). Students will teach two sections each semester in the freshman English program.

For further information call the Department of English at 543-6445. Deadline for applications is March 31.

SSU is a affirmative action/equal opportunity employment employer. Qualified women, minorities and disabled persons are encourages to apply.

Outdoor Club Gliding On

On the weekend of April 7, 8 and 9, the Outdoor Club and the Surfing Club will sponsor a combined trip to Nags Head, NC. Activities will include hangsgliding instruction at Jockey's Ridge as well as surfing. Final sign up will be at the meeting on April 3 at 6 p.m. in Nanticoke Room B of the University Center. Outdoor Club meetings are regularly held in Nanticoke A on Mondays at 6 p.m. Other trips planned for the spring include caving in Bath County, VA, whitewater rafting on the Cheat River on the weekend of May 5, 6 and 7, and canoeing at Janes Island State Park near Crisfield on the weekend of May 12, 13 and 14.

Arts Rummage Sale

The Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council is sponsoring a Giant Rummage Sale on Saturday, April 1, beginning at 8 a.m. and continuing through the day, indoors at the old office of Hall's Tidewater Travel at 109 South Division St. in downtown Salisbury.

The Rummage Sale, named "Delightful Discards, Act II," is a reprise of a successful fund-raising event sponsored by the Arts Council two years ago. That first act of "Delightful Discards" raised over $3,600 to help support on-going arts programs in the community.

Donated goods of all kinds will be accepted at the rummage sale; clothes, appliances, books, toys, jewelry and dishwares will be accepted and result in a tax deduction for the contributor.

Donations of goods and items may be made until Friday, March 31, and may be delivered directly to 109 S. Division St. during the week of March 27.

For more information on donations or on the sale call the Arts Council at 543-ARTS.

Wopat Concert

Dave Wopat presents his "High Tech Pop Rock" concert in the Gull's Nest on Thursday, March 30, at 8 p.m.

His show is a combination of entertainment and musical seminar with some technological explanations along the way.

His "band" consists of several pieces of Yamaha equipment, keyboard, a sequencer, tone generators, a pair of drum synthesizers, Electrovice Entertainer speakers and a pair of guitars.

With that equipment, he is capable of reproducing the sound of a band of almost unlimited size and scope.

Admission is free.

Scholarship Program

The new First Nationwide Network Scholarship Program honors John F. Kennedy's life. The program is open to college juniors who are majoring in political science, government, history, public affairs or business. Approximately 32 $1,000 scholarships will be awarded to students attending targeted schools. Salisbury State is among those schools that have been selected.

Participants in the program will be required to complete a standard application and to write a personal essay, 600-700 words, on one of the JFK quotes featured on the American mural sponsored by First Nationwide Network in the November issue of Life. The application postmark deadline is April 15.

For applications, call (507) 931-1682.

Nursing Applications Due

The application deadline for enrollment in the nursing major for fall 1989 semester is Friday, March 10.

This applies to those pre-nursing students anticipating registering for Nursing 300, Professional Nursing Concepts, for all, as well as other students interested in the major. The application form may be obtained from the Department of Nursing.

Applications received after March 10 will be considered on a space available basis. The application deadline for the spring 1990 semester is October 1.

SSU News Guidelines

The SSU News is a newletter for the campus community published by the Public Relations Office each Thursday during fall and spring semesters, unless noted. The deadline is 4:30 p.m. on the Friday prior to publication.

Any story relating to the life of the campus, whether it be of interest to students, faculty or staff, is welcomed. Newsletter items should be typed and double-spaced.

Because stories are usually proofed and typeset on a first come, first served basis, don't feel you have to wait until Friday to get your article to Public Relations (HH 264).

Because it cannot canvas the campus personally, the PR staff is grateful to those who keep it current on the activities and issues affecting University life. Public Relations looks forward to hearing from you.

Rite Aid Boss Here

Alex Grass, chairman of the board and president of Rite Aid Corporation, a major retail drugstore chain, makes the next presentation in the Great Leader Lecture Series on Thursday, March 30, at 11 a.m. in the Wicomico Room of the University Center.

Sponsored by the Perdue School, all lectures in the series are free and open to the public.

In 1962 Grass founded the Rite Aid concept with the opening of a discount health and beauty aid store in Scranton, PA, then named Trif D Discount. The store was an overnight success. Similar stores followed using Grass' formula of basic merchandising at competitive prices in convenient locations.

The name changed to Rite Aid in 1968 and two years later the company went public. Its stock is now traded on the New York Stock Exchange under the symbol of RAD. Forbes recently ranked the company first in return on equity and earnings per share in the drugstore category, and first in net profit margin among publicly-traded drug chains for a five-year average.

Today Rite Aid, with 2,165 drugstores in 22 eastern states and the District of Columbia, is the nation's largest drugstore chain. The company also owns Encore Books, a fast growing chain of 47 discount bookstores in the mid-Atlantic states; ADAP, a discount auto parts chain of 76 stores serving the northeast; and Big B drycleaning, a chain of 151 drycleaning locations in 10 southeastern and midwestern states. In addition Rite Aid holds a substantial interest in Super Rite Foods, Inc. (NASDAQ-SRFI), a publicly-traded wholesale and retail food company, where Grass serves as chairman of the board. He is also director of Hasbro Industries.

Grass recently served as chairman of the board of the National Association of Chain Drug Stores (NACDS) and currently serves on the organization's executive committee.

Grass has been the recipient of the 1986 Harrisburg Business Leader of the Year Award and the Torch of Learning Award, American Friends of Hebrew University.

He is a member of the Bar in both Pennsylvania and Florida, and is a 1949 graduate of the University of Florida School of Law.

For more information on Grass' presentation or other aspects of the Great Leader Lecture Series, contact the Perdue School at 543-6315.

Augsburg Choir Here

The Augsburg University Chamber Choir from Augsburg, Germany performs a choral concert on Friday, April 7, at 8 p.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium. The performance is free and open to the public.

The choir performs choral music of all periods and different styles of performance practice. Membership is by audition only and the choir includes 40 students which represent various departments throughout the university.

The conductor, Kurt Suttner, is professor of music education at the University of Augsburg. After his studies at the Musikhochschule in Munich, he taught at the German School in Addis Abeba, Ethiopia, and later was the musical advisor in the Madagascar Ministry of Cultural Affairs in Tananarive. In 1972 he founded the Via-Nova Choir of Munich. This choir has become well-known because of its exemplary interpretations of contemporary choral music. Suttner and his Via-Nova Munchen have received many national and international awards.

During its concert tour in the United States, the Chamber Choir will perform in Dayton, OH (the partner city of Augsburg), Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Salisbury.

The repertoire of the Chamber Choir comprises sacred and secular choral music by Monteverdi, Schutz, Franz Liszt, Distler, Mendelssohn, Genzmer, Jennefelt and Heinz Werner Zimmerman. Part of the April 7 performance will feature Madrigals of the 16th and 17th centuries with a portion of the choir membership wearing historical costumes. Also featured will be folksongs and instrumental folk music of southern Germany accompanied by original German folk instruments.

This choral visitation, under the sponsorship of the Salisbury State University Concert Choir, is being coordinated by the SSU Department of Music, the SSU German Club and the University Center and staff. Choir members from St. Peter's Episcopal Church and Asbury United Methodist Church are providing guest accomodations.

Dr. Duane R. Karna, newly appointed director of choral activities and assistant professor of music at Salisbury State, is the conductor and musical director of the SSU Concert Choir.

For more information, call the Music Department at 543-6385.

Johnson Guest Conducts At Shore Music Fest

Richard L. Johnson, professor of music and director of bands, has been invited to guest conduct the 27th annual Senior High All-Shore Band on April 7.

The invitation was extended to Johnson by the Eastern Shore Band Directors Association in affiliation with the Maryland Music Educators Association. The festival includes two extensive days of rehearsals with select wind and percussion students from the Delmarva area.

Johnson also will appear with the Worcester County Fine Arts Festival as guest conductor of the All-County Band on April 11. More recently, Johnson has appeared with the Sussex County Honors Band Festival on March 8-9 in Georgetown, DE.

Johnson is a graduate from the University of Illinois at Urbana. He is presently completing his dissertation for the Doctorate of Musical Arts in performance from Michigan State University at East Lansing. He has made appearances as guest conductor with both adult community bands and regional music festivals in Illinois and Michigan prior to his appointment at Salisbury State.

Furnace Town Concerts

Organized by area musician Steve Quillen, Furnace Town concerts will be held on the last Sunday of the month during March, April and May, and during September, October and November. Each will begin at 3 p.m.

The Old Nazareth Church at Furnace Town was chosen as the location for these concerts because of its excellent acoustics and intimate setting. Should there be a chill in the air, the wood stove will be fired up. Music featured will include blue grass, folk music, baroque, 19th century and classical

The season will open on Sunday, March 26, with a special blue grass gospel concert. Phillis and Gary Brenner will be joined by Jim Hammond, Burley Slate and Tom Cravens. Instruments used will include guitar, banjo, mandolin and bass.

On April 30, Quillen and Gordon Brenner will perform traditional folk music on the banjo, mandolin, guitar and fiddle.

All visitors to the Furnace Town historic site will be admitted to the concert free of charge. Site admission is $1.50 per adult, and $.75 per child. For information, call Furnace Town at 632-1265 or 632-2032.

Corporate Annual Reports Available on CD's in Library

Compact disclosure, an online business database available on compact disc has recently been installed in Blackwell Library and will be on demonstration loan through the month of March. It is located in the new glass room of the library.

The Disclosure database is a file of business and financial information extracted from reports that public companies file with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission. The scope of facts, figures and financials provides users with detailed profiles of more than 12,000 companies whose securities are traded on the New York Stock Exchange, American Stock Exchange, NASDAQ and over-the counter.

To be included in the database, a company must have at least $5 million in assets, 500 shareholders of stock, and have filed a 10-K or 20-F in the past 18 months.

Due to the limited loan period, we urge all interested students and faculty to try out this new database and let us know what you think.

Health Insurance Tip

When your basic doctor refers you to another physician, for whatever reason, it would be wise to call the home office of your particular plan to verify your policy covers the referral. For the Delmarva Health Plan the number is 1-800-344-3427 and for all Blue Cross/Blue Shield plans it is 1-800-225-0131. The more information you are prepared to provide, the better able the office will be to determine if your policy will help you. As physicians are frequently rushed, they may unintentionally make a referral that does not meet the guidelines required of the health plan. It is your responsibility to see that you obtain maximum benefit from your particular insurance program by working within its boundaries.

Area Director Opening

There is an opening in Residence Life for an area director. Duties include recruitment, selection and supervision of resident assistant staff, delivery of educational programs and services, and coordination of housekeeping and maintenance services in two residence halls.

These are live-in positions on 12-month appointment. Salary is $19,400 with health insurance allowance, apartment, utilities, meal plan and tuition waiver provided.

Experience in college housing is preferred and a master's degree in college student personnel, higher education, counseling or related field is required. Experience involving a multicultural emphasis and/or application of student development theory is desirable.

Send cover letter with resume and names of three references to Dr. Kathleen E. Groutt, Residence Life, Salisbury State University, Salisbury, MD 21801. Deadline is March 23, 1989. Non-U.S. citizens must have U.S. Immigration and Naturalization certification to accept employment.

Salisbury State is an equal opportunity, affirmative action employer. Qualifed women, minorities and disabled persons are encouraged to apply.

Softball Has Solid Start

The varsity softball team has been working exeptionally hard this year, not only on the field but off as well. The physical day-to-day practice schedule has paid off thus far. On March 10 and 11 the team found themselves in the heat of competition at the Virginia Wesleyan Tournament. Emerging victoriously was a great thrill, said coach Dawn McCrumb. An added bonus was the selection of Terri Sharpless as the All-Tourney Most Valuable Player. Pitching two games, Terri struck out 14 batters and only saw one unearned run cross the plate. "Domination" is the only word to describe her pitching style.

Along with Terri, Kristy Keil (Nursing) and Diane Bickford (Math) made the All-Tourney Team. "Their performance in the outfield was superb. Kristy hit well all weekend and Diane's speed on the base path scored several key runs," said Dawn McCrumb, in her fifth year as the softball coach.

The story does not stop here, however. The cognitive domain of each player has been motivated to such an extent that half the team received GPAs of 3.0 or better last semester, beginning once again with Terri Sharpless, who made the Dean's List. "Development of the student/athlete is to be viewed by the sum total," states McCrumb. "Our mission is to create a learning experience within the realm of athletics. It includes the obvious physical development but it must also ensure growth in mental, emotional, social, and spiritual domains as well. Softball is only one avenue that can pave the way to postive change."

Summer Work on Campus

The Conference Services Office is accepting applications from individuals interested in working from May 29 through August 28 with various organizations conducting conferences, workshops and seminars on campus over the summer break.

Persons applying must have a flexible schedule as responsibilities include day, evening and weekend programs.

Duties include working with various University departments and conference directors helping them meet various facility and service requirements.

In exchange for services rendered, a starting salary of $4 an hour with summer housing included is offered.

For more information contact the Conference Services Office in Holloway Hall Room 140 or call 543-6172.

Foreign Languages and Careers Lecture

The Department of Modern Languages and Intercultural Studies will sponsor a lecture on Foreign Languages and Careers on Monday, March 27, at 3 p.m. in Nanticoke room A in the University Center. Terry Clay, career development specialist of the Center for Personal and Professional Development will speak.

Careers for Liberal Studies Major

Later this month, the Center for Personal and Professional Development (CPPD) and the Department of Liberal Studies will sponsor a Career Day panel, designed to focus specifically on careers and programs of study for Liberal Studies and undeclared majors.

Two concurrent panel sessions will be held on Wednesday, March 29, starting at 1 p.m. in Nanticoke Rooms A and B in the University Center. One panel will be composed of Salisbury State graduates, while the other panel will consist of representatives from businesses and industries which hire graduates who majored in liberal studies or related fields.

For more information on this program, contact Terry Clay, career development specialist, in the CCPD at 543-6070.

Caroline Housing Study

A report on substandard housing in Caroline County completed by Marvin Tossey, chair of the Social Work Department, and Alan Visintainer of VITECH Consulting Services, Inc., was released March 1. This marks the third Eastern Shore county whose housing conditions Tossey has studied.

The study included all the housing units in the unincorporated sections of Caroline County. There were 333 substandard housing units identified. Personal interviews were conducted with individuals in 262 of these households.

"In general," said Tossey, "housing conditions in the county were similar to those in Talbot County, both of which were better than those conditions in Worcester County. In all three counties race and age are important variables. A larger percentage of substandard households are occupied by black residents than white; likewise, the elderly occupy a disproportionate large number of units."

Currently Tossey is completing a similar study in Howard County. Results from this study will be published in May or June.

Elwell Site Chair

Dr. Mary Ellen Elwell of the Social Work Department chaired the site visit team for the accreditation of the social work program at Saginaw Valley State University in northern Michigan.

Social work accreditation is processed by the Council on Social Work Education which sets standards for both undergraduate and graduate social work education.

The social work major at Salisbury State is accredited as meeting undergraduate standards.

Elwell provided consultation for a proposed social work major at the University of Maine at Presque Isle in early January.

Student Fall '89 Expenses

Anyone who is interested may pick up from the literature rack beside the customer service window of the Cashier's Office, HH 203, a list of estimated costs for the fall semester. This list includes tuition and fees (for both part and full-time students), room and board rates, and the payment due date for the semester. This is an important tool with which to begin planning your finances for next year. Do not wait until next August to think about how you will pay next year's bill! It is then too late to apply for financial assistance if it is needed.

Secretarial Positions

Contract positions with no state benefits. Send resume and references to Elinor Wallace, Perdue School of Business, Salisbury State University, Salisbury, MD 21801, prior to Monday, March 27. Salisbury State University is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer and encourages qualified women, minorities and disabled persons to apply.

Books on 'Man and Nature' At Book Rack

The Book Rack, the campus bookstore located in the University Center, has several books in stock related to the Man and Nature series as well as some Sierra Club books from Random House. The books range in subject matter from flowers and shells to field and project guides.

Books currently in stock are:

Bahm, A.J., Tao Teh King, an interpretation of Lao-tzu's famous work as 'Nature & Intelligence.' Lao-tzu's short, simple yet profound work on nature-mysticism provides a substrate for the Humanism/Naturism theme. Bahm takes a philosophy-of-science approach to Lao-tzu.

Blakney, R.B., The Way of Life, translation of Lao-tzu's 'Tao Te Ching.' Blakney takes a poetic-religious approach to Lao-tzu.

Carson, Rachel, Silent Spring. This seminal work has become a classic. It needs to be made available to the younger generation and others unfamiliar with it.

Hedeen, Robert A., Naturalist on the Nanticoke and The Oyster. Hedeen, an SSU biology professor, will be the main speaker on Monday, March 6, during a panel discussion of the Chesapeake Bay.

Henderson, Hazel, The Politics of the Solar Age. Henderson is the hairshirt of establishment economics. She is an economist, environmentalist and futurist. Her message is that the environment—and not fiscal policies, etc.—is the basis for the health of the political economy.

McPhee, John, Encounter With the Archdruid. This book is about David Brower who delivered the Man & Nature program keynote address. Brower was the prime mover in founding the Sierra Club, Friends of the Earth, and the Earth Institute.

Derby Days

WSUR, the students radio station, will be celebrating a decade of campus madness with the 10th annual Derby Days.

WSUR brings a week of zany confusion to campus April 17-22 with all the familiar Derby Days events, plus a few surprises.

Now is the time for women of SSU to unite and register a team. Information packets will be available March 29-April 5 at WSUR, on the second floor of the University Center. If you have questions call Tom Antonielli at 543-6195.

Physical Plant

Physical Plant has been receiving an increasing number of calls asking for something to be moved or a set up to be accomplished for some activity without any record of a work order being received.

In order for Physical Plant in general and building services, in particular, to be responsive to these type requests, it must have a work order at least one day and preferably two days before the action being requested is required. This will permit better scheduling and more efficient use of its personnel.

SAT Prep Class

Beginning Tuesday, April 4, the University will sponsor a four-week course to prepare students to take the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT), which is scheduled for May 6 and June 3. The course will be taught from 7-9 p.m. on Tuesdays in room 109 of Caruthers Hall at the University.

Instructors for the course will be Dr. Thomas Erskine, professor of English, and Dr. Donald Cathcart, professor of mathematics. Both have offered the course several times in the past and have had extensive experience in working with high school students.

The course, which will stress test preparation and will review common problems in English and mathematics, is designed to enable students to do their best on the examination, which is an admission requirement at most colleges and universities.

The cost of the course is $65, plus the textbook, which will be available for purchase at the first class meeting.

For information and registration call the Office of Continuing Education at 543-6170. Registration is also possible at the first meeting of the class, but enrollment is limited to 20 students.

courts in spite of strong pressure by the feds and industry to promote extensive heavy industrialization of the area."

States must face up to the global issue threatening the quality of life everywhere, continued Peterson. "Not just state government, but also individual citizens and leaders of business, university and public interest organizations within the state.

"I believe a state should concentrate on the education of its citizens from kindergarten through graduate school," said Peterson, "but especially its leaders—make them understand the nature of the global predicament and the interdependence of people everywhere with each other and with the biosphere—that fragile earth-encircling assembly of plants, animals and humans, and the atmosphere, waters and soils energized by solar radiation recycling and regenerating its vital components and regulating its life-supporting systems.

"Each citizen should be taught to adopt a responsible Earth ethic," he said, "to accept the moral duty and obligation as a citizen of the world to protect the biosphere by furthering society's assessment of the long-term impacts on the biosphere of actions before they are undertaken, so as to be able to make responsible choices among alternative futures."

While president and chief executive officer of the National Audubon Society from April 1979 to July 1985 Peterson played a leading role in helping to focus the environmental movement on a long-term global and holistic approach to quality-of-life issues. He was a prime mover in the creation of the Global Tomorrow Coalition, the center on the Consequences of Nuclear War and The Better World Society. He chaired a project of the Group of Ten national environmental leaders to develop an Environmental Agenda for the Future; and co-chaired a committee of chemical industry and environmental chief executive officers which helped persuade Congress to support expanded research at the Environmental Protection Agency.

In 1979 he was appointed by President Carter to the 12-member commission to investigate the nuclear accident at Three-Mile Island. He has held active leadership roles in a number of community service organizations, he organized and was president of a statewide citizens' campaign in Delaware to reduce crime and improve corrections which resulted in adoption of new laws to deal with offenders.

He has been chairman of the Advisory Board of the Solar Energy Research Institute of the U.S. Deparment of Energy, chairman of the Textile Research Institute, chairman of the National Geographic Society's Centennial International Symposium, January 1988, co-chairman of Save Our Seas, regional vice-president of the National Municipal League and former director of the World Wildlife Fund.

"With the right leadership," said Peterson, free from misleading ideologies and with focus on the quality of life of future generations, I believe our nation will pull together and help to create a healthy, sustainable global environment in the next century. Enlightened states can show the way for this moral renaissance. Those of us who help bring this about will receive great fulfillment from participation in such a cause. And our children and grandchildren will thank us for it."

Peterson's presentation is part of the University's on-going Man and Nature series. Admission is free and open to the public. For more information contact the Public Relations Office at 543-6030.

Logos Duo Performance

The Logos Duo, a pioneer in avant-garde music presentation, will present a concert on Sunday, April 9, at 8 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the University Center.

Moniek Darge and Godfried-Willem Raes of The Logos Duo, from Ghent, Belgium, has long occupied a prominent and unique place in the international music scene. Versatility and inventiveness characterize their activities in the realm of dance, avant garde music and multimedia performance.

They have performed extensively in Europe, North America, South America, Africa, Asia and Australia.

"The exciting range of sounds, harmonies and rhythm effects," wrote a reviewer on the occasion of their tour of Australia, "startled the audience."

"Much of our activity," said Darge, "involves mixed-media performance; we're using film, video, slides, environments, colors, mime, theatre, performance and happening, most based on collectively composed macro-structures.

"In our improvization activity we tend to stress the importance of the interaction between the players," she continued.

"For us, said Darge, "making music entails expressive communication and creative emancipation. Therefore we see our work as model anticipation opposed to a society that bans and ravishes creativity and that becomes dominated by the imperialism of mass culture and mass consumption.

"We don't consider creativity a privilege of the artist or musician/performer, and we attempt to restore this, in many people oppressed ability."

"The musical invention of the performers," wrote the New York Tribune, "is especially to be lauded in that it is genuinely avant-garde, even futuristic, without simply reacting negatively to the past but indeed displaying a vivid appreciation of the heritage of "classical" music through the ages. Thankfully eschewed are minimalist gimmicks and feelers towards crossovers to pop culture."

The Logos Duo concert, like all programs in the Man and Nature series, is free and open to the public. For more information, call the Public Relations Office at (301) 543-6030.

Faculty Present Workshop

Two University faculty members recently presented a workshop on travel courses at the Southern Regional Faculty and Instructional Development Consortium at Murray State University in Kentucky. Drawing on their extensive experiences offering Winter Term courses in London, Professors Thomas Erskine of the English Department and Edna Quinn of the School of Nursing, outlined the advantages of offering two-week courses in English Drama and in Cultural Considerations in Nursing in a city with extensive theatre offerings and a multi-ethnic population.

"Each time a pledge is made we ring a bell," continuted Pielemeier. "At about 7:30 p.m. we stop for a pizza break. At the end of each evening a $10 gift certificate courtesy of the Book Rack, the campus bookstore, is given to the person with the most pledged. Pizza is donated each evening by one of our local pizza stores. Pepsi is also donated."

Unless otherwise restricted, proceeds from the Phonathon are deposited into the SSU Foundation in the President's Fund for Excellence.

"These monies allow us to react in a timely fashion to the needs of our campus in those areas where there is no state funding available," said Pielemeier.

"This ability to rely on annual giving is necessary for us in order to maintain a competitive edge."

The Phonathon is a project of the Fundraising Committee of the Board of Directors of the SSU Alumni Association. John Charrier, class of '75, chairs the committee. Last summer the committee focused on methods to better recognize alumni who contribute to the alumni fund, and to better promote the contribution of the alumni fund.

As a result, the committee established several giving clubs to recognize levels of giving. These giving societies include the President Fund for contributions of $1,000 and above, the Associates for contributions of $500 to $999, the Dean's Club for contributions of $250 to $499 and the Century Club to recognize contributions of $100 to $249.

The committee established the Holloway Hall Bell Tower Society in recognition of the importance of sustained giving to recognize alumni who have contributed for five consecutive years.

A Five and Ten Club was also created. Alumni who have been graduated five or less years are asked to give $10 per year.

"We want them to know it is more important that they be a part of the annual fund and get into the giving habit, than that they give a significant gift," said Pielemeier.

Each year a challenge gift is offered to first time givers or to encourage alumni to increase their gift over the year before. This year's challenge gift is a leather paperweight which is maroon with a gold embossed seal.

Incentives for the leadership gifts include naming a walkway for those who contribute $1,000 and naming a tree for alumni who contribute $500. Century Club donors are given a print from the private collection of Dr. William J. Holloway, first president of the then Maryland Normal School.

The Phonathon will run until April 5 or until all of the approximately 11,000 alumni have been contacted. Callers each evening sign contracts for their work. They receive $7.50 per caller per evening or $150 if they contract for all 18 phones providing an opportunity for organizations to earn extra dollars for their treasuries. The organizations that have signed up this year to help are the Student Nursing Association, Zeta Tau Alpha, Pi Lamda Phi, Kappa Psi Kappa, Alpha Sigma Tau, Phi Mu and Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

A PUBLICATION FOR UNIVERSITY FACULTY, FRIENDS, STAFF AND STUDENTS

MARCH 30, 1989 VOL. X NO. 22

Colman McCarthy, "Liberal Conscience of Washington Post" on Campus April 10

Colman McCarthy

Colman McCarthy, a columnist for The Washington Post characterized as the liberal conscience of the Post by The Washingtonian magazine, lectures on "Making Peace with Nature," on Monday, April 10, at 7:30 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the University Center.

McCarthy has had fan mail from George McGovern and Barry Goldwater. The National Review has called him a "mad-dog liberal," while The Progressive says he is "an active-duty-trouble-maker...constantly reminding us that we could—and should—be doing better." The dictators of the Chilean junta charged that he was an agent of the Kremlin. Patrick Buchanan said "I have never seen a more 100-or 200-proof liberal."

Whether his readers are on the Left, Right or Radical Middle, or their appraisals are on or off the mark, McCarthy and his columns have well-earned visibility. It has been that way since The Washington Post Writers Group began national syndication of the McCarthy column in 1978. It appears in 50 newspapers around the country. For the previous 10 years, McCarthy was a member of the Post's editorial page staff. His columns during that period regularly drew more letters-to-the-editor than other op-ed pieces.

Writing in the foreword to McCarthy's latest book, "Involvements: One Jouralist's Place in the World," Nat Hentoff wrote, "I clip a lot of McCarthy's columns and show them around. But I mainly clip them for myself...(for) spiritual substenance, if an atheist may use that term."

The sustenance is often some event, person or idea by which McCarthy focuses a national issue in a way that engages the reader's emotion as well as his mind. To write about capital punishment, he went to a South Carolina prison

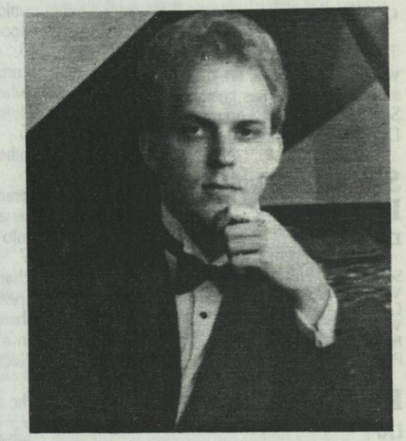
Clinton Piano Recital



Mark K. Clinton

Noted pianist Mark K. Clinton will perform the works of Haydn, Chopin and Liszt on Monday, April 10, at 8 p.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium. Sponsored by the Music Department, the recital is free and open to the public.

Clinton began his piano studies at age four and entered the Peabody Conservatory on scholarship at the age of eight. There he studied for eight years with Julian Martin, before continuing his studies with the world-renowned pianist Leon Fleisher.

Clinton received both his Bachelor of Music and Master of Music from the Peabody. In May he will receive the Doctor of Musical Arts from the Shepherd School of Music at Rice University, where he has studied under the tutelage of master-teacher John Perry. He has also studied with Carlo Zecchi and Tatiana Nikolayeva at the Mozarteum in Salzburg, Austria.

Clinton has given recitals from coast to coast, receiving much critical acclaim. Critics have hailed his "...polished style and commanding stage presence." One critic said that Clinton's "...interpretation was exhilharating and delightful, so bright and clean that the audience shook with applause for almost 10 minutes afterward."

White to Prepare Gala French Menu

In keeping with the origin of the theme of this year's Foundation Gala, "Phantom of the Opera," the menu for the evening will consist solely of French cuisine.

Gala decorations will evoke scenes and images of the play, still running on Broadway. The play is based on the book by French novelist M. Gaston Lerou, published in 1911.

Preparing the Gala dinner, to be held Saturday evening, April 22, in the Ruth Powell Dining Hall, will be Cathy White, a Dining Services supervisor who studies in France.

After growing up in northern New Jersey in a family which considered the evening meal the most important part of the day, White attended Boston University, earning her B.A. in history. Then, determined to pursue her lifelong interest in cooking, she went to France to attend La Varrenne, a Parisian cooking school, for six months. There she studied French cooking under

'Indian View' Man, Nature Topic

Chief Joseph Raincrow Neale, a freelance lecturer and consultant on American Indian culture, history and traditionalism, will join with colleague Mario Skyryder in a panel discussion on "The Traditional Indian World View" to be held Tuesday, April 4, at 7:30 p.m. in the Nanticoke Room of the University Center.

Part of the University's on-going Man and Nature series, the discussion will be moderated by Dr. Connie White, chair of the SSU English Department. It is free and open to the public.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Department of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or whereever you may reside. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep your first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away from alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit area or a place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you need an escort to or from your car, call the Department of Public Safety, 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Department of Public Safety, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

Student-Teacher Application Meetings

Students who are eligible to student teach in the fall semester, should follow these steps: contact advisor to determine eligibility and to complete professional program application; and attend one of the meetings on Wednesday, April 19, or Thursday, April 20, both at 3:30 p.m. in Caruthers Hall Auditorium.

Since no other meetings will be held, students must attend a scheduled meeting in order to receive an application for student teaching. Questions about the application process should be directed to Alvah Constantine, Director of Field Experiences, Caruthers Hall, Room 148-A.

English Assistants

The English Department has available four assistantships (covering tuition plus approximately $4,000) for graduate students pursuing the M.A. in English (writing option).

This two-year program of study (33 credit hours) involves courses in language and rhetoric as well as related areas. In addition to taking courses, each student will work in the Writing Center and in the University's freshman English program.

The department also offers two assistantships (same terms) for students pursuing the M.A. in English (literature option). This program involves mainly literature courses plus required courses in language, rhetoric and literary criticism (33 credit hours). Students will teach two sections each semester in the freshman English program.

For further information call the Department of English at 543-6445. Deadline for applications is March 31.

SSU is a affirmative action/equal opportunity employment employer. Qualified women, minorities and disabled persons are encouraged to apply.

SSU News Guidelines

The SSU News is a newletter for the campus community published by the Public Relations Office each Thursday during fall and spring semesters, unless noted. The deadline is 4:30 p.m. on the Friday prior to publication.

Any story relating to the life of the campus, whether it be of interest to students, faculty or staff, is welcomed. Newsletter items should be typed and double-spaced.

Because stories are usually proofed and typeset on a first come, first served basis, don't feel you have to wait until Friday to get your article to Public Relations (HH 264).

Because it cannot canvas the campus personally, the PR staff is grateful to those who keep it current on the activities and issues affecting University life. Public Relations looks forward to hearing from you.

Area Director Opening

There is an opening in Residence Life for an area director. Duties include recruitment, selection and supervision of resident assistant staff, delivery of educational programs and services, and coordination of housekeeping and maintenance services in two residence halls.

These are live-in positions on 12-month appointment. Salary is $19,400 with health insurance allowance, apartment, utilities, meal plan and tuition waiver provided.

Experience in college housing is preferred and a master's degree in college student personnel, higher education, counseling or related field is required. Experience involving a multicultural emphasis and/or application of student development theory is desirable.

Send cover letter with resume and names of three references to Dr. Kathleen E. Groutt, Residence Life, Salisbury State University, Salisbury, MD 21801. Deadline is March 23, 1989. Non-U.S. citizens must have U.S. Immigration and Naturalization certification to accept employment. Salisbury State is an equal opportunity, affirmative action employer. Qualifed women, minorities and disabled persons are encouraged to apply.

Director for Center for Business and Economic Research Sought

The Perdue School invites applications and nominations for the position of director of the newly created Center for Business and Economic Research serving the Mid-Atlantic region, with special emphasis on the Delmarva Peninsula. The director reports to the dean of the school and has responsibility for all center activities including the development of a monthly business conditions survey, regional consumer price index, quarterly center publications and sponsored reserach. This is a 12-month tenure-track appointment. Rank is open. AACSB competitive salary.

Please send nominations or applications to Chair, CBER Search Committee, The Franklin P. Perdue School of Business, Salisbury State University, Salisbury, Maryland 21801-6860.

Salisbury State University is an equal opportunity, affirmative action employer and encourages qualified women, minorities and disabled persons to apply.

Logos Duo Performance

The Logos Duo, a pioneer in avant-garde music presentation, will present a concert on Sunday, April 9, at 8 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the University Center.

The Logos Duo concert, like all programs in the Man and Nature series, is free and open to the public. For more information, call the Public Relations Office at (301) 543-6030.

Summer Work on Campus

The Conference Services Office is accepting applications from individuals interested in working from May 29 through August 28 with various organizations conducting conferences, workshops and seminars on campus over the summer break.

Persons applying must have a flexible schedule as responsibilities include day, evening and weekend programs.

Duties include working with various University departments and conference directors helping them meet various facility and service requirements.

In exchange for services rendered, a starting salary of $4 an hour with summer housing included is offered.

For more information contact the Conference Services Office in Holloway Hall Room 140 or call 543-6172.

Catering Position Available

Contractual position available in Catering. Requires experience working banquets, conferences, etc. Salary commensurate with experience. Maximum 40 hours per week, some weekends. No state benefits. Salisbury State University is an Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer. Qualified women, minorities and the disabled are encouraged to apply. Closing date, April 7. Send resume to: Mary Gene Jenkins, personnel director, Salisbury State University, Salisbury, MD 21801.

Head Cashier/Conference Assistant Position Available

Contractual Position available as head cashier/conference assistant. Salary commensurate with experience. Maximum 40 hours per week, some weekends. No state benefits. Salisbury State University is an Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer. Qualified women, minorities and disabled are encouraged to apply. Closing date April 7. Send resume to Mary Gene Jenkins, personnel director, Salisbury State University, Salisbury, MD 21801.

Reference Librarian Position

A position for a reference librarian is available. MLS from an accredited library school is required.

Qualifications include appropriate experience in academmic libraries; humanities, education or social science background; ability to provide library resources instruction and familiarity with on-line searching preferred. Salary is based on experience (minimum of $20,500). Position is available after July 1.

Send resume, copy of transcripts and names and telephone numbers of three references of James R. Thrash, Director, Blackwell Library, Salisbury State University, Salisbury MD 21801 by April 14.

Salisbury State is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer and particularly encourages the applications of women, minorities and the disabled.

Student Fall '89 Expenses

Anyone who is interested may pick up from the literature rack beside the customer service window of the Cashier's Office, HH 203, a list of estimated costs for the fall semester. This list includes tuition and fees (for both part and full-time students), room and board rates, and the payment due date for the semester. This is an important tool with which to begin planning your finances for next year. Do not wait until next August to think about how you will pay next year's bill! It is then too late to apply for financial assistance if it is needed.

Physical Plant

Physical Plant has been receiving an increasing number of calls asking for something to be moved or a set up to be accomplished for some activity without any record of a work order being received.

In order for Physical Plant in general and building services, in particular, to be responsive to these type requests, it must have a work order at least one day and preferably two days before the action being requested is required. This will permit better scheduling and more efficient use of its personnel.

AIDS Symposium

A symposium on the recent developments in the disease Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS) will be held on Friday, April 28, sponsored by the Medical Technology Department in conjunction with the SSU Foundation.

"AIDS is a disease that in less than 10 years has gone from relative obscurity to easily the most feared, publicized and investigated illness in recent time," said Diane Hayes, an instructor in the Medical Technology Department and coordinator of the symposium. "The world health community has devoted increasing amounts of time to the study of this virtually fatal condition which is epidemic in many populations.

"Given the intensive research in this area," said Hayes, "it behooves scientists and health officials to keep abreast of recent developments in the area of AIDS as information is changing rapidly due to the many investigators all over the world publishing new data. It is toward this end that this symposium was developed.

"New scientific information will be reviewed with regard to epidemiology, testing and vaccine development along with the legislation passed by the United States Congress in 1988 dealing with AIDS that impacts not only scientists but citizens at large," added Hayes.

The targeted audience for this information includes clinical laboratory professionals, science educators, physicians, science students and virtually any citizen who is interested in how recent developments may impact the average person.

The symposium faculty bring impressive qualifications. Dr. Edmund Tramont is the associate director for retrovirology at Walter Reed Institute of Research, Dr. Carol Tackett is part of the AIDS vaccine research at the University of Maryland Vaccine Unit, and Dr. Leslie Russell is a scientist on the professional staff of the U.S. House of Representatives.

The symposium, to be held in the Wicomico Room of the University Center from 1-5 p.m, costs $10 ($3.50 for students) to cover the cost of all speakers and a coffee break.

Advanced registration is required as seating is limited and may be obtained by calling Hayes at 543-6331 or by writing to the Medical Technology Department.

Hedeen Honored

Dr. Robert A. Hedeen, professor of biological sciences, will be an honored guest at the Friends of the Talbot County Library's annual book and author luncheon.

The luncheon will be held Saturday, April 15, at the Tidewater Hotel in Easton.

Hedeen is the author of two books, Naturalist on the Nanticoke, the Natural History of a River on Maryland's Eastern Shore and The Oyster, the Life and Lore of the Celebrated Bivalve, as well numerous magazine and newspaper articles concerning the natural history of the Eastern Shore.

Poland Trip Meeting

"As summer approaches, the urge to travel hits us all," said Dr. Robert Berry of the Department of History. "This year why not get away from the ordinary and see a part of the world familiar yet unfamiliar, exotic yet in the mainstream, rich with culture and tradition yet filled with exciting change? Better yet, why not learn and earn college credit in SSU's summer study tour? Destination 1989 - Poland!"

Off the beaten track to most Americans, Poland is a country with over 1,000 years of history and culture. It has always been in the European mainstream, yet uniquely different.

Once the largest country in Europe, defending the continent from the Ottomans, now the most defiant in the Soviet Bloc, home of Solidarity and the Pope, it is a living experiment in change in a communist system. This land of music, Chopin and Paderewski; literature, Sienkiewicz and Milosz (both Nobel laureates); and science, Copernicus and Curie is also imbued with tragedy, the Partitions and Auschwitz.

"Learn about Poland in a special course, earn college credit and top it all off with a two-week tour," said Berry, the study tour coordinator. "See Warsaw, rebuilt capital with its fascinating Old Town and royal palaces. Visit Chopin's birthplace. View the spiritual heart of a people at the Shrine of the Black Madonna. Marvel at the medieval magnificence of Krakow. Experience Auschwitz. Come to an understanding of a brilliant vibrant nation."

Further information, including a slide show, is available through a special interest meeting on Tuesday, April 4, at 7:30 p.m. in the Pocomoke Room of the University Center. Contact the History Department at 543-6245 for more information. The meeting and study tour are open to the public.

Summer Help Wanted

Conference Housing is seeking some 20 individuals interested in working May 29 - August 28 with organizations conducting conferences, workshops and seminars on campus coordinated through the Conference Services Office.

Positions available are conference housing assistant coordinators (2), conference housing assistants (9), conference information desk personnel (8) and a conference housing secretary. The conference housing secretary may begin as early as May 1.

Those applying should project good public relations on behalf of the University including appropriate demeanor and dress. A flexible schedule is a must, however, applicants wishing to take a maximum of one summer class wil be accepted. Hours will include day, evening and weekend work.

Responsibilities vary from operation of an information desk or check-in/check-out and coordination of program to the actual prepartion of the facilities for the groups.

Base pay is $4 an hour with upgrading at higher levels, and free housing during the summer.

To apply call Work Experience, 543-6216, to set up an appointment. Detailed job descriptions are available at the Housing Office.

Personnel Notes

Attention parents of full-time college students: be sure to respond to the recent letter from Blue Cross/Blue Shield prescription card offices requesting verification of your child's full-time status. You will be expected to verify the child's full-time status once each quarter (four times per year times the number of years the youngster attends college). The necessary forms may be obtained directly from the Blue Cross/Blue Shield facility. Questions relating to this new procedure may be directed to a toll free number, 1-800-225-0131.

Math Contest

Juniors and seniors from 14 public high schools on the lower Eastern Shore recently participated in the fifth High School Mathematics Contest at Salisbury State

Dan Frumin, a senior at James M. Bennett High School, was the top scorer. Kevin Tatterson, a senior at Pocomoke City High School, placed second. Stephen Hwang, a senior also from James M. Bennett High School, was the third place winner.

Each of these three students received individual plaques. The name of the first place winner will be engraved on the permanent plaque which remains on campus.

Other participants in the math contest were: Amelie Chai, James M. Bennett High School; Mike Lee, Mark Poole and Jason Vincent, Parkside High School; Ryan Smith, Robert Moore and Dennis Evans, Wicomico Senior High School; Shari Brittingham, Danny Bayliss and Jill Pusey, Mardela High School; Darren Koenig, Josh Smith and Tim Rowley, Northampton High School; Tony Prete, Jerry Lefever and Evan Finch, Stephen Decatur High School; Stephanie Holland and Ingrid Pafford, Pocomoke High School; Steve Ignaccola, Laura Terry and Timley Swift, Crisfield High School; Allison White, Anne Gochnour and Elizabeth Elmquist, Chincoteague High School; Mark Ward, David Hancock and Tony Wilson, Snow Hill High School; Beth Ruark, Alex Vaughn and C.T. Rippons, Cambridge-South Dorchester High School; Dawn Melson, Albert Hopkins and David Holman, Woodbridge Jr./Sr. High School; and Larry Fichter, Kel Hoffman and Sandy Parks, Cape Henlopen High School.

Students to Work Summer Orientation

A limited number of students are being hired to assist with the summer Orientation (testing advising and registration) Program for new students and their families.

Fall semester sophomores, juniors and seniors will be needed to work June 19-22, June 26-29 and July 10-11. Applicants should be in good academic standing, active with extracurricular activities, knowledgeable about programs, services and organizations on campus, regarded as good role models and articulate about SSU. A brief training program will be required.

Interested students should fill out an application at the Work Experience Office in the Physical Plant Building.

Bach's Lunch Returns

"Bach's Lunch," a free noon recital series at St. Peter's Church in Salisbury, is returning for its fourth season.

The series of half-hour informal concerts begins on April 3 and continues on consecutive Tuesdays through May 9. Each recital will run from 12:15 - 12:45 p.m., enabling local listeners to attend during their lunch hour.

The opening concert will feature Robin Cockey on violin, Linda Cockey on piano and Jim Andrews on flute performing works by Mozart and Ibert. Upcoming programs include such musicians as Ray Brokamp, organ, and the SSU Collegium.

The "Bach's Lunch" series is free and open to the public. St. Peter's is located on the Downtown Plaza. Further information is available on upcoming concerts from the church office, 742-5118.

EMBA Honorees

Academic achievement in the Executive Master of Business Administration program was the theme of an awards breakfast held at the University on Wednesday, March 15.

Faculty from the Perdue School along with E.M.B.A. students and guests gathered to recognize the academic efforts of fellow students who excelled in the first four courses of the program.

In the fall term, Ben Landrum, district manager of installation and maintenance for C&P Telephone, topped the class grade average in two courses, Graduate Survey of Economics and Advanced Microcomputer Applications. Honors for academic excellence in the course Legal Environment of Business were won by Marion Keenan, president of Coastal Hospice, Inc. Tom Mahn, assistant treasurer of Perdue Farms, Inc., shared the highest grade average with Landrum in Advanced Microcomputer Applications but also garnered highest honors for the first course of the spring term, Graduate Survey of Accounting.

Dr. Timothy Mescon, dean of the Perdue School, presided over the meeting while faculty members awarded each subject material. Special recognition will also be made for the student with the highest grade as they finish each remaining course required for this fast track M.B.A. curriculum.

The E.M.B.A. program was developed by Mescon in 1988 to appeal to a special student market. Designed for individuals with executive or managerial experience, the program is aimed toward enhancing upward mobility for those wishing to rise into the upper echelons of their organizations through graduate education.

The E.M.B.A. curriculum at Salisbury State is the only program of its kind on the Eastern Shore offering a master's degree in business administration attainable in 20 months. In addition, class subject matter emphasizes knowledge for immediate on-the-job application.

Because of interest demonstrated in the business and public sectors of the community for an MBA program that targets executives, recruitment efforts have been initiated by Perdue School staff for the next E.M.B.A. class. The director of Graduate Studies, Dr. Wayne Decker, is now accepting applications for September.

Access Control Plan for Residence Halls

Dr. Bellavance has approved recommendations for access control in residence halls which were submitted by the Risk Management Task Force in December.

The specific actions called for in the plan include:
installation of a phone system ito include phones in each student's room with entrance phones for Chester, Choptank, Manokin, Nanticoke, Pocomoke and Wicomico Halls; 24-hour locking of residence halls; bathroom locks installed in Manokin, Nanticoke, Pocomoke and Wicomico Halls; basement windows secured by installation of tamper-resistant screens and locking devices which limit opening to prevent access through windows; and all exterior doors and hardware surveyed and upgraded as needed.

The access control plan is scheduled to go into effect next semester. According to Barry M. King, who chairs the Risk Management Task Force, this plan empowers residents to exercise greater control over their living environments.

"While these measures are designed to enhance the level of security in residence halls, we still need the cooperation of students," said King.

"Students will need to continue making sure doors are locked, that they carry their keys and that suspicious persons are reported to Public Safety. Security for the group is a shared responsibility and an important aspect of community life," King said.

Questions concerning the access control plan may be directed to King at 543-6080.

Maryland Real Estate Leader Is Next Great Leader Lecturer

James P. O'Conor, chairman of the board of O'Conor, Piper and Flynn, makes the next presentation in the Great Leader Lecture Series on Tuesday, April 4, at 11 a.m. in the Wicomico Room of the University Center. Sponsored by The Franklin P. Perdue School of Business, the lecture is free and open to the public.

According to the 1989 edition of the Book of Business Lists published by The Baltimore Business Journal, O'Conor, Piper & Flynn Realtors realized the greatest revenues in settled sales of any residential real estate company in Maryland in 1988. The figure, $1.462 billion, is fully 20 percent larger than the second largest firm.

The company, with more than 1,300 licensed agents in 32 offices statewide, sold more than 13,477 homes in 1988. Under the direction of O'Conor the firm has continued to set the stage for real estate performance in the state.

O'Conor has held various leadership positions in professional and civic organizations throughout Maryland. Included in this list is director, Maryland General Hospital; director, Baltimore County Police Foundation; past president, Maryland Association of Realtors; president, Baltimore County Chamber of Commerce; and Board of Regents; The Catholic University of America. O'Conor also received the Senior Gold Medal from Loyola College, his alma mater, along with the Alumnus of the Year award.

Future speakers in the Great Leader Lecture series include: Raymond Mason, chief executive officer, Legg Mason, Inc., Monday, April 17, noon; Thomas E. Smith, president and chief operating officer, Food Lion, Wednesday, April 26, 11 a.m.; and John W. Jardine, Jr., president and chief executive officer, Chesapeake Utilities Corporation, Tuesday, May 2, 12:30 p.m.

For more information on O'Conor's presentation or any other aspect of the series contact the Perdue School at 543-6315.

Poet Denis Johnson to Read April 17

Denis Johnson, poet and novelist, will read from his works at the University on Monday, April 17, at 7:30 p.m. in the Social Room of Holloway Hall.

Johnson has written four books of poetry, including The Veil (Knopf, 1987) and The Incognito Lounge (Random House, 1982), which was a National Poetry Series selection. He has also written three novels: Angels (Random House, 1983), which won the Sue Kauffman first novel prize; Fiskadoro (Random House, 1985); and The Stars at Noon (Random House, 1987). Among Johnson's many honors are a Pushcart Prize, a fellowship to the Fine Arts Work Center in Provincetown, a Whiting Award, a Guggenheim Fellowship and two National Endowment for the Arts Creative Writing Fellowships. He is currently at work on several screenplays, short stories (some of which have recently appeared in The New Yorker) and a new novel.

The reading, jointly sponsored by the English Department and the Honors Program, is free and open to the public.

For more information call the Public Relations Office at 543-6030.

Bike Rally Options Available to Summer Cyclists

The League of American Wheelmen's 1989 National Rally from June 30-July 4 here at the University promises to be an action-laden five days. Each day will bring with it an assortment of rides across sublime terrain, informative workshops and exhibits and fun-filled special events.

But wait, there's more. Interested cyclists can also sign up for three pre-tour options, camping and tandems, as well as a Biking Inn-to-Inn experience. The Biking Inn-to-Inn option is also available after the rally.

On the Camping Tour participants depart from Salisbury State on Monday, June 26, and cross the Chesapeake Bay aboard the Captain Tyler with a lunch stop (seafood, family style, and all you an eat) on historic Smith Island. Campers will stay at Point Lookout State Park, Patuxent State Park and Martinak State Park for the next three nights (Monday through Wednesday).

Daytime tours of southern Maryland will feature Annapolis, the historic capital of Maryland and the U.S. Naval Academy there. A typical day's riding will be around 60 miles over mostly flat terrain.

Led by Robert Carson, L.A.W. Region 4 representative, cost of the camping option is $100 which includes the cruise across the bay, continental breakfasts each day, seafood luncheon on Smith Island, three nights of camping, luggage transportaion, Bay Bridge shuttle and two night lodging at Salisbury State.

The trip is limited to the first 100 registrants on a first come, first served basis. Arrangements may be made at the University to store extra baggage while touring.

The five-day Tandem Pre-Tour, limited to 24 tandem teams, originates on Sunday, June 25, just north of Baltimore in Pikesville, MD and takes participants through scenic western Maryland, West Virginia and Pennsylvania. Stops along the way include Harpers Ferry, Antietam Battlefield, Thurmont, MD and Gettysburg. It is a self-guided tour with maps, directions, luggage transport, van support and motel accomodations provided.

The registration fee for the Tandem-Pre-Tour is $65 per tandem team. The fee covers two group dinners in Baltimore and luggage transport. It is requested that baggage be limited to one soft-sided bag per couple. Extra luggage can be stored while on the pre-tour. Ruth and Al Schaffer, an experienced tandem team, will be the guides.

Additionally, transportation from Baltimore-Washington Airport can be arranged on an as needed basis.

To register or for more information on either of the pre-tours, contact Joseph Gilbert, chair of the L.A.W. National Rally, at 543-6012.

The post-tour is coordinated through Biking Inn-to-Inn on the Eastern Shore, Inc., an association of bed and breakfast inns offering well planned bicycle vacations to the touring cyclist on the Delmarva Peninsula, the tri-state region of Delaware, Maryland and Virginia bordered by the Atlantic Ocean on one side and the Chesapeake Bay on the other.

Beginning, intermediate or advanced cyclists can ride at their own pace, stopping to sample the seafood or to take a swim in the ocean or bay.

Inns range from elegant waterfront estates and country plantation homes to colonial tavern houses. Each night is a different experience with friendly hosts more than happy to make the traveler's stay a happy one.

The three-day midweek tour is $207 while the five-day midweek tour is $345. Services include confirmed reservations at all inns, luggage transport inn to inn, breakfast and dinner, standard two person room occupancy, parking and detailed maps identifying points of interest.

Alaska Slide Show

"The Last Great Wilderness," a multiprojector slide presentation providing a close-up look at the fragile and beautiful Artic National Wildlife Refuge in northeast Alaska, will be shown on Saturday, April 8, at 7 p.m. in the Nanticoke Room A of the University Center.

Followed by a question and answer session with the program's chief photographer, Lenny Kohm of Sonoma, CA, this latest installment in the University's on-going Man and Nature Series is free and open to the public.

The purpose of the show, according to its sponsors, SSU's Outdoor Club and the Potomac Sierra Club, is to generate concern over plans for oil development in the Refuge's fragile coastal plain. The slide show will feature the Refuge's grizzly and polar bears, snowy owls, tundra swans, snow geese (which migrate to the Chesapeake Bay), sheep, oxen, wolves and countless other species. Each summer more than 180,000 caribou migrate across the Refuge to give birth to their calves on the coastal plain. It is these caribou that would be most adversely affected by oil development.

Kohm's work has appeared in many national publications including Audubon. He spent two years photographing in the Artic and has combined his work with images from 10 other nationally recognized photographers to create "The Last Great Wilderness."

For more information on this other Man and Nature programs, call the Public Relations Office at 543-6030.

SSPB Needs You

The Salisbury State Program Board is now accepting applications for all officer and chair positions for the 1989-90 academic year.

SSPB is the student operated and funded organization that creates and produces many of the events seen on campus including: many Homecoming activities, Spring Fling, films, concerts, comedians and lectures. SSPB is composed of seven committees. Those committees are comedy/concerts, multicultural, recreation, films/video, special events, spotlight club and variety showcase. Whatever your interests are, there's a spot for you with SSPB.

Applications are now available at the Dean of Students Office, Registrar's Office, University Center information desk and the SSPB Office.

The application deadline is Friday, April 14, by 4 p.m. in the Dean of Students Office. For more information call 543-6080 or 543-6209.

Marson Exhibit

A special exhibition and sale of original graphic art will be presented in the Atrium Gallery in the University Center on Monday, April 24, from 11 a.m.-8 p.m. and Tuesday, April 25, from 9 a.m.-5 p.m.

Marson Galleries Ltd. of Baltimore specializes in exhibiting for sale a distinguished collection of original etchings, woodcuts, lithographs, serigraphs and watercolors by old and modern masters. The collection consists of some 500 pieces of original graphic art by leading American, European and Oriental artists.

A representative will be present to discuss the collection and to answer questions about the work, the artists and the various graphic techniques employed. The prints are shown in an informal atmosphere and the public is invited to browse through the well described collection.

Marson Galleries is the largest firm in the nation specializing in arranging exhibitions and sales of original graphic art at colleges, universities, museums, hospitals and art centers throughout the U.S.

For more information call the University Center at 543-6100.

Rotary Scholarships

The Rotary Club of Wicomico County is seeking qualified applicants for scholarships.

The purpose of Rotary Foundation scholarships is to further international understanding and friendly relations among peoples of different countries. Both men and women may apply for one of the five types of Foundation scholarships to complete one academic year of study or training in another country where Rotary clubs are located.

The five types of Rotary Foundation Scholarhsips are: graduate scholarships, for those who will have received a bachelor's degree or its equivalent before commencement of scholarship duties; undergraduate scholarships, for those who are studying at the university level but who will not have completed a bachelor's degree before the commencement to scholarship studies; vocational scholarships, for those who are secondary school graduates and who have been employed or engaged full time in a vocation for at least two years as of the application deadline; teacher of the handicapped scholarships, for those who have been employed or engaged full time as teachers of the physically, mentally or educationally handicapped for at least two years as of the application deadline; and journalism scholarships, for those who have been employed in a full-time position in print or broadcast journalism for at least two years as of the application deadline.

The basic period of the scholarship is the regular academic year at the study institution. The scholarship includes round-trip transportation between the scholar's home and study city, all required academic fees, room and board, some educational supplies and limited educational travel during the award year.

Anyone interested in learning more about Rotary Foundation Scholarships should contact Bill Shockley at 749-2258. Applications must be submitted by May 1.

to interview a death row inmate on the eve of his execution. McCarthy analyzes the national economy by visiting the sweat shops of Brooklyn, the economic ghost towns of northern Michigan, or looking at the exploitive factories of U.S. corporations in Haiti. To understand American education, he taught at a high school in downtown Washington. To capture the spirit of the running boom, he reported from Marathon, Greece.

"I have enjoyed," McCarthy said, "what Henry James called 'accessibility to experience.' Writing columns, at least on the good days, can be a way of proclaiming that the beauty we hunger for—justice in people's lives, comfort for the victims of the world's violence, a chance to love and be loved—is findable, and can be jotted in a reporter's notebook and brought back to the typewriter to be be shared with others. In the end, the sharing becomes the beautiful that we've been seeking all along."

McCarthy, a graduate of Spring Hill College, Mobile, AL, was born in 1938 in Old Brookville, NY. He lives in Washington with his wife, Mavourneen, a registered nurse and writer, and his three sons. His essays have appeared in magazines ranging from The New Yorker to Reader's Digest. He has been "Visiting Writer" at George Mason University, as well as an adjunct professor of peace studies at several Washington-area universities. The Progressive said that McCarthy is a "a remarkably gifted and stimulating teacher—one of those rare individuals who is certain to leave a mark on his students." The same can be said of his writing and his readers.

McCarthy's lecture at SSU is part of the on-going Man and Nature series. Like all programs in the series, it is free and open to the public. For more information, call the Public Relations Office at 543-6030.

Along with numerous solo recitals, Clinton has made guest appearances with several orchestras, among them the Baltimore Symphony, the Merrimack Valley Philharmonic (MA), the Prince George's Philharmonic (MD) and the National Symphony.

His numerous prizes and awards have included: first prizes in the 1975 and 1978 Baltimore Symphony Concerto Competition; second prize at the National Chopin Society Young Pianist's Competition (1979); first prize in the Beethoven Society of Washington, D.C. Young Pianist's Competition (1980); first prize at the National Symphony Young Soloist's Auditions (1980); and first prize in the Friday Morning Music Club Summer Scholarship Competition (1980).

Nature Readings By Wesley and Rouse

Kelly Rouse, co-anchor of the nightly news broadcast on Salisbury ABC affiliate, WMDT-TV Channel 47, and Dr. Robert Wesley, professor in the Department of Communication Arts, join forces for a reading hour titled "Nature and Human Nature" on Wednesday, April 12, at 7:30 p.m. in the Social Room of Holloway Hall.

"There are many among us who believe that the earth is in trouble," said Wesley. "Everywhere, the voices of despair are clear. However, the voices of hope are there also. In the reading hour, 'Nature and Human Nature,' selected passages will be read aloud which contain the writings of naturalists, poets, philosophers and scientists who went beyond analysis to seeing for themselves how life works on this planet and what that might mean, both for themselves and future generations.

"The readings are intended to intensify our feelings for the natural world, to develop a love for life and the systems of the earth that sustain it," said Wesley. "Each selection in some way speaks with the wisdom and love of individuals who have touched the natural world and have, in turn, been deeply touched by it. In an age of modern technology, which has a tendency to insulate human kind from the natural world, this reading hour is planned to help us renew our sense of relationship with the earth."

Wesley founded the SSU Department of Communication Arts in 1970, serving as its chair until 1981. It is now one of the largest majors in the School of Liberal Arts.

At Salisbury he has both directed and performed in a series of popular readings and stage adaptations over the years including Spoon River Anthology, The Good Doctor, The Dining Room and A Sense of the Other.

A member of the SSU Speaker's Bureau, he is one the lecturers most in demand by Eastern Shore civic clubs and organizations. Popular topics include, "Everybody's Talking, Is Anybody Listening?" and "Why Do Women Listen Differently From Men?" He also has given workshops on listening for the Eastern Communication Association and in western Maryland and Delaware.

Wesley has taught at Maryknoll College, outside of Chicago, and Northern Iowa University and was visiting professor at Eastern Michigan University in Ypsilanti.

He currently is developing a proposal for National Public Radio on poetry.

Kelly Rouse has worked at WMDT-TV since 1981, where she co-anchors the 6 and 11 p.m. nightly news as well as "Healthcast," a special feature on Channel 47's "Live at 5:30."

Prior to that she appeared in several popular commercials for an auto parts distributor where she worked as promotions director.

She earned her Bachelor of Arts in theatre and English from Eastern Michigan University in Ypsilanti and has appeared in local theatre including Our Town, The Good Doctor, which was directed by Wesley and most recently as Lady Sneerwell in The School for Scandal, at Salisbury State.

The reading hour is free and open to the public.

For more information call the SSU Public Relations Office at 543-6030.

the tutelage of several notable French chefs.

She returned to the U.S., working in restaurants in Boston and Cape Cod, then moved to Baltimore where she was a pastry chef for four years at the Brass Elephant and the Country Fare Inn.

She came to Salisbury in the fall of 1987 as the Garde Manager at the Sheraton Inn responsible for all of the cold food preparation including canapes and pates. Last fall she came to Salisbury State and its Dining Services operation. This will be her first Gala, yet the menu she has planned will surely make this Gala one of the most memorable.

"It's a very rich, classically styled French menu," said White, then adding with a slight chuckle, "with ample portions."

Lots of attention will be paid to the appetizers including canapes, pates, galantines and crudites, "the hallmark of French cuisine," as White puts it. The soup, potage de Cressoniere or cream of watercress, is according to White, "the perfect springtime dish because of the freshness of the ingredients that time of the year, and its colorful appearance and light taste."

The first course will be Saumon Agnes, cold poached salmon with sorrell or fresh herb mayonnaise. "Sorrell is a lettuce popular among French cooks," said White. "I find it a tart herb that works well with the richness of the salmon." Supreme de Volaille Veronique, or sauteed chicken breasts in a white wine sauce with red and green grapes, will be the entree.

Accompanied by rice pilaf and seasonal vegetables, it will also come garnished with edible flowers.

The Salad Printemps will feature lots of fresh seasonal lettuce, such as butter, Boston, spinach and raddichio (a purple and silver leaved cabbage). The dressing will be a homemade vinaigrette.

For desert, Gala goers will complete their meal with Poire Belle Helene, poached pears with vanilla ice cream and hot chocolate sauce.

"I enjoy its blend of different textures and taste," said White of the dessert, "the hot and cold, the soft and crunchy."

When asked about breads to accompany the meal, White smiled and replied, "French bread, of course."

Tickets for the Foundation Gala are $125, per couple. For more information, call the Office of Research and Development at 543-6175.

A PUBLICATION FOR UNIVERSITY FACULTY, FRIENDS, STAFF AND STUDENTS

APRIL 6, 1989 VOL. X NO. 23

National Medical Technology Week Starts April 9

Tour of Lab at PGHMC Available

The faculty of the Medical Technology Department is participating in the observance of National Medical Laboratory Week, April 9-15.

"We want to educate faculty, students and the public that medical laboratory professionals are important in diagnosing and treating illness," said Johanna Laird, departmental chair. "This year's theme, 'The Laboratory Professional: Your Key to Quality Health Care,' was chosen to increase public awareness of how the work done in the laboratory relates to the health of patients. Attending physicians depend upon laboratory test results to confirm the diagnosis and prescribe appropriate treatment."

Many health problems begin slowly without visable symptoms. However, changes in blood, urine or body cells detected by laboratory tests may locate the problem in time to take preventative action. These changes are detectecd by pathologists and medical technologists.

A pathologist is a type of doctor that participates in day-to-day hospital care by providing and interpreting laboratory information. The key information is used to help solve diagnostic problems and monitor the effects of therapy. The delicate management of patients with acute leukemia, AIDS, cancer and other complex disorders frequently requires the skill and knowledge of the pathologist.

It takes a pathologist four or more years of additional training after completing medical school to become an expert in the use of laboratory tests to diagnose and treat illnesses. Because of the pathologist's role in interpreting and reporting laboratory test results and in research, he or she is sometimes called the "doctor's doctor."

Working closely with pathologists and physicians are the baccalaureate degree medical technologists. These clinical laboratory scientists are trained professionals. They get special medical instruction on the principles and applications of laboratory science and a practical internship. Specialty training involves the chemical and biological study of blood, tissue and cells, the body's immune systems, and the investigation of infectious disease.

The technologist will work in any number of departments in the medical laboratory. The Blood Bank is responsible for supplying the ever-increasing demand for blood products. Each blood unit is typed for blood group, screened for antibodies and tested for contagious diseases. Microbiology is responsible for identification of disease-causing bacteria, parasites or viruses; and the monitoring of the body's immune system to disease. For example, swabs of a patient's throat can be used to reveal an organism causing an infection.

Hematology is the study of the blood cell. This section of the lab is involved in red and white cell counts, and the microscopic examination of stained blood cells. These tests can reveal

Augsburg Choir Here

The Augsburg University Chamber Choir from Augsburg, Germany performs a choral concert on Friday, April 7, at 8 p.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium. The performance is free and open to the public.

The choir performs choral music of all periods and different styles of performance practice. Membership is by audition only and the choir includes 40 students which represent various departments throughout the university.

The conductor, Kurt Suttner, is professor of music education at the University of Augsburg. After his studies at the Musikhochschule in Munich, he taught at the German School in Addis Abeba, Ethiopia, and later was the musical advisor in the Madagascar Ministry of Cultural Affairs in Tananarive. In 1972 he founded the Via-Nova Choir of Munich. This choir has become well-known because of its exemplary interpretations of contemporary choral music. Suttner and his Via-Nova Munchen have received many national and international awards.

During its concert tour in the United States, the Chamber Choir will perform in Dayton, OH (the partner city of Augsburg), Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Salisbury.

The repertoire of the Chamber Choir comprises sacred and secular choral music by

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Department of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or whereever you may reside. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep your first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away from alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit area or a place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you need an escort to or from your car, call the Department of Public Safety, 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Department of Public Safety, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

AIDS Symposium

A symposium on the recent developments in the disease Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS) will be held on Friday, April 28, sponsored by the Medical Technology Department in conjunction with the SSU Foundation.

The targeted audience includes clinical laboratory professionals, science educators, physicians, science students and virtually any citizen who is interested in how recent developments may impact the average person.

The symposium faculty bring impressive qualifications. Dr. Edmund Tramont is the associate director for retrovirology at Walter Reed Institute of Research. Dr. Carol Tackett is part of the AIDS vaccine research at the University of Maryland Vaccine Unit, and Dr. Leslie Russell is a scientist on the professional staff of the U.S. House of Representatives.

The symposium, to be held in the Wicomico Room of the University Center from 1-5 p.m, costs $10 ($3.50 for students) to cover the cost of all speakers and a coffee break.

Advanced registration is required as seating is limited and may be obtained by calling Hayes at 543-6331 or by writing to the Medical Technology Department.

SSU News Guidelines

The SSU News is a newletter for the campus community published by the Public Relations Office each Thursday during fall and spring semesters, unless noted. The deadline is 4:30 p.m. on the Friday prior to publication.

Any story relating to the life of the campus, whether it be of interest to students, faculty or staff, is welcomed. Newsletter items should be typed and double-spaced.

Because stories are usually proofed and typeset on a first come, first served basis, don't feel you have to wait until Friday to get your article to Public Relations (HH 264).

Because the PR cannot canyas the campus personally, the staff is grateful to those who keep it current on the activities and issues affecting University life. Public Relations looks forward to hearing from you.

Director for Center for Business and Economic Research Sought

The Perdue School invites applications and nominations for the position of director of the newly created Center for Business and Economic Research serving the Mid-Atlantic region, with special emphasis on the Delmarva Peninsula. The director reports to the dean of the school and has responsibility for all center activities including the development of a monthly business conditions survey, regional consumer price index, quarterly center publications and sponsored reserach. This is a 12-month tenure-track appointment. Rank is open. AACSB competitive salary.

Please send nominations or applications to Chair, CBER Search Committee, The Franklin P. Perdue School of Business, Salisbury State University, Salisbury, Maryland 21801-6860.

Salisbury State University is an equal opportunity, affirmative action employer and encourages qualified women, minorities and disabled persons to apply.

Students to Work Summer Orientation

A limited number of students are being hired to assist with the summer Orientation (testing advising and registration) Program for new students and their families.

Fall semester sophomores, juniors and seniors will be needed to work June 19-22, June 26-29 and July 10-11. Applicants should be in good academic standing, active with extracurricular activities, knowledgeable about programs, services and organizations on campus, regarded as good role models and articulate about SSU. A brief training program will be required.

Interested students should fill out an application at the Work Experience Office in the Physical Plant Building.

Bach's Lunch Returns

"Bach's Lunch," a free noon recital series at St. Peter's Church in Salisbury, is returning for its fourth season.

The series of half-hour informal concerts continues on consecutive Tuesdays through May 9. Each recital will run from 12:15 - 12:45 p.m., enabling local listeners to attend during their lunch hour.

The "Bach's Lunch" series is free and open to the public. St. Peter's is located on the Downtown Plaza. Further information is available on upcoming concerts from the church office, 742-5118.

Derby Days Start April 17!

WSUR, the students radio station, will be celebrating a decade of campus madness with the 10th annual Derby Days.

WSUR brings a week of zany confusion to campus April 17-22 with all the familiar Derby Days events, plus a few surprises.

Now is the time for women of SSU to unite and register a team. Information packets will be available March 29-April 5 at WSUR, on the second floor of the University Center. If you have questions call Tom Antonielli at 543-6195.

Tawes Closed

Tawes Gym is now closed to all free play and will be locked by campus police.

Marson Exhibit

A special exhibition and sale of original graphic art will be presented in the Atrium Gallery in the University Center on Monday, April 24, from 11 a.m.-8 p.m. and Tuesday, April 25, from 9 a.m.-5 p.m.

Marson Galleries Ltd. of Baltimore specializes in exhibiting for sale a distinguished collection of original etchings, woodcuts, lithographs, serigraphs and watercolors by old and modern masters. The collection consists of some 500 pieces of original graphic art by leading American, European and Oriental artists.

A representative will be present to discuss the collection and to answer questions about the work, the artists and the various graphic techniques employed.

For more information call the University Center at 543-6100.

SSPB Needs You

The Salisbury State Program Board is now accepting applications for all officer and chair positions for the 1989-90 academic year.

SSPB is the student operated and funded organization that creates and produces many of the events seen on campus including: many Homecoming activities, Spring Fling, films, concerts, comedians and lectures. SSPB is composed of seven committees. Those committees are comedy/concerts, multicultural, recreation, films/video, special events, spotlight club and variety showcase. Whatever your interests are, there's a spot for you with SSPB.

Applications are now available at the Dean of Students Office, Registrar's Office, University Center information desk and the SSPB Office.

The application deadline is Friday, April 14, by 4 p.m. in the Dean of Students Office. For more information call 543-6080 or 543-6209.

Women's Issues

A meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, April 11, in the Nanticoke Room of the University Center at 3:30 p.m. to discuss adoption of a constitution and bylaws and consideration of officers for the upcoming year for the University Committee on Women's Issues (formerly the Women's Caucus).

Members who hold an interest in women's issues are urged to attend this important meeting. As this committee attempts to provide itself with an organizational structure, this becomes an important opportunity to contribute ideas and visions for a women's issues group on campus. Refreshments will be served.

Cry Freedom to Show April 9

The SSPB film Cry Freedom will show at 3, 7 and 9:15 p.m. in Devilbiss Room 149 on Sunday, April 9. The 3 p.m. matinee is an addition to the schedule.

Cry Freedom, the filmed story of African activist Stephen Biko, founder of South Africa's Black Consciousness Movement, and Donald Woods, the South African journalist who championed Biko's cause, directed by Academy Award winner Sir Richard Attenborough, is one of the presentations headlining Afro-American History events on campus.

Denzel Washington plays Biko, who died in a South African jail in 1977 as a consequence of alleged police brutality and his resistance to Apartheid. Kevin Kline plays Donald Woods, the editor of the Daily Dispatch who was ultimately proclaimed a banned person by the South African government, and who helped to bring Biko's struggle to international attention. The screenplay is based upon two books Woods later went on to write: Biko and Asking for Trouble, both of which were banned by the South African government.

Admission to Cry Freedom is free and the public is invited.

Charlie Byrd to Perform With the Annapolis Brass Quintet

A new musical concept, "Chamber Jazz" will be heard in Salisbury when the Annapolis Brass Quintet performs with Charlie Byrd and his Trio on Sunday, April 16, at 6:30 p.m. at the Sheraton Salisbury. This final concert of the Salisbury 88-89 ABQ series is sponsored by the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council.

The concert will feature a combination of chamber music and jazz melodies and riffs as performed by two of Maryland's finest musical ensembles, the ABQ and Charlie Byrd and his Trio.

These two groups first played together four years ago when they intended to record part of an album together. The production of the album was so much fun for the two groups and so well received by the producer that the entire album became "Byrd and Brass," one of the ABQ's most popular releases.

The popularity of this "chamber jazz" combination has been so great that the Annapolis Brass Quintet and Charlie Byrd Trio now regularly tour together across the United States. Tickets for the concert are $12.00 and student discounts are available at the door on a space available basis. Tickets may be purchased through the 11 branches of Peninsula Bank, the two Salisbury locations of John Hanson Savings Bank or through the Arts Council Office in the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center.

As an added bonus the Sheraton Salisbury's Harpers Restaurant will be offering a 20% discount on the buffet dinners of ticket holders at the Sunday buffet. The buffet will be open from 4 p.m.-10 p.m., both before and after the concert.

For dinner reservations call the Sheraton Salisbury at 546-4400. For more information on the concert, call the Arts Council at 543-ARTS.

Music Department to Present French Piano Duets

Join the piano students of the SSU's Department of Music for an evening of French piano duets on Friday, April 14, at 8 p.m. in Caruthers Auditorium. Works by Gabriel Faure, Erik Satie, Maurice Ravel and Francis Poulenc will be performed.

The first duets for the pianoforte were published in 1777, only a few years before the French Revolution and during the musical era known as "The Galant," whose primary objective was to charm and entertain. Piano duets have grown enormously in popularity, since they provide amusement for both performers and audience.

"The duets performed on this program are by French composers of the early 20th century. All the pieces have a nationalistic flavor, and all exhibit the vivid tone-painting of Impressionism," said Linda Cockey, piano instructor. Nine students will play: Joseph Kasher, Scot Hawkins, Bryan Hurley, Wynel Cooper, Amanda Meyer, Joan Dirska, Raye Ellen Justice, Karen Orr and Carolyn Lane.

The concert is free to the public.

Paul Douglas Teacher Scholarship

Applications for Paul Douglas Teacher Scholarships are available in the Financial Aid Office, Holloway Hall room 244. Applicants must be Maryland residents and agree to teach in Maryland for two years for each year the scholarship is received.

This scholarship is not based on financial need, so all interested students should apply. The grant is up to $5,000 per academic year. Deadline for applciations is May 1.

Nature Readings By Wesley and Rouse

Kelly Rouse, co-anchor of the nightly news broadcast on Salisbury ABC affiliate, WMDT-TV Channel 47, and Dr. Robert Wesley, professor in the Department of Communication Arts, join forces for a reading hour titled "Nature and Human Nature" on Wednesday, April 12, at 7:30 p.m. in the Social Room of Holloway Hall.

"There are many among us who believe that the earth is in trouble," said Wesley. "Everywhere, the voices of despair are clear. However, the voices of hope are there also.

This reading hour is planned to help us renew our sense of relationship with the earth."

At Salisbury he has both directed and performed in a series of popular readings and stage adaptations over the years including Spoon River Anthology, The Good Doctor, The Dining Room and A Sense of the Other.

A member of the SSU Speaker's Bureau, he is one the lecturers most in demand by Eastern Shore civic clubs and organizations. Popular topics include, "Everybody's Talking. Is Anybody Listening?" and "Why Do Women Listen Differently From Men?"

He currently is developing a proposal for National Public Radio on poetry.

Kelly Rouse has worked at WMDT-TV since 1981, where she co-anchors the 6 and 11 p.m. nightly news as well as "Healthcast," a special feature on Channel 47's "Live at 5:30."

Prior to that she appeared in several popular commercials for an auto parts distributor where she worked as promotions director.

She earned her Bachelor of Arts in theatre and English from Eastern Michigan University in Ypsilanti and has appeared in local theatre including Our Town, The Good Doctor, which was directed by Wesley and most recently as Lady Sneerwell in The School for Scandal, at Salisbury State.

The reading hour is part of the Man and Nature Series and is free and open to the public.

For more information call the SSU Public Relations Office at 543-6030.

Voices of Hope and Anger

Bok-Nim Yu from the Republic of Korea, Aurora Schmidt of Mexico and the U.S.A., and Marta Sandoval from Honduras will speak on Tuesday, April 11, at 7 p.m. in the Nanticoke Room B of the University Centeron "Sovereignty and Self-Determination: Reflections on the U.S. Military Presence in Their Lands."

Bok-Nim Yu is a founder and resident director of My Sister's Place, a spiritual community and counseling center for Korean women married to, living with or serving American G.I.s in Korea. She graduated from Hankuk Theological Seminary in Seoul and has served as an assistant minister for a Presbyterian Church near the capital city.

Marta Sandoval serves as Secretary of Women's Affairs for the Central Nacional de Trabajadores del Campo (National Peasants and Workers Central). Leaders of this organization have been arrested, tortured, and several killed by Honduran police. Marta Sandoval has also taught in four isolated rural schools.

Aurora Schmidt was born in Mexico City and now works as a staff writer for the American Friends Service Committee. She has coordinated AFSC's Mexico-U.S. Border Program. She will speak on behalf of the AFSC and will also serve as a translator for Marta Sandoval.

This is a special opportunity for us to learn about conditions of women and their families in Third World settings.

Erskine to Teach Witchcraft Course at Brandeis

How creative or competent women have been branded as "witches" when special interest groups felt the women threateded a particular economic, politcal or social sphere of influence is the topic of a course taught by Dr. Thomas Erskine, at Brandeis University in July.

Titled "Witchcraft as Metaphor and Weapon," the course is part of Brandeis' innovative summer program for high school students. Professors from across the country teach in both the sciences, for which Brandeis has an outstanding reputation, and interdisciplinary studies, such as Erskine's, which will draw on film, literature, theatre, medicine and history, to explore the myriad aspects of the label, "witch."

"In colonial New England the stigma of 'witch' was often used against women who deviated from the general consensus of what acceptable social or religious behavior should be," Erskine said. Students will read stories by Nathaniel Hawthorne as well as Arthur Miller's classic play, The Crucible, set in Puritan Salem during the frenzied witch trials at the end of the 17th century. They also will visit the Salem Museum.

Also during the 17th century, physicians who were developing obstetrics as a speciality, began labeling the traditional mid-wife as a witch. The decline of mid-wifery allowed the male physician to create a lucrative practice in what heretofore had been recognized as a legitimate health profession for women, Erskine said. Students will visit the famous Women's Health Co-operative in nearby Boston, where a seminal book of the women's movement, Our Bodies, Our Selves, originated.

After the Soviet Union developed atomic capability, U.S. Senator Joseph McCarthy in the 1950s launched a political witchhunt for "communists," a witchhunt which destroyed the careers of both men and women in government, the arts and education. Students will view Woody Allen's movie, The Front, which gives an account of the entertainment industry during this time.

Students also will read and see the film interpretation of John Updike's novel, The Witches of Eastwick, about three independent, non-conforming women and their liason with the devil, set in a contemporary All-American town.

Erskine brings a background in both multimedia studies and creative programs for high schoolers to the course. A founder of the journal, Literature/ Film Quarterly, published by SSU and read in 27 foreign countries, he also helped create, "Super Saturday," a series of programs for talented and gifted junior high students, which were held at SSU. "Super Saturday" won statewide recognition from the Maryland Association for High Education with its award for excellence. Erskine also teaches a course for students to help them prepare for the Scholastic Aptitude Test.

Brandeis is located in Waltham, one of Boston's loveliest suburbs, and its "Summer Discoveries Program" attracts students from across the nation. Many social and recreational activities are scheduled during their five week stay. For more information on the Brandeis program, contact Erskine at 543-6373 or write or call the Department of English.

McBrien Addresses Atlanta Adlerians

Dr. Robert J. McBrien, director of the University's Center for Personal and Professional Development, was the featured speaker at the spring meeting of the Adlerian Society of Atlanta. Speaking at Georgia State University to society members and the faculty and graduate students of GSU's counseling psychology program, he discussed "Humor as Encouragement."

"Humor, when correctly used by parents, teachers, counselors and human service workers, has a positive influence on personal growth," said McBrien, who subscribes to the optimistic theories of human nature first formulated more than 60 years ago by Alfred Adler, a giant in the human development movement. The SSU counselor pointed out the toxic effect on self-esteem of "put-down" humor. He then discussed Adlerian psychology's positive use of story-telling, cartoons and gentle confrontation through humorous situations to provoke insight into a client's life situation during counseling.

"One interesting approach to using humor as a positive treatment," McBrien noted, "is to assign daily exposure to humorous materials as a means of increasing the individual's 'humor quotient.' Through audio or video- tapes, cartoon books and carefully selected TV programs, people receive a daily dose of healthy laughter. Positive experiences with humor and laughter provide encouragement for those dealing with stressful life events."

He also has spoken on "Humor as Encouragement" to professional groups in Connecticut, South Carolina and Florida.

He has been associated with SSU since 1971. He, his wife Catherine, and their two daughters, Kathleen and Angela, live in Salisbury.

Whall Takes Honor Students to NY Conference University

Dr. Raymond Whall, director of the Honors Program, attended the 18th annual conference of the Northeast Region National Collegiate Honors Council in New York, March 31-April 2.

Whall, past president of the regional organization made up of 120 colleges and universities from Maine to Maryland, attended the conference with six honor students—Catherine Farmer, Becky Loomis, Stephanie Hughes, George Burbage, Nestor Bleech and Kevin Smith.

They participated in a number of workshops and symposia relating to Honors education. Whall co-directed with professor Edmund Napienalski of King's College a workshop on the poetry of Galway Kinnell and co-directed another session on "Honors, Excellence and Democracy" with professor James Knauer of Lock Haven University.

Zeta Tau Alpha News

by Kris Martinez and Leslie Stufft

Zeta Tau Alpha sorority would like to take this opportunity to recognize its newly initiated sisters. They are: Christine Bartolotta, of Dover, DE; Gerrie Butler, of Salisbury; Jackie Clarke, of Baltimore; Renée Cox, of Baldwin; Kim Hillmuth, of Gaithersburg; Chryss McCarthy, of Salem, NJ; Beth Melhorn, of West Orange, NJ; Michelle Porter, of Salisbury; and Wendy Price, of Medford, NJ. They made it through a semester of pledging and we are very proud of them. Congratulations to you all!

At this time, Zeta would also like to welcome her new pledges for the spring semester. They are Kristin Carmean, of Northeast; Katie Dunn, of Aberdeen; Rebecca Hurley, of Bel Air; Kelly Jones, of Snow Hill; Lisa Mitchell, of Bel Air; and Jennifer Roche, of Salisbury.

So far this semester, ZTA has been involved in many activities. Besides its successful initiation and spring rush, ZTA held its spring formal in February at the Carousel Hotel in Ocean City. More than 60 people attended. SSU's ZTA chapter also participated in the regional meeting, Zeta Day, in Bethesda in February. Zetas from all over Maryland and Virginia shared ideas for self-enrichment. SSU's Zetas have been holding weekly socials this semester, keeping the fun side of university life alive and well.

ZTA is again planning participation in the University's annual Phone-a-thon, which is now an annual tradition for the chapter. The money ZTA earns goes to the Association for Retarded Citizens to help them with their national programs. Zetas are also planning a killer showing at Derby Days, which is sponsored by WSUR. "We took first place last year and don't plan on giving that title up this year," said Leslie Stufft. The SSU ZTA chapter has 31 members. ZTA is the third largest sorority in the world. "We are always interested in expanding our membership," Stufft added.

Liane Hansen Announced As New Host of NPR's 'Performance Today'

Performance Today executive producer Wesley Horner recently announced the appointment of Liane Hansen as host of the daily two-hour music and arts information series. Hansen will assume the post on April 11, 1989.

Performance Today, winner of the 1988 Major Armstrong Award, airs on WSCL-FM 89.5 Delmarva Public Radio week days from 9 - 11 a.m.

Hansen is well known to National Public Radio listeners, with nearly fifteen years experience as radio arts producer, reporter, and on-air host.

During her public radio career, Hansen has produced features on and interviewed hundreds of artists, authors and musicians, including John Houseman, Peter Schickele, Toshiko Akioshi, Gregory Hines, Susan Sontag, Emanual Ax, James DePreist, Eugene Ionesco, and Lawrence Ferlinghetti.

Said Wesley Horner in making the announcement, "We're delighted that Liane Hansen will be joining Performance Today. She brings to the program a tremendous amount of talent and experience, as well as loyal listeners already familiar with her warm, engaging on-air personality."

Salisbury Prayer Breakfast

Dr. Stephen F. Holbrook, president of Princeton Management Associates, Inc. (PMA Inc.), a worldwide management education and consulting company, is the featured speaker for the 14th Annual Salisbury Mayor's Breakfast, scheduled for Tuesday, May 2, at the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center. PMA,. Inc. trains managers in the critical thinking skills of decision making, problem solving and planning. Over the past 20 years, more than 110,000 people have participated in his courses.

Holbrook has authored four books on managment. Effective Decision Making has sold over 100,000 copies and is in its 14th printing. Effective Problem Solving and People Managment is in its sixth printing and his newest, Effective Planning, is in its fifth printing. These books are used as texts in many graduate business schools throughout the country.

Holbrook is a graduate of Union College, Schenectady, NY, with a degree in economics. He is also a graduate of the U.S. Naval Intelligence School and served as a naval intelligence officer in Washington, D.C., and at the Pacific Headquarters of the Commander-in-Chief, Pacific Fleet. During his business career, he was associated with the Owens-Illinois Glass Company in sales, marketing and management. Representing the container industry, he was instrumental in developing the concept, "Keep America Beautiful." Prior to forming his own company in 1972, he consulted in management development with Kepner-Tregoe Associates, Inc., of Princeton, NJ. Today, more than 200 firms, including General Motors, IBM and AT&T, have benefited from his training and consulting expertise.

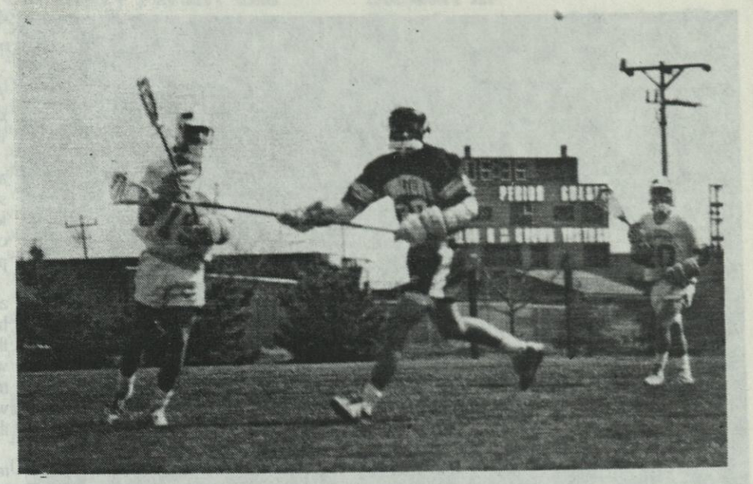
In addition, Holbrook is a lecturer at many meetings and conventions speaking on topics such as, "A Vision for Greatness," "Managing for the 90s" and "Excellence—What Do We Have to Do to Get It?"

Active in church, community and political affairs, Holbrook and Elaine, his wife of more than 30 years, enjoy their three adult daughters, tennis and antique car restoration. He is also a frequent conference speaker for Stonecroft Ministries.

Tickets for the breakfast, which is open to the public, are $8 per person and must be purchased in advance by April 21. They may be purchased at Jack's Religious Gift Shop and The Gospel Shop or by writing The Salisbury Mayor's Prayer Breakfast Committee, 1 Alderney Mews, Salisbury, MD 21801. The event will begin with a musical prelude at 7:10 a.m. with breakfast served at 7:30 a.m. The program will end promptly at 9:15 a.m. Early reservations are recommended. More than 1,000 persons are expected to attend.

MCEA Bus Trip

MCEA Chapter No. 72 is going to Atlantic City, NJ, on Saturday, June 3. The bus leaves from Maggs Gym at 7 a.m. and returns at 9:30 p.m. that same evening. The cost to MCEA chapter members is $7, non-members $17. Participants receive $9 in coins and a $5 deferred voucher at the casino. "It is guaranteed to be a fun-filled trip," said Barbara Keene. Call her at 543-6350 to reserve a seat. Food and beverages are allowed on this bus.



Tim Berquist (No. 19), SSU lacrosse mid-fieldman, broke the SSU career assist record during spring break.

Sports by Barry Packer

Despite weather playing more havoc with Salisbury State's spring sports schedule than a team of Tim Raineses would have on opposing pitchers, a great amount of success is surrounding the "Sea Gull Seven."

Two of the teams, softball and men's lacrosse, are ranked in the Top-15 in the country. With games rained out left and right, the baseball and men's tennis teams are enjoying success, both in the Eastern States Athletic Conference and overall. The women's lacrosse team followed up a season-opening win with an outstanding performance in a two-goal loss at Division II UMBC. Women's tennis opened the season with a win over Goucher before giving some fine individual performances at the Catholic University Invitational this past weekend. And the track and field team in three meets has already had a Most Valuable Performer and a school record broken.

About three hours apart in distance, Tim Berquist and Stephanie Brown each made their way into the Salisbury State record book.

About six minutes into the SSU-Potsdam lacrosse game, Berquist assisted on Rick Berkman's goal, thus breaking current Loyola coach Dave Cottle's career record for assists.

At the same time, Brown, Coach Terry Rupert's 10,000-meter freshman runner, was on her way to first place at the Battleground Relays at Mary Washington College, and an SSU record in her first intercollegiate race.

Yet, there were other noteworthy performancs that weren't records. Like Mike Marinelli going seven-for-eight in Sunday's doubleheader sweep of Shenandoah, including a double, a triple, four runs scored and seven knocked in.

Or Terri Sharpless, who in five games is 4-1, with three walks and 38 strikeouts and owning an earned run average of 0.00.

Or Lisa Kallis, who has been one of the women's lacrosse strongest performers, including 13 saves against defending National Champion and top-ranked Trenton State on Saturday.

And the consistent play of people like Mark Buzzell for Dean Burroughs' men's tennis team, now 4-2. Buzzell is closing in on the SSU individual record for wins in singles matches.

Don't forget Lisa Liberatore, who finished second on the fifth-seeded singles rung of the ladder this past weekend at Catholic, before teaming with Jodi Henkel to finish third on the number two doubles rung.

All this shows is that while the weather is playing havoc with the Gulls' schedules, the Gulls' teams are playing havoc with their opponents.

Does Nature Have Rights? by Jerry Miller

The Philosophical Society, in cooperation with the Philosophy Department, the Appropriations Board and the Honors Program, is happy to announce its eighth Spring Symposium, which this year is devoted to the question "Does Nature Have Rights."

The Symposium will be held on Saturday, April 15, in Caruthers Auditorium. As in the past, it will involve morning presentations by two visiting philosophers, and an afternoon free-for-all with faculty panelists and students. The proceedings begin at 9:30 a.m., but everyone is invited a few minutes early for coffee and doughnuts.

This year's guest speakers, Dr. Baird Callicott and Dr. Mark Sagoff, have published extensively on this topic and are widely recognized as effective advocates of their conflicting positions.

Callicott teaches at the University of Wisconsin at Stevens Point but is spending the current year researching and writing at Berkeley. His book, In Defense of the Land Ethic, recently published by SUNY Press, has been highly praised even by those who disagree with it.

Sagoff is acting director and senior research scholar at the Institute for Philosophy and Public Policy at the University of Maryland. his book, The Economy of the Earth: Philosophy, Law and the Environment, was recently published by Cambridge University Press. I am sure, just on the basis of my phone conversations with him, that Dr. Sagoff will be a lively and provocative presenter.

The panel for the afternoon sessions (which will begin about 1:30 p.m.) will include Laura Murray (biology), Cyril Daddieh (political science), Don Whaley (history), and Joe Gilbert (Thoreau stand-in). I will be trying to prevent violence from occurring while encouraging the wholehearted participation of everyone in the discussion.

First Gala Ticket Sold as Phantom Looks on. Frank Perdue, chairman of Perdue Farms Inc., purchases the first ticket to this year's 10th annual Salisbury State University Foundation Gala from Mrs. Evelyn Jefferson Fox, co-chair of ticket sales. While Mrs. Flo Mabe, Gala chair, and Dr. Bellavance join in the ceremony, the Phantom of the Opera this year's Gala theme, witnesses the proceedings. The Gala will be held Saturday evening, April 22, in the Ruth Powell Dining Hall. Tickets are $125 per couple and may be purchased through the Office of Reserach and Development 543-6175. (The student portraying the Phantom is Jeffrey Patterson of Bel Air, a senior communication arts major.)

Clinton Piano Recital

Noted pianist Mark K. Clinton will perform the works of Haydn, Chopin and Liszt on Monday, April 10, at 8 p.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium. Sponsored by the Music Department, the recital is free and open to the public.

Clinton began his piano studies at age four and entered the Peabody Conservatory on scholarship at the age of eight. There he studied for eight years with Julian Martin, before continuing his studies with the world-renowned pianist Leon Fleisher.

Clinton received both his Bachelor of Music and Master of Music from the Peabody. In May he will receive the Doctor of Musical Arts from the Shepherd School of Music at Rice University, where he has studied under the tutelage of master-teacher John Perry. He has also studied with Carlo Zecchi and Tatiana Nikolayeva at the Mozarteum in Salzburg, Austria.

Clinton has given recitals from coast to coast, receiving much critical acclaim. Critics have hailed his "...polished style and commanding stage presence." One critic said that Clinton's "...interpretation was exhilharating and delightful, so bright and clean that the audience shook with applause for almost 10 minutes afterward."

For more information, contact the Music Department at 543-6385.

Alaska Slide Show

"The Last Great Wilderness," a multiprojector slide presentation providing a close-up look at the fragile and beautiful Artic National Wildlife Refuge in northeast Alaska, will be shown on Saturday, April 8, at 7 p.m. in the Nanticoke Room A of the University Center.

Followed by a question and answer session with the program's chief photographer, Lenny Kohm of Sonoma, CA, this latest installment in the University's on-going Man and Nature Series is free and open to the public.

The purpose of the show, according to its sponsors, SSU's Outdoor Club and the Potomac Sierra Club, is to generate concern over plans for oil development in the Refuge's fragile coastal plain.

Kohm's work has appeared in many national publications including Audubon. He spent two years photographing in the Artic and has combined his work with images from 10 other nationally recognized photographers to create "The Last Great Wilderness."

For more information on this other Man and Nature programs, call the Public Relations Office at 543-6030.

Physical Plant

Physical Plant has been receiving an increasing number of calls asking for something to be moved or a set up to be accomplished for some activity without any record of a work order being received.

In order for Physical Plant in general and building services, in particular, to be responsive to these type requests, it must have a work order at least one day and preferably two days before the action being requested is required. This will permit better scheduling and more efficient use of its personnel.

and others interested in the subject will have a chance to discuss with McCarthy his ideas for introducing a peace curriculum into the local curriculum. He is currently teaching such a curriculum in the Washington, D.C., area. He runs a Peace Resources Center from his home to support such efforts.

He is at SSU as part of the Man and Nature Series. "As Professor Roderick Nash noted so effectively in his presentation in this series, the environmental and peace movements are the real hope for the future," said Dr. Phillip Bosserman co-chair of the Peace Alliance of the Lower Shore. "War, especially nuclear war, is hazardous to the environment." Plan to attend and bring with you as many others as you can.

Del. Colburn on Campus April 18

Del. Rich Colburn (R.-Dorchester County) is the guest speaker at a dinner meeting of the University Political Science Club on Tuesday, April 18, at 7:30 p.m. in the Pocomoke Room of the University Center.

Admission is free and the public is invited.

For more information, call the SSU Public Relations Office at 543-6030.

anemia or leukemia.

In the chemistry section, biochemical analysis of blood involves both sophisticated automation and delicate manual testing. A blood glucose might be done to diagnose diabetes or a cholesterol level could be done to assess the risk of heart disease. These examples just scratch the surface of the wide variety of analyses performed in a typical clinical laboratory.

In addition, medical technologists are also in high demand in many other laboratory settings. Since the background of medical technologists includes diverse experience in both biological and chemical analysis, they are desirable in industry, research, public health, education and administration. Many often go on to medical, dental and veterinary professional schools.

Nationally, there is a shortage of qualified medical technologists. The Bureau of Labor Statistics projects that by the year 2000, there will be 57,000 new jobs for clinical laboratory technologists, a 24 percent increase over 1986 figures. Salaries and benefits are on the rise, and there has never been a better time to choose a career in the laboratory sciences.

Tours of the lab at Peninsula General Hospital Medical Center will be conducted during National Medical Laboratory Week, and interested persons are invited to call Diane Hayes at 543-6331 for more information.

Monteverdi, Schutz, Franz Liszt, Distler, Mendelssohn, Genzmer, Jennefelt and Heinz Werner Zimmerman. Part of the April 7 performance will feature Madrigals of the 16th and 17th centuries with a portion of the choir membership wearing historical costumes. Also featured will be folksongs and instrumental folk music of southern Germany accompanied by original German folk instruments.

This choral visitation, under the sponsorship of the Salisbury State University Concert Choir, is being coordinated by the SSU Department of Music, the SSU German Club and the University Center and staff. Choir members from St. Peter's Episcopal Church and Asbury United Methodist Church are providing guest accomodations.

League to Hold Clean Water Program

"Clean Water From the Ground Up: A Guide for Busy, Caring People," a program designed to help concerned citizens improve water quality, will be held Monday, April 10, from 7-9 p.m., in the Flanders Room of the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center (side facing the Salisbury Mall).

Sponsored by the League of Women Voters of Wicomico County, the program will inform the public about practical—often easy—steps that an individual can take at home, in community organizations, and in conjunction with government programs to improve water quality from their own backyard to the bay. The panel and topics to be addressed include:

Jean Scott, program assistant at the University of Maryland Extension Service, will speak on how to save money and improve water quality in one's own backyard through proper control of fertilizers and pesticides; Ray Buchanan, district soil conservationist for Wicomico County will discuss good management of farm and rural properties; Jay Jensen, program director for the Wicomico County Recreation and Parks Department, will show how small and large groups and organizations can take part in projects that restore the environment's looks and health; and Wicomico County Councilman Phil Tilghman will outline the county government's challenges with sanitary landfills, recycling and harmful waste handling.

League member Annie Williams will open the program with an overview of ground water systems and problems facing water quality. Clela Estes, a past president of the League, organized the program and will serve as panel moderator. She noted that the program will provide citizens with steps they can take to ensure cleaner water, even if their time for involvement is limited.

The program is free and open to the public. For more information, call 742-7824.

Personnel Notes

Attention parents of full-time college students: be sure to respond to the recent letter from Blue Cross/Blue Shield prescription card offices requesting verification of your child's full-time status. You will be expected to verify the child's full-time status once each quarter (four times per year times the number of years the youngster attends college). The necessary forms may be obtained directly from the Blue Cross/Blue Shield facility. Questions relating to this new procedure may be directed to a toll free number, 1-800-225-0131.

Chemistry Faculty and Student Present Research Paper

Dr. Edward Senkbeil, associate professor of chemistry, and his senior research student, Ji-Yue Hu, will be presenting a poster session/paper on their work at Salisbury State involving the analysis of the vitamin, riboflavin.

"A method for quantitatively measuring riboflavin using specific fluorometric quenching by the purified riboflavin binding protein (from egg white) will be discussed," Senkbeil said. This project is a portion of Senkbeil's ongoing research program involving undergraduate students at SSU. The paper will be presented at the Chemical Society of Washington meeting at Georgetown University on Thursday, April 6.

Poet Denis Johnson to Read April 17

Denis Johnson, poet and novelist, will read from his works at the University on Monday, April 17, at 7:30 p.m. in the Social Room of Holloway Hall.

Johnson has written four books of poetry, including The Veil (Knopf, 1987) and The Incognito Lounge (Random House, 1982), which was a National Poetry Series selection. He has also written three novels: Angels (Random House, 1983), which won the Sue Kauffman first novel prize; Fiskadoro (Random House, 1985); and The Stars at Noon (Random House, 1987). Among Johnson's many honors are a Pushcart Prize, a fellowship to the Fine Arts Work Center in Provincetown, a Whiting Award, a Guggenheim Fellowship and two National Endowment for the Arts Creative Writing Fellowships. He is currently at work on several screenplays, short stories (some of which have recently appeared in The New Yorker) and a new novel.

The reading, jointly sponsored by the English Department and the Honors Program, is free and open to the public.

For more information call the Public Relations Office at 543-6030.

Stewart in "Conference on Maryland"

The "Conference on Maryland—Developing Expressions" which this year includes an examination of the state's native and traditional arts, will include a presentation by SSU professor of English, Dr. Polly Stewart.

On Friday, April 14, Stewart, a folklore specialist, will discuss "Folklore in Maryland."

The two-day conference, which is being held at Frostburg State University, includes 16 sessions and many performances that examine and portray the evolution and development of theatre, folklore, folk music, blues and jazz, literature, material culture, sports, suburbia, working class values, art, architecture, organizational life and other cultural expressions in the state.

Outstanding writers, scholars and public figures of Maryland will participate in these sessions as presenters and as panelists.

The "Conference on Maryland—Developing Expressions" is sponsored by the Maryland Humanities Council, the Maryland Arts Council, the Regional Education Service Agency and Frostburg State.

Colman McCarthy, "Liberal Conscience of Washington Post" on Campus April 10

Colman McCarthy, a columnist for The Washington Post characterized as the liberal conscience of the Post by The Washingtonian magazine, lectures on "Making Peace with Nature," on Monday, April 10, at 7:30 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the University Center.

McCarthy has had fan mail from George McGovern and Barry Goldwater. The National Review has called him a "mad-dog liberal," while The Progressive says he is "an active-duty-trouble-maker...constantly reminding us that we could—and should—be doing better." The dictators of the Chilean junta charged that he was an agent of the Kremlin. Patrick Buchanan said "I have never seen a more 100-or 200-proof liberal."

Whether his readers are on the Left, Right or Radical Middle, or their appraisals are on or off the mark, McCarthy and his columns have well-earned visibility. It has been that way since The Washington Post Writers Group began national syndication of the McCarthy column in 1978. It appears in 50 newspapers around the country. For the previous 10 years, McCarthy was a member of the Post's editorial page staff. His columns during that period regularly drew more letters-to-the-editor than other op-ed pieces.

McCarthy's lecture at SSU is part of the on-going Man and Nature series. Like all programs in the series, it is free and open to the public. For more information, call the Public Relations Office at 543-6030.

Comedy of Southern Sisterhood Opens April 28

The Pulitzer Prize winning comedy, Crimes of the Heart, by Beth Henley, which hilariously examines the lives and loves of three distinctly southern sisters during the 1960s in the small Mississippi town of Hazelhurst, opens Friday, April 28, for six performances.

Frank Rich of The New York Times wrote, when Crimes opened in New York in 1980, that Henley is "a beguiling, compassionate writer who is fearless in her insistence on finding comedy in the bizarre."

She hits the motherlode with her three sisters, Lenny and Meg MaGrath, and Babe Botrelle, who are women well-acquainted with catastrophe.

Crimes of the Heart*, the Pultizer Prize winning comedy about three Southern sisters, opens Friday, April 28. Pictured as the three sisters are left to right: Pam Kinnamon as Babe, Heather Campbell as Lenny and Lisa Massi as Meg.

Lenny the eldest, is a self-proclaimed old maid at 30, with "a shrunken ovary" and no men in her life. Having ever had only one romantic experience, which she ran from in fear, Lenny feels she is doomed to spend her life alone. Totally alone, in fact, because her horse, Billy Boy, a pet since childhood, recently passed away; he was struck by a stray bolt of lightening. This is typical of the calamity befalling the young women.

Meg, the sexpot sister, is back from Hollywood where she was a "pill-popping swinger" who suffered a mental breakdown and went to work in a dog food factory. Don't tell Granddaddy, the kind soul who fostered the delusion that Meg could become a singing sensation. After all, he is in the hospital "with blood vessels popping in his brain" and the truth about Meg could send him over the edge.

Then there is Babe. Babe has gotten out of jail on bond, after having just shot her husband, prominent man about town, in the stomach and is hard-pressed to say if she cares whether he lives or dies. The reason for the shooting? Mr. Botrelle recently acquired the knowledge of his wife's liaison with a 15-year old black boy, and upon questionning her about it, Babe "didn't like his looks."

The culmination of these events bring the three sisters back to their childhood home, and are subsequently haunted by the memory of their mother's suicide and the question of why she felt it necessary to hang the family cat along with herself. Living next door is their prim and proper cousin Chick who excessively harasses Meg, wanting to know if Meg will be continuing her affair with the town's married doctor. Doc and Meg's last encounter ended in his being lamed by Hurricane Camille, and Meg's fleeing to the West Coast.

SSU Foundation Faculty Grants

The SSU Foundation, established for the encouragement and enrichment of education and incorporated as a voluntary association of community leaders solely for educational, charitable and scientific purposes at Salisbury State, recently awarded a total of $4,000 to faculty members for various faculty development activities.

The announcement was made by Henry Hanna, III, vice chairman of special events and administration, in the absence of Mrs. Ann Showell, the chairman of the grants committee.

Faculty and staff receiving grants were Johanna W. Laird, Dr. Michael O'Loughlin, Dr. Duane Karna, Ken Basile, Dr. Robert Wesley, Dr. Brennen Taylor, Dr. Gary Harrington and Mary Kane.

Laird, of the Medical Technology Department, requested funds to attract speakers for planned symposiums relating to AIDS and drug abuse testing.

O'Loughlin, of the Political Science Department, received a grant to purchase books for the Interdisciplinary Faculty Reading Group at the University.

Wesley, of the Communications Arts Department, received an award which help support his research, direction and recording of a series of poetry readings to be broadcast on WSCL-FM, the National Public Radio station housed at SSU, and the NPR Network.

Measles Immunization

Once again concerns of measles outbreaks prevail. Measles is a highly communicable disease, and outbreaks have been reported in the college population in schools in our proximity.
An epidemic of measles at SSU could result in isolation or confinement of suspected cases, and interruption of academic, athletic and social events.

Because of the increasing proportion of measles cases occuring among populations previously vaccinated, the American College Health Association and Centers for Disease Control are recommending changes be made in the Prematriculation Immunization Requirement of 1984. The proposal will recommend that live measles vaccination must have been administered in 1980 or later, and at 15 months of age or older to satisfy immunity. This, ultimately, would be a requirement for admission to a college or university.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Department of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or whereever you may reside. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep your first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away from alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit area or a place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you need an escort to or from your car, call the Department of Public Safety, 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Department of Public Safety, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

SSU News Guidelines

The SSU News is a newletter for the campus community published by the Public Relations Office each Thursday during fall and spring semesters, unless noted. The deadline is 4:30 p.m. on the Friday prior to publication.

Any story relating to the life of the campus, whether it be of interest to students, faculty or staff, is welcomed. Newsletter items should be typed and double-spaced.

Because stories are usually proofed and typeset on a first come, first served basis, don't feel you have to wait until Friday to get your article to Public Relations (HH 264).

Because the PR cannot canvas the campus personally, the staff is grateful to those who keep it current on the activities and issues affecting University life. Public Relations looks forward to hearing from you.

Marson Exhibit

A special exhibition and sale of original graphic art will be presented in the Atrium Gallery in the University Center on Monday, April 24, from 11 a.m.-8 p.m. and Tuesday, April 25, from 9 a.m.-5 p.m.

Marson Galleries Ltd. of Baltimore specializes in exhibiting for sale a distinguished collection of original etchings, woodcuts, lithographs, serigraphs and watercolors by old and modern masters. The collection consists of some 500 pieces of original graphic art by leading American, European and Oriental artists.

A representative will be present to discuss the collection and to answer questions about the work, the artists and the various graphic techniques employed.

For more information call the University Center at 543-6100.

Attention May Graduates

Commencement Exercises will be held on Saturday, May 27, at 10 a.m. in the Wicomico Youth & Civic Center. Further information regarding graduation will follow shortly.

Student-Teacher Application Meetings

Students who are eligible to student teach in the fall semester, should follow these steps: contact advisor to determine eligibility and to complete professional program application; and attend one of the meetings on Wednesday, April 19, or Thursday, April 20, both at 3:30 p.m. in Caruthers Hall Auditorium.

Since no other meetings will be held, students must attend a scheduled meeting in order to receive an application for student teaching. Questions about the application process should be directed to Alvah Constantine, director of field experiences, Caruthers Hall, room 148-A.

Mini-Workshops on "Careers in Theatre" and "Storytelling for Children"

On Monday, April 17, Arena Stage actor Henry Strozier will conduct two mini-workshops on "Careers in Theatre" and "Storytelling for Children."

From 10-11 a.m. in Caruthers Auditorium and he will speak on theatre careers including such things as training, resumes (how to write one), and the marketplace in legitimate theatre (New York and regional theatres), plus radio and TV advertising.

At 11 a.m., Stozier will tell three stories to children from surrounding elementrary schools plus University students interested in children's theatre. Stories will include "Wicked John and the Devil" (adapted from Mark Twain), "The Golden Arm," plus a ghost story of his own devising.

This workshop is free and the public is invited.

Election of officers for the 1989-90 year will be at the Monday, April 17, meeting.

Anyone interested in caving the weekend of April 21, please attend the April 17 meeting. Inexperienced cavers are welcome. On Monday, April 24, there will be a rafting video for all those interested in white water rafting on the Cheat River in West Virginia. The trip will take place the weekend of May 5. Cindy Ross will be at the May 1 meeting presenting a slide show on her Pacific Crest Trail hike. All are welcome to attend.

All meetings will be held on Mondays at 6 p.m. in Nanticoke Room A of the University Center. For more information contact Holly McComas at 742-9874.

Personnel Notes

Best wishes to Frances "Boots" Selby, secretary in the Music Department, upon her retirement effective April 1.

Welcome to Keith Ferschweiler who assumed his new duties as assistant director of Personnel on March 27.

Good luck to Lindsey Roseberry, librarian, upon her resignation to accept a position with a library in New York State.

Attention faculty—if you wish to change your pay schedule for the upcoming school year you must notify the Personnel Office in writing prior to the end of the semester. A short note saying you wish to change from 21 to 26 (or vice versa) will suffice.

Orientation Instructors

Faculty and students are invited to make application to become orientation course instructors for fall 1989. The course is team taught by faculty-student teams with faculty receiving a $200 honorarium for their participation and students receiving a $150 honorarium.

The fall course will be taught twice weekly over a five-week period beginning September 6 and concluding October 6 for a total of nine class sessions. It will help new students develop information and knowledge for success in college. The curriculum provided for instructors focusses especially on understanding and capitalizing on individual learning style and on risk management in the university environment.

Instructors for the course are required to participate in a general course information session on Tuesday, May 16, from 3:30 - 5 p.m. and a training session on Friday, September 8, from 3:30 - 9:30 p.m. Faculty and students interested in applying to become orientation course instructors should fill out applications which are available in the Office of Academic Affairs.

Graduate Assistant Position Housing and Residence Life

There is an opening for a graduate assistant position as resident director. A live-in position with on-call duties, the individual would be responsible for educational and administrative elements of Dogwood Village. Dogwood Village houses 140 students in module units of 10 single rooms. The individual would supervise four resident assistants, serve as resource person for Hall Council, issue appropriate sanctions for policy violations and assist residents in resolving personal and academic problems.

Qualifications are formal admission to the University for a master's degree program, strong interpersonal skills and effective supervising style. Residence life experience is a plus. The individual would receive a furnished apartment, utilities included, meal plan, tuition waiver and a stipend of $4,200 per year. Application forms may be obtained from the Office of Graduate and Continuing Education.

Deadline for application is April 25.

Bach's Lunch

"Bach's Lunch," a free noontime recital series at St. Peter's Episcopal Church in Salisbury, continues on consecutive Tuesdays through May 9. The half-hour informal concerts run from 12:15-12:45 p.m. enabling local listeners to attend during their lunch hour.

The April 18 concert features the SSU Collegium, under the direction of Dr. Nancy Cooper. The group will perform excerpts from their April 21 performance of Henry Purcell's opera "Dido and Aeneas."

The April 25 concert will feature Ray Brokamp, piano. Brokamp is the organist at Bethesda United Methodist Church in Salisbury.

The May 2 concert will feature Joyce Phipps, mezzo soprano.

The final concert on May 9 will feature Steve Quillen, bluegrass banjo and guitar.

Further information is available by calling the church office at 742-5118.

Wheelchair Games Here

The eighth annual Maryland Wheelchair Games, which attracts some 200 athletes, will be held May 12-14 at Salisbury State. The event is sponsored by the Maryland Department of Natural Resources (DNR), the Pepsi-Cola Bottling Company of Salisbury and SSU.

The Games are a series of events sanctioned by the National Wheelchair Athletic Association (NWAA), the governing body for wheelchair sports in the U.S. Competition is held in weightlifting, swimming, slalom, track and field, triathalon, table tennis and archery.

Participants in prior years have ranged in age from 6 to "over 65," and both men and women are actively involved. The skill level ranges from absolute beginner to world recordholder. Athletes are grouped according to degree of disability, age and sex and compete only against similarly disabled competitors. The emphasis is on fun, participation and sportsmanship, although many athletes strive to meet qualifying standards for national championships.

Novice athletes are welcome in all events and asistance is given willingly by volunteers and seasoned competitors to the newcomers. Every competitor gets a commemorative T-shirt and medals are awarded to the top three finishers in each event, in each disability category.

Anyone may enter the Maryland Wheelchair Games by completing the entry form, which is available from Elaine Harrington, DNR Office, 122 Arlington Road, Salisbury, MD 21801. NWAA regulations require that all athletes become members of the NWAA and be classified medically. Through the support of the Pepsi-Cola Bottling Company, there is financial assistance available for first-time athletes to join the NWAA at no charge. Additional funds are available to support needy athletes' expenses.

For more information, call Harrington, at 749-2461.

MCEA SUPPORTS SCHOLARSHIP Maryland Classified Employees Association, Chapter 72, of Salisbury State presented a check for $100 to The Lower Shore Committee for Training and Hiring of the Handicapped. This money will go toward a scholarship for a handicapped high school senior who is in financial need to attend SSU. This student should be from the Delmarva Peninsula.

Schultz Workshops

Dr. Barbara Townsend Schultz, an associate professor of education, will present a workshop on how to use Steven Kellogg's books with children for the Delaware Library Assocation on Saturday, April 15. The conference, held at the Sheraton-Brandywine Inn in Wilmington, DE, has as its theme "The Young Reader: the Key to the Future."

The workshop will include flannelboard stories, writing activities and other instructional materials which can spring from the introduction of the Kellogg books in the curriculum. The luncheon speech deals with the joys of reading.

Schultz presented a three-hour workshop for the teachers of Sussex County on March 21. The program was sponsored by the Delaware Teachers Center and the Sussex County Organization for Reading Excellence. Teachers received in-service credit for attending.

The program included choral reading of poems from the 1989 Newbery winner, Joyful Noise: Poems for Two Voices by Paul Fleischman, and the construction of a jumping paper puppet to use with the Caldecott winner, The Song and Dance Man by Karen Ackerman.

Schultz teaches children's literature and elementary communication arts methods at SSU. She is listed in the 1988-89 Who's Who in American Education.

National Figures to Give Seminar on Duck Decoys

Salisbury State and the Ward Foundation are jointly sponsoring a Hunting Decoy Seminar on Saturday, April 15, from 9 a.m. - noon in room 118 of Caruthers Hall.

Samuel Dyke, chairman of the North American Wildfowl Art Museum of the Ward Foundation, and Michael Keating, owner of the Goose Pit Decoy Shop in Easton, MD, will combine their nationally recognized expertise and years of experience collecting decoys to help answer questions in this practical one-day program.

Using slides and actual decoys, the two men will illustrate characteristics of carving and painting that help identify a bird's maker and determine its current worth.

Enrollment in the seminar will be limited to allow maximum opportunity for participants to raise questions and interact directly with the presenters.

The cost of the seminar is $45. Call 543-6170 for more details.

Spring Fling: Kier

Come see Kier in the Gull's Nest on Thursday, April 13, at 8 p.m. He was nominated five times for NACA entertainment awards (the college market Grammies).

Kier does rock impressions including Billy Joel, Bob Dylan, Bruce Springsteen, Sting, James Taylor, John Lemmon, Paul McCartney, Elton John, David Bowie, Jackson Brown, Phil Collins, David Byrne and more.

He also uses a multi-track Beatles medley where he is accompanied by a pre-recorded tape. In his home studio Kier reproduced every note from certain Beatles recordings. You will hear all the voices, all the guitars, all the magic.

Kier has played to thousands at colleges and clubs coast to coast and has shared the stage with such greats as Roy Orbison, Don McLean, Three Dog Night, John Prine, Steppenwolf and Leon Russel. Admission and munchies are free.

Cleary Work Exhibited

An untitled 72 inch by 60 inch oil painting by John Cleary was selected for the 53rd annual National Mid-Year Exhibition.

The Butler Institute of American Art organizes and exhibits this annual summer show of juried entrants and invited artists. This year the jurors are Ruth Meyer, director of the Taft Museum, and Marjorie Talalay, director of the Cleveland Center for Contemporary Art.

Since 1971 Cleary has shown in over 85 shows of which 49 have been juried and invitational shows.

Cleary teaches drawing and painting in the Department of Art.

Quilt Display

What do watercolors and quilts have in common? Both are being featured during April and May at Furnace Town. The works of watercolorist Cathy Gannaway, and a locally made historic quilt will be displayed in the Old Nazareth Church at Furnace Town.

Furnace Town, a 19th century industrial site in the heart of the Pocomoke Forest, is open daily from 11 a.m. - 5 p.m. Admission to the site is $1.50 per adult, 75 cents per child; members of Furnace Town Foundation are admitted free.

Special Decoy Exhibit

An exhibit of old decoys, some which have braved the waters of the Cheaspeake Bay when waterfowling was a way of life, is currently on display at the Ward Museum's Herrington Gallery at Salisbury State.

The exhibit, titled "Collector's Choice," is a selection of decoys from the collection of Samuel H. Dyke, a Salisbury resident and former chairman of the Ward Foundation Board of Trustees.

Among the decoys exhibited are a 1920 goldeneye by Noah Sterling of Crisfield; a 1945 bluebill and a 1948 goldeneye, both carved by the Ward Brothers of Crisfield; and two brants, one by E. Doughty of Hog Island, VA, circa 1890, and the other by J. H. Downes of Townsend, VA, circa 1900.

"Collector's Choice" is the first in a series of special exhibits called "The Eastern Shore Collects..." which will feature selected wildfowl art from area collectors. The current exhibit will be at the Herrington Gallery until June. The gallery is open during museum hours, Tuesday-Saturday, 10 a.m-5 p.m., and Sunday, 1-5 p.m.

Ward Foundation members are invited to an opening reception for "Collector's Choice" on Saturday, April 8, from 7-9 p.m. in the Social Room of Holloway Hall. For more information on this exhibit or other Ward Foundation programs, contact the Ward Foundation at 742-4988.

SSU Invited to Churchill Presentation

James Humes, called one of this country's greatest speakers by the Christian Science Monitor, will present a one-man show on Winston Churchill on Friday, May 5, at 1 p.m. at the Cambridge South Dorchester High School.

The students, faculty and staff of Salisbury State are invited to attend this one-hour performance free of charge.

Sponsored by the Grand National Waterfowl Hunt, Humes's prsentation of one of the foremost speakers and political leaders of this century has won critical plaudits, and Humes has appeared as Churchill on PBS.

A speechwriter to three presidents, Humes has written 12 books, eight on speaking, and lectured at universities around the world including the University of Virginia Law School and the Harvard Business School. The United States Information Agency, which twice has sent Humes on speaking tours overseas, has said that he is "the finest speaker in the history of their lecture programs" abroad.

For more information, contact Kathy Hubbard at Ladd Johnson Realtors in Cambridge at (301) 228-1102.

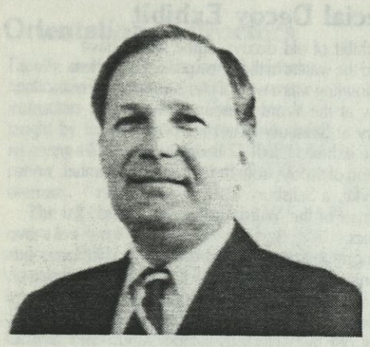
In an effort to prevent a measles epidemic the Health Center staff, in conjunction with the Wicomico County Health Department, will be conducting free immunization clinics this semester. (Many schools charge a fee of $20 to $36.) The dates will be Monday, May 1, in conjunction with Wellness Day; location to be announced soon.

Please, know your immune status. Were you vaccinated after 15 months of age—Do you have documentation of the same? You should seek this information from family or physician records or from the Health Center records.

The Health Center staff is making every attempt possible to maintain immunity status on each student—this is virtually impossible without students' help.

Contact the Health Center at 543-6262 for additional information.



Raymond A. Mason

Legg Mason CEO Next Great Leader

Raymond A. (Chip) Mason, chairman, president and chief executive officer of Legg Mason, Inc., one of the country's biggest investment firms, discusses his company and industry in the Great Leader Lecture Series.

Sponsored by the Perdue School of Business, Mason's presentation is on Monday, April 17, at noon in the Wicomico Room of the University Center. It is free and open to the public.

Mason founded Mason & Company in 1962, three years after graduating from the College of William and Mary. In 1970 Mason and Company merged with Legg & Company, founded in Baltimore in 1899. Mason then became chief executive officer of the combined firm in 1975.

For the 12 months ended March 31, 1988, Legg Mason had revenues of $215,571,000 and net income of $7,576,000. Headquartered in Baltimore, Legg Mason is the 12th largest domestic retail brokerage firm with 738 representatives throughout the south and mid-Atlantic. It is also a major investment manager, with mutual funds and investment advisory subsidiaries which manage more than $5 billion of equity and fixed-income assets for clients.

Mason is a director and immediate past president of the Board of Directors of the Securities Industries Association and is a former chairman of the Board of Governors of the National Association of Securities Dealers.

He is a trustee of Johns Hopkins University, Johns Hopkins Hospital and Johns Hopkins Health System Corporation. He is a member of the Board of the Greater Baltimore Committee, the National Aquarium and a number of other community and civic organizations. In 1985 he was chairman of the United Way of Central Maryland Campaign.

'Dido and Aeneas' To Be Presented

Henry Purcell's "Dido and Aeneas" will be performed in concert version on Friday, April 21, at 8 p.m. in Caruthers Auditorium. The production is a collaborative venture within the Music Department.

"Dido and Aeneas" tells the story of the ill-fated romance from Virgil's Aeneid and is the only opera written by Purcell. It includes a variety of music, from instrumental dances to English madrigals to melancholy solo songs. "Dido's Lament" is the best-known aria from the opera and is among the greatest arias in the entire operatic literature.

This concert version, which means it will be sung not staged with costumes or sets, will feature Dr. Duane Karna as Aeneas and Katherine Turner as Dido. Karna and Turner are both voice professors at Salisbury State. The chorus will be sung by the SSU Collegium, and instrumental support will be provided by a string ensemble from the Salisbury Symphony Orchestra.

Harpsichordist and musical director for the opera will be Dr. Nancy Cooper of the music faculty and director of the Collegium.

This concert is free and the public is invited. For more information call the Music Department at 543-6385.

Grady Armstrong, chair of the Leisure Studies Department, and coordinator of this year's Maryland Wheelchair Games held at SSU May 12-14, receives a $2,000 gift from Colleen Richardson of Games sponsor Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co. of Salisbury.

Out of such catastrophe, Henley evokes laughter and reaffirmation. "Miss Henley's heart belongs to the south of Flannery O'Conner and Eudora Welty," said Rich, and Crimes of the Heart is a "rollicking, topsy-turvy madhouse of a play."

A production of Sophanes, the student theatre club at SSU, Crimes is directed by Craig Pettinati, a senior who will be attending graduate school at Florida State University this fall. Playing the three sisters are Heather Campbell as Lenny; Lisa Massi as Meg; and Pam Kinnamon as Babe. Robyn Wesley is Chick. David Cherry and Stephen Collins are the men in their lives.

Performances are at 8 p.m. April 28,29 and May 4,5, and 6, with a 2 p.m. matinee on Sunday, April 30. Tickets are $4; $3 for students and senior citizens. Group discounts are available. The performance is at Holloway Hall on stage. For reservations or information call the theatre box office at 543-6228.

Taylor, of the Department of Social Work, was awarded a grant to help in his research on helping the mentally ill.

Harrington, of the English Department, was granted funds to help with the publishing of his book, Faulkner's Fables of Creativity.

Mary Kane, of the Nursing Department, was awarded a grant to attend the National Symposium for Advanced Psychiatric Nurses.

Karna, of the Music Department, used his award for travel expenses incurred when he participated as a panelist at the Internal Exchange Roundtable at the American Choral Directors Association National Conference in Louisville, KY, in March.

Basile, director of Development at WSCL-FM, was awarded a grant to cover expenses for an exchange program with the People's Republic of China. Personnel from WSCL and a station in China would trade places in July, enabling WSCL to do a series of programs about life in China while their Chinese colleagues would gain a better understanding of life on Delmarva and the U.S.

This fiscal year, according to Bob Gearhart, executive director of the Foundation, $10,000 will be given to faculty at the University for deserving activities and projects.

Seidel Endows New Teaching Scholarships

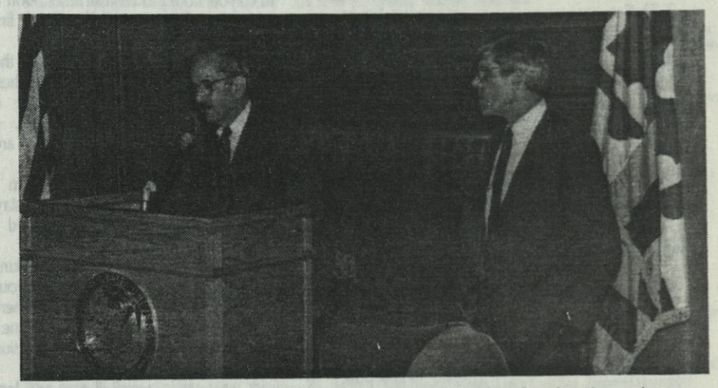
Salisbury businessman and civic leader Samuel W. Seidel has donated $50,000 to the Salisbury State University Foundation to establish new scholarships for future teachers.

"Over the years Sam Seidel has given of himself unstintingly to make SSU the best it can be. This latest contribution by him in the form of a $50,000 endowment is clear evidence of his unflagging commitment to ensure an educated citizenry," said President Thomas E. Bellavance.

Seidel, at ceremonies announcing the gift, said, "We want the brightest kids coming across the stage at their high school graduation to choose teaching as a career and Salisbury State as their college."

According to an agreement between the Foundation and Seidel, the program officially begins in September when the first freshman student will enter the School of Education and Professional Studies as a Seidel Scholar. That student will be named in a few weeks—by May 1—and receive annually a stipend of $1,000 through the student's four years.

Each subsequent fall a Seidel Scholar shall be named until they represent each class year. Seidel said he envisions the scholarships ultimately ranging "from the freshman year to the graduate student."



Samuel W. Seidel announced his $50,000 endowment of scholarships for education majors.

Seidel always has had a keen interest in public school education. Previously, he endowed a nursing scholarship at SSU in honor of

Danceteller Presents Concert About AIDS on May 2

Before Forever, a combination work of theatre, dance and music about people living with AIDS, will be performed by the Philadelphia-based touring dance company, Danceteller, on Tuesday, May 2, at 8 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the University Center.

Before Forever was collaboratively created by artistic director/choreographer Trina Collins, playwright Robert Barnett and composer Micki Rossi. As part of the creative process for the work, Barnett interviewed some 18 individuals with AIDS living in the Delaware Valley. All of the words in Before Forever, including those spoken by the dancers, were selected from those interviews. On other occasions, the actual words of the person with AIDS is heard on the soundtrack while the dancers are dancing.

Before Forever is 81 minutes long and is performed in two acts. The six dancers of the company perform the work, portraying a variety of different roles.

Danceteller performers are hired by national audition and are expected to be beautiful dancers as well as credible actors and actresses.

Further information is available by calling the church office at 742-5118.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Department of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or whereever you may reside. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep your first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away from alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit area or a place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.

SSU News Guidelines

The SSU News is a newletter for the campus community published by the Public Relations Office each Thursday during fall and spring semesters, unless noted. The deadline is 4:30 p.m. on the Friday prior to publication.

Any story relating to the life of the campus, whether it be of interest to students, faculty or staff, is welcomed. Newsletter items should be typed and double-spaced.

Because stories are usually proofed and typeset on a first come, first served basis, don't feel you have to wait until Friday to get your article to Public Relations (HH 264).

Because the PR cannot canvas the campus personally, the staff is grateful to those who keep it current on the activities and issues affecting University life. Public Relations looks forward to hearing from you.

Marson Exhibit

A special exhibition and sale of original graphic art will be presented in the Atrium Gallery in the University Center on Monday, April 24, from 11 a.m.-8 p.m. and Tuesday, April 25, from 9 a.m.-5 p.m.

Marson Galleries Ltd. of Baltimore specializes in exhibiting for sale a distinguished collection of original etchings, woodcuts, lithographs, serigraphs and watercolors by old and modern masters. The collection consists of some 500 pieces of original graphic art by leading American, European and Oriental artists.

A representative will be present to discuss the collection and to answer questions about the work, the artists and the various graphic techniques employed.

For more information call the University Center at 543-6100.

This scholarship is not based on financial need, so all interested students should apply. The grant is up to $5,000 per academic year. Deadline for applications is May 1.

MCEA Bus Trip

MCEA Chapter No. 72 is going to Atlantic City, NJ, on Saturday, June 3. The bus leaves from Maggs Gym at 7 a.m. and returns at 9:30 p.m. that same evening.

The cost to MCEA chapter members is $7, non-members $17. Participants receive $9 in coins and a $5 deferred voucher at the casino.

"It is guaranteed to be a fun-filled trip," said Barbara Keene. Call her at 543-6350 to reserve a seat. Food and beverages are allowed on this bus.

Wheelchair Games Here

The eighth annual Maryland Wheelchair Games, which attracts some 200 athletes, will be held May 12-14 at Salisbury State. The event is sponsored by the Maryland Department of Natural Resources (DNR), the Pepsi-Cola Bottling Company of Salisbury and SSU.

The Games are a series of events sanctioned by the National Wheelchair Athletic Association (NWAA), the governing body for wheelchair sports in the U.S. Competition is held in weightlifting, swimming, slalom, track and field, triathalon, table tennis and archery.

Participants in prior years have ranged in age from 6 to "over 65," and both men and women are actively involved. The skill level ranges from absolute beginner to world recordholder. Athletes are grouped according to degree of disability, age and sex and compete only against similarly disabled competitors. The emphasis is on fun, participation and sportsmanship, although many athletes strive to meet qualifying standards for national championships.

Novice athletes are welcome in all events and asistance is given willingly by volunteers and seasoned competitors to the newcomers. Every competitor gets a commemorative T-shirt and medals are awarded to the top three finishers in each event, in each disability category.

Anyone may enter the Maryland Wheelchair Games by completing the entry form, which is available from Elaine Harrington, DNR Office, 122 Arlington Road, Salisbury, MD 21801. NWAA regulations require that all athletes become members of the NWAA and be classified medically. Through the support of the Pepsi-Cola Bottling Company, there is financial assistance available for first-time athletes to join the NWAA at no charge. Additional funds are available to support needy athletes' expenses.

For more information, call Harrington, at 749-2461.

Wellness Day May 1

The University is planning its fifth annual Wellness Day on Monday, May 1, from 10 a.m. - 3 p.m. The festival will be held either in Red Square, which is in front of Caruthers Hall, or on University Hill, behind the University Center. The rain date is Monday, May 8. The Wellness Day Festival focuses on health and fitness promotion, and includes both campus and community participation.

For more information contact Cathy Lynch at 543-6209 or John Fields at 543-6080.

'Dido and Aeneas' To Be Presented

Henry Purcell's "Dido and Aeneas" will be performed in concert version on Friday, April 21, at 8 p.m. in Caruthers Auditorium. The production is a collaborative venture within the Music Department.

"Dido and Aeneas" tells the story of the ill-fated romance from Virgil's Aeneid and is the only opera written by Purcell. It includes a variety of music, from instrumental dances to English madrigals to melancholy solo songs. "Dido's Lament" is the best-known aria from the opera and is among the greatest arias in the entire operatic literature.

This concert version, which means it will be sung not staged with costumes or sets, will feature Dr. Duane Karna as Aeneas and Katherine Turner as Dido. Karna and Turner are both voice professors at Salisbury State. The chorus will be sung by the SSU Collegium, and instrumental support will be provided by a string ensemble from the Salisbury Symphony Orchestra.

Harpsichordist and musical director for the opera will be Dr. Nancy Cooper of the music faculty and director of the Collegium.

This concert is free and the public is invited. For more information call the Music Department at 543-6385.

Sports by Barry Packer

With only two sports remaining to have the champion crowned, it looks as though the Eastern States Athletic Conference All-Sports Trophy will remain on the Eastern Shore for at least a second year.

Dean Burroughs's tennis team brought the Gulls one step closer, as it dominated the conference championships at Frostburg on Saturday, winning all three singles flights—Mark Buzzell, Matt Herman and David Hardesty—and both doubles seeds—Mike Horvath and Tre Moore, and Rich Benitez and John Trimp.

That became the Gulls third ESAC title, winning volleyball and field hockey in the fall. Allentown has won soccer and women's basketball, while Shenandoah won men's basketball.

Essentially, all the Gulls have to do is win one out of baseball and softball. And, there is no saying that the Gulls won't win both.

Amongst the raindrops, Dawn McCrumb's softball team and Deane Deshon's baseball team have a combined 22-8 record.

At 12-4, the softball team is ranked fourth in the region, 14th in the country, and at 4-0 in the conference will host the Championship 2 out of 3 series, April 29 and 30. Last year the Gulls lost the one-game playoff at Marywood.

The baseball team is now 10-4 and 3-9 in the Conference. But, after winning the ESAC title here last year, the 1989 home field advantage goes to the Northern Division Champion.

With four ESAC banners hanging in Maggs from last year, plus the All-Sports Cup in the Trophy Case, there is no doubt that Maggs could take on that Montreal Forum look, where the Canadians won Stanley Cup after Stanley Cup. Yet, one cup stayed while banners were constantly added ot the rafters. Just like Maggs.

Orientation Instructors Needed

Faculty and students are invited to make application to become orientation course instructors for fall 1989. The course is team taught by faculty-student teams with faculty receiving a $200 honorarium for their participation and students receiving a $150 honorarium.

The fall course will be taught twice weekly over a five-week period beginning September 6 and concluding October 6 for a total of nine class sessions. It will help new students develop information and knowledge for success in college. The curriculum provided for instructors focusses especially on understanding and capitalizing on individual learning style and on risk management in the university environment.

Instructors for the course are required to participate in a general course information session on Tuesday, May 16, from 3:30 - 5 p.m. and a training session on Friday, September 8, from 3:30 - 9:30 p.m. Faculty and students interested in applying to become orientation course instructors should fill out applications which are available in the Office of Academic Affairs.

Graduate Assistant Position Housing and Residence Life

There is an opening for a graduate assistant position as resident director. A live-in position with on-call duties, the individual would be responsible for educational and administrative elements of Dogwood Village. Dogwood Village houses 140 students in module units of 10 single rooms. The individual would supervise four resident assistants, serve as resource person for Hall Council, issue appropriate sanctions for policy violations and assist residents in resolving personal and academic problems.

Qualifications are formal admission to the University for a master's degree program, strong interpersonal skills and effective supervising style. Residence life experience is a plus. The individual would receive a furnished apartment, utilities included, meal plan, tuition waiver and a stipend of $4,200 per year. Application forms may be obtained from the Office of Graduate and Continuing Education.

Deadline for application is April 25.

Khazeh, Decker Give Presentations

Dr. K. Khazeh, assistant professor of finance in the Perdue School of Business recently presented a paper at the meeting of the Northeast Decision Sciences Institute in Baltimore.

The paper, "Home Buyers' Preferred Mortgage Characteristics," was co-authored by Dr. Wayne H. Decker, associate professor of management.

Findings were that, although required by recently enacted legislation, disclosure of historical adjustable interest rate fluctuations did not influence preference for adjustable-rate versus fixed-rate mortgages. Also, buyers selecting a mortgage company recommended by their real estate agent were less satisfied with the company than were persons choosing the company for other reasons, such as low interest rates or the company's reputation.

In March Decker presented a paper at the meeting of the Southwest Decision Sciences Institute in New Orleans. In "Observers' Impressions of Professors and Deans Following Positive and Negative Promotion Decisions: Two Experiments," he found that a negative promotion decision was harmful to outside observers' impressions of both subordinates and superiors.

Palmer Joins Select Group to Study Columbus

William E. Palmer, associate professor of Spanish, has been chosen to participate in the 1989 Summer Institute on "The Intellectual World of Christopher Columbus."

The Institute is sponsored by the National Endowment for the Humanities and will be held at the University of California, Los Angeles (UCLA).

The five-week program will investigate the multiple aspects of Columbus' world and seek to expand understanding of Columbus and his monumental discovery.

Only 25 scholars from universities and colleges throughout the U.S. were accepted to the Institute.

The Institute is part of the UCLA 1992 Quincentenary Programs developed to promote and coordinate scholarly, cultural and public programs related to the observance of the 500th anniversary of the discovery of the New World.

Palmer teaches courses on Spanish culture and civilization at Salisbury State and has visited Palos de la Frontera, the little river town in Spain from which Columbus launched his voyage that changed the course of history.

Reggae Picnic

"Uprising," a Baltimore based reggae band and winner of the 1985 Reggae Festival Competition for the Baltimore/Washington area, will play in front of the dining hall from 3 - 7 p.m. on Wednesday, May 3. Exciting renditions of many well known and popular reggae numbers including songs by Bob Marley, Peter Tosh, Black Uhuru—only to name a few—will be played. Uprising's collection of originals are high-spirited, poetic, and musical combined with a deep sense of spiritual awareness, according to the fans. The rain location is the Wicomico Room of the University Center from 7:30 - 11:30 p.m.

Med Tech, Respiratory Therapy Conduct High School Saturday Sessions

In collaboration with the Maryland Science Center in Baltimore, three faculty members of the School of Nursing and Health Sciences recently conducted an intensive study of medical technology as it applies to the fields of laboratory science and respiratory science.

Sidney Schneider, an assistant professor of respiratory therapy, and Cindy Cowall and Diane Hayes, both instructors of Medical Technology, met with high school juniors and seniors for the Saturday morning sessions.

Students are selected for the seminars following recommendation by their high school counselors. They have shown both strong interest and performance in their school science curriculum. Student evaluation following the sessions indicated that the participants found the classes informative and "exactly what I was looking for" in terms of an introduction into the real world of medical technology.

Medical technology, as presented to the students, included the broad field of laboratory science and the science of respiratory therapy. Hayes and Cowall presented an expanded introduction to laboratory science, encouraging the students to think of medical technology as that branch of science which deals with not only hospital laboratory sciences, but also any branch of laboratory science.

For example, students generated an extensive list of their perception of laboratory science career, and covered a myriad of possibilities including AIDS research, transfusion medicine, pharmaceutical research and development, forensic laboratory science, pre-medicine and pre-dentistry.

Schneider presented respiratory therapy as an applied science relating to direct patient care as well as the laboratory technology associated with this care. He discussed newborn and pediatric respiratory care with particular emphasis on pregnancy and childbirth as they relate to the relative risk of respiratory problems in the newborn. He also discussed adult respiratory care situations with intensive discussion of trauma and accident victims and their special respiratory care needs.

Specific topics covered during the session included drug screening, leukemias, blood-typing, sickle-cell anemia, pediatric critical care, cardiopulmonary diagnostic techniques and an in-depth discussion of AIDS. Activities utilized to explore these areas of medicine included a tour of the intensive care unit and the laboratory at Peninsula General Hospital Medical Center, class lecture and discussion of ethical issues concerning AIDS and drug testing and direct student participation in the student laboratory within the School of Nursing and Health Sciences.

During the laboratory exercises, students operated respiratory ventilators, typed and performed microscopic examination of their blood, examined prepared smears of blood from patients with sickle-cell anemia and performed a test for "strep" throat.

All three faculty enjoyed working with bright, young high school students and look forward to the seminars in spring 1990. These seminars provide students with a window through which to view a representative picture of careers associated with science and medicine.

Students who may be interested in these seminars should seek more information through their school guidance counselors, or call the Medical Technology Department at 543-6331.

John Moll: Illustrator of Life on the Eastern Shore

It was the love of boats and the waterways of the Eastern Shore that drew John Moll and his wife, Betty, to Oxford, MD, just after the end of the second world war. For over forty years that love has been the inspiration for Moll's life work—painting and drawing life along the Chesapeake Bay. Opening May 12, 13, and 14, as part of the Artsfest in Easton, the Talbot County Historical Society, the Associated Charities of the Chesapeake and the Academy of Arts, will bring together over 40 of Mr. Moll's paintings, drawings, and lithographs from a variety of local collections. These works will trace John Moll's development as one of the area's most popular artists known for his ability to capture the essence of life on the Eastern Shore.

The celebration of John Moll's work will continue through September 15 in the Museum Building of the Talbot County Historical Soceity at 25 South Washington Street, Easton. Champagne receptions are planned for Friday and Saturday, May 12 and 13, from 5:30-8 p.m., The museum will be open Saturday and Sunday from 10-4 p.m., Artsfest weekend.

SSU Students Produce, Perform Crimes

The Salisbury State University production of Crimes of the Heart by Beth Henley, a play about three southern sisters with a bent for comic catastrophe, opens April 28 for six performances on stage in Holloway Hall.

Crimes of the Heart won the Pulitzer Prize for Drama in 1981 and had successful runs off and on Broadway. Sophanes, the student theatre club, is producing the SSU premiere.

David Cherry, a junior majoring in communication arts, plays the role of a young lawyer in love with Babe, an unhappy southern belle who shoots her husband.

Babe is portrayed by Pam Kinnamon, a senior majoring in music who has performed with the Ocean City Boardwalk Cabaret.

Robyn Wesley plays the role of Chick Boyle, the nosy cousin of the MaGrath sisters. She is a senior majoring in philosophy.

Lisa Massi is appearing as Meg MaGrath, a would-be country singer and Babe's older sister. Massi is a junior majoring in leisure studies and minoring in marketing.

Heather Campbell, a freshman majoring in communication arts, plays the role of Lenny MaGrath, the matronly older sister who takes care of everyone but herself.

The role of Dr. Porter, one of Meg's old flames, is played by Stephen Collins, a junior majoring in communication arts.

Lauren Selby, a sophomore also majoring in communication arts, is stage manager.

Craig Pettinati, a senior business major, directs. Set design is by Tom Godwin; lighting design by Jeffrey Patterson; and costumes by Lynda Robbins, all communication arts majors.

Performances are at 8 p.m., April 28, 29 and May 4, 5, and 6, with a 2 p.m. matinee on Sunday, April 30. Admission is free to SSU students, faculty and staff. For reservations or information call the theatre box office at 543-6228.

Carving Competition in O.C. April 28-30

Ocean City will become the carving capital of the world later this month when the Ward Foundation's Annual World Championship Wildfowl Carving Competition comes to the Ocean City Convention Center on April 28, 29 and 30.

Regarded as the most prestigious wildfowl carving competition in the world, the Ward World Championship brings together carvers from all over the globe who compete for ribbons and cash awards totaling $65,000. It's expected that as many as 1,000 carvers will enter more than 2,000 carvings this year.

Visitors also can browse among the 130 retailers selling wildfowl related gifts or purchase a special carving during the auction on Sunday afternoon.

This year's competition will be even more exciting as the Ward Foundation kicks off a $6-million campaign to build a 35,000 square foot museum. The proposed facility will house an expanded museum, an education center and administrative offices.

Admission to the competition is $5 for adults, $4 for seniors, $3 for students and free for children 12 and under. Show hours are Friday, April 28, and Saturday, April 29, from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., and Sunday, April 30, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Careers in the Outdoors

Election of officers for the 1989-90 year will be at the Monday, April 17, meeting.

Anyone interested in caving the weekend of April 21, please attend the April 17 meeting. Inexperienced cavers are welcome. On Monday, April 24, there will be a rafting video for all those interested in white water rafting on the Cheat River in West Virginia. The trip will take place the weekend of May 5. Cindy Ross will be at the May 1 meeting presenting a slide show on her Pacific Crest Trail hike. All are welcome to attend.

All meetings will be held on Mondays at 6 p.m. in Nanticoke Room A of the University Center. For more information contact Holly McComas at 742-9874.

his wife, Marilyn, a registered nurse. For two years he served as president of the SSU Foundation Board. During those years the two largest gifts ever given to Salisbury State, the multimillion dollar Perdue and Henson endowments, were received and "...much credit belongs to Sam Seidel," said Robert Gearhart, executive director of the Foundation.

Seidel, who attended Salisbury State, taught and coached at Wicomico High School after World War II. In 1951 he coached the U.S. All Star basketball team on its South American tour. "A very good year," he said with a smile.

In 1952 he went into the insurance business and established three companies which became the largest privately owned insurance operation in Maryland. Last year he sold the business to British International Insurance Co., but continues as president.

Throughout his professional career Seidel has been a popular public figure. "He always has been known as a friend of the common man," said a colleague. For 20 years Seidel was Salisbury City Councilman and received numerous awards including the Martin Luther King Service Award, the Brotherhood Award from the National Council of Christians and Jews, the Rotary Four-Way Test Award and the Salisbury State Distinguished Alumni Award.

"It's great what's happened at Salisbury State," Seidel said, praising the better students and more highly degreed faculty the institution is attracting. "I'm very proud to be a little part of that...through the Foundation."

"We at the University are not only appreciative of this magnificent gift but feel deeply honored by Mr. Seidel's endorsement of our past efforts," Dr. Bellavance said.

Children's Activities for Salisbury Festival

"Salisbury Stardate 54327.87," otherwise known on earthly calendars as Saturday, May 6, the Salisbury Festival, will provide children with out of this world experiences. Children will be able to see a real astronaut's flight suit, eat astronaut ice cream, make their own space-"crafts," have their faces painted to look like monsters and create their own unique intergalatic flag. Visits from E.T. and Yoda, who will beam down to Salisbury to meet the children and have their pictures taken with any willing volunteers, will add to the special nature of the day's events.

"Salisbury Stardate 54327.87" is the children's corner of the Salisbury Festival where hands-on arts and craft activities and performers have been lined up especially for the children's enjoyment. From 10 a.m.-4 p.m., children will be able to make their space dreams come true in the Plaza Garden and Newtowne Theatre areas of the Downtown Salisbury Plaza. NASA's Wallops Island Flight Facility is assisting the Arts Council and will have an exhibit on outer space and NASA personnel on hand to answer any questions.

For more information contact the Arts Council at 543-ARTS.

Arts and Crafts Booth at Salisbury Festival '89

On Saturday, May 6, the Salisbury Festival '89 will be in full swing all day long throughout downtown Salisbury, Riverwalk Park and Marina areas. Among the arts performances, races, games, rides and food will be arts and crafts booths on the courthouse lawn and on Main Street. These exhibits are sponsored by the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council.

"We were delighted with all the entries we've received this year. We even had to expand the number of booth spaces because of all of the new entries we've received," says, Davina Grace Hill, executive director of the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council. In addition to the arts and crafts exhibits, the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council is also coordinating the arts performances at Government Plaza and Flag Plaza and the "Salisbury Stardate 54327.87" children's "space-crafts" area.

For more information regarding the Salisbury Festival, please call the Arts Council at 543-ARTS or the Chamber of Commerce at 749-0144.

Whitehead Talks on Self-Deception

Dr. George Whitehead, professor and chair of the Psychology Department, recently presented a paper at the 60th annual meeting of the Eastern Psychological Association in Boston, MA.

Whitehead's paper was titled "The Use of Consensus-Raising Excuses as a Function of the Manipulation of Publicness: The Role of Expectations of Future Interaction." This paper continued his work on self-deception and examined when people deceive themselves in public.

His earlier work found that people deceive themselves in private and was published in an article in the Journal of Personality and in a chapter in the book, Public Self and Private Self.

Linda Cockey

Cockey Recital April 30

Linda Cockey, professor of piano at Salisbury State, will perform in a recital featuring a selection of Baroque, Classical, Romantic and Neo-classical pieces, at 2 p.m. on Sunday, April 30, in the Wicomico Room of the University Center.

The featured work of the performance is the Sonata in d minor-Opus 14 by Sergei Prokofieff. Written in 1912, this piece represented a giant step forward in Russian piano music with its lively rhythmic structure and vigorous percussiveness. "This piece is romantic, Russian," Cockey said in a recent interview. "It has every part of Russia in it."

The first movement (Allegro ma non Troppo) has many themes. "It's very dramatic and bold," Cockey described, "with a war-like sadness. The second movement (Scherzo) feels like a city street. You can almost hear the horses, the confusion of carriages and wagons, and small children darting in and out.

"The third movement (Andante) makes me think of the movie Dr. Zhivago...the end of the Revolution, soldiers and followers walking back from the front, but not really knowing where to go. There's a sense of hopelessness that pervades the whole movement."

Prokofieff was considered a very "brassy" piano player. He somewhat shocked the St. Petersburg Conservatory with his proclamation that "the piano is a percussion instrument—it was not made to sing."

There's something for everybody in this piece," Cockey said. "It really keeps you on the edge of your seat."

The program on Sunday afternoon will open with two Sonatas by Domenico Scarlatti. "Both pieces are written in major keys," Cockey noted, "with fanfares, horn calls and processionals. They are good, bright opening pieces."

The Beethoven Sonata No. 27 in e minor, Opus 90, was written in 1814, during Beethoven's "late period." "It is rhetorical, operatic, moody, nearly romantic. There is plenty of freedom for interpretation, and it includes some of the most difficult passages of the later sonatas," said Cockey.

As a contrast to the Beethoven, Cockey chose a Sonatine by Maurice Ravel. The piece was submitted by Ravel in a composition contest. Using the "flat-fingered" hand position, the pianist must almost choreograph the hands in order to accomplish the difficult fingering. Written at the height of the Impressionist Movement, "this piece has flashes of color like a Monet painting," said Cockey.

Franz Schubert, Robert Schumann and Felix Mendelsohn are also featured in this program. Cockey selected pieces that are "typical" of each composer, giving the audience a beautiful sampler to enjoy, she said.

Cockey has a master's in music theory from Temple University. She is working on her Doctor of Musical Arts in Piano at Catholic University in Washington, D.C.

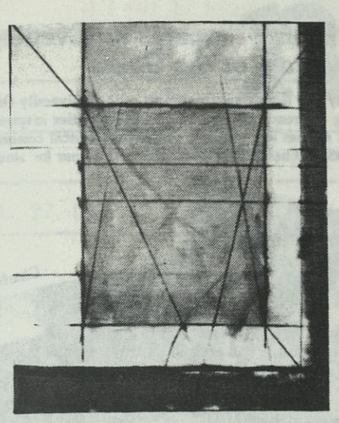
Faculty Support PGHMC

Faculty members from each department of the School of Nursing and Health Sciences participated in the Health Fair sponsored by Peninsula General Hospital Medical Center on March 31.

One of the hallmarks of the faculty in this school is their commitment to public service, especially within their professional capacity," said Dr. Elizabeth Barfield, dean of the school. "The community is very supportive of the University; the faculty, in turn, want to return this support for the well-being of the people in this area."

Johanna Laird, Diane Hayes and Cindy Cowall from the Department of Medical Technology, a discipline of laboratory science, all participated in the collection of blood chemistries from participants of the Health Fair. Theodore Wiberg, chair of the Respiratory Therapy Department, served as consultant in the pulmonary function area of the fair to those persons who demonstrated a need for further evaluation.

From the Department of Nursing, Nancy Hoffmann and Phyllis Banks served to coordinate the efforts of both faculty and nursing students in several areas. While nursing students aided in the screening process for height and weight, vision and blood pressure, faculty served as counselors and additional examiners for those who might need additional testing. These faculty were Lisa Seldomridge, Katie Kolls, Shielda Rodgers, Edna Stilwell, Cathy Walsh and Tereza Sidrak. All faculty participated on a voluntary basis for a total of some 35 community service hours.



Untitled work by John Cleary

Cleary Work Exhibited

An untitled 72 inch by 60 inch oil painting by John Cleary was selected for the 53rd annual National Mid-Year Exhibition.

The Butler Institute of American Art in Youngstown, OH, organizes and exhibits this annual summer show of juried entrants and invited artists. This year the jurors are Ruth Meyer, director of the Taft Museum, and Marjorie Talalay, director of the Cleveland Center for Contemporary Art.

This painting marks a departure from Cleary's work produced during 1986-87. Said the artist, "It has been noted that there is a resemblance to R. Diebenkorn's work in particular those works considered part of his Ocean Park series of paintings.

"At a cursory glance it may appear to share more than a few relationships, but in review it is apparent that the divisions in Diebenkorn's work demarcates and defines space. In discussing color one must note the relationships to nature are obvious.

"In this painting however, the space defined is that of a separate space: center opposed to the sides, top and bottom. It is also apparent that the color and color relationships are not of nature but are for purposes of definition and expression."

Since 1971 Cleary has shown in over 85 shows of which 49 have been juried and invitational shows.

Cleary teaches drawing and painting in the Department of Art.

Schultz Published in Dragon Lode

The Dragon Lode, a publication of the International Reading Association, has published as the lead article in the winter 1989 issue "Using Children's Literature to Encourage Writing," an article written by Dr. Barbara Townsend Schultz of the School of Education and Professional Studies.

The article deals with specific books which can be used to stimulate writing by children and includes writing done by children in the area. It includes letter writing, recipe writing and book imitation. Her work has been incorporated into the children's literature course at the University of Wisconsin.

Schultz has been associate professor of education for the past 16 years and is listed in the 1988-89 Who's Who in American Education. She teaches children's literature and elementary communication arts methods.

SSU Poets Explore Our Relationship To Nature

Three poets, Sandra Hart Christian, Deborah Elderice Creasy and Jon Davis, will read their own poems on nature and the human relationship with nature, on Wednesday, April 26, at 7:30 p.m. in the Social Room of Holloway Hall at Salisbury State University.

Davis, who will serve as moderator for the reading, said, "In the Tao Te Ching, Lao Tzu speaks of the essential mystery and the limitations of language, saying, The Tao that can be told is not the eternal Tao." Therein lies the nature poet's' task: to listen and hear, to speak the unspeakable. We don't promise any revelations, but we'll read and discuss our attempts to allow nature to speak in and through our poems."

Currently visiting assistant professor at SSU, Davis received both his Bachelor of Art and Master of Fine Arts from the University of Montana. Since graduating in 1985, he's received fellowships from the National Endowment for the Arts and The Fine Arts Work Center, as well as a General Electric Younger Writers Award and a Lavan Younger Poets Award from the Academy of American Poets. He has had two collections of poetry published, West of New England (U. of Montana, 1983) and Dangerous Amusements (Ontario Review Press, 1987).

Christian, who makes her home in Salisbury, is currently completing Master of Arts in English/Creative Writing at Ohio University. She graduated from Salisbury State with a B.A. in English in 1987. Her poems have appeared in The Memphis State Review, Tar River Poetry and Poetry Miscellany. She'll read from the book length manuscript of poems she is currently assembling.

Creasy, a Salisbury native who teaches in the English Department at SSU, received her B.A. from SSU in 1981, her M.A. in 1988. While a student, she received both the English Department and the Lewis Hess Creative Writing Awards. Her poems have appeared in Tar River Poetry and Raccoon.

The reading, which is part of the on-going Man and Nature Series at SSU, is free and open to the public. For more information call the SSU Public Relations Office at (301) 543-6030.

Play The Night Thoreau Spent In Jail April 24 in Caruthers

In 1846 Henry David Thoreau, American poet, philosopher and naturalist, refused to pay his income tax in protest of America's involvement in the Mexican War. What his contemporaries in Concord, MA, viewed as another rebellious act of a nonconformist became the cornerstone of the nonviolent movements of Ghandi and Martin Luther King, Jr.

The one night Thoreau spent in jail helped shape the political consciousness of our adolescent country, and continues to influence political and social activists today.

When Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee's dramatization of Thoreau's life was first staged in April 1971, American politics were embroiled in the controversy surrounding the Viet Nam war. Thoreau's words and spirit, brought to life on stage, gained renewed importance.

But The Night Thoreau Spent in Jail is not a period piece nor a nostalgic flashback for the "Big Chill" generation. The play remains as vital and dynamic as the explosive spirit of a man whose thoughts and actions continue to shape the American spirit.

On Monday, April 24, the Department will present a workshop production of the play The Night Thoreau Spent in Jail at 8 p.m. in Caruthers Auditorium.

The production, under the direction of senior communication arts student D.J. Forsthoffer, will feature Jon Dietrich as Henry David Thoreau, David Dull as Ralph Waldo Emerson and Susan Rogers as Lydia Emerson. Other cast members include Mathew Stevens, Deven Lindsay, David Layfield, Gerald Crosswell, Robert Forester, Eva Antonitti, Dreux S. Carpenter and Tom Merrill.

Lighting and stage design is by Tom Godwin; stage manager is Suzanne Bennett.

The public is invited to The Night Thoreau Spent in Jail and admission is free.

Cindy's Circus

Cindy Ross, a long distance hiker with over 5,000 cumulative miles including the entire Appalachian Trail and the Pacific Crest Trail and author of two books on those experiences, lectures here on Monday, May 1, at 6 p.m.

Her presentation, "Journey on the Crest," also the title of her 1987 book, is in Nanticoke Room A of the University Center. It is sponsored by the Salisbury State Outdoor Club.

Ross had already hiked the 2000-mile length of the Appalachian Trail, stretching from Maine to Georgia (A Women's Journey, East Woods Press, 1982), when, she said to escape a deadening daily routine, she once again set off to the wilds "to sort it all out." But now she headed for a more rugged arena: the Pacific Crest Trail, a mostly mountainous 2600-mile route from Mexico to Canada, vastly different from the gentle, well-traveled Appalachian Trail.

Her trip began at a low point (in the California desert): The hiking "partner" she had selected from an advertisement proved to be totally inexperienced and "so weird" that they parted company the first day, she said. Continuing along, Ross soon became the de facto leader of a motley, changing crew of Crest walkers known as "Cindy's Circus."

The long rugged hiking days produced physical ailments and mental crotchets. But in confronting and surmounting these, Ross grew in strength as the trail miles dropped away. Several months and several major changes in her life later, Ross beat fall snows and storms to reach the Canadian border. More than the end of the trail, she felt this was also a symbolic milestone in her life.

In narrating her story, Ross deftly brings the reader into the physical and emotional landscape of long-distance hiking.

A resident of Kempton, PA, Ross has been a hard-rock miner, a waitress and a model for life-drawing classes, among other pursuits. She and her husband operate a hostel for hikers along the Appalachian Trail.

For more information on Ross' lecture, call the Public Relations Office at 543-6030.

In Before Forever, for example, the dancers often speak the words of the script, much as actors in a play would do.

"In a very real sense," said Barnett, "everyone who participated in the process created this work of art. This is a piece about people living with AIDS, not dying from AIDS."

"Usually we read about the clinical facts, the horror stories, " said Collins, "the tales of abandonment. It's not the whole story."

"So much that has to do with AIDS is either statistics and percentages, or sensationalist journalism, or misinformed prejudice, that we felt as artists that we ought to try to make a work about the human side of AIDS," said David Collins, company manager. "As the creative process unfolded, we were amazed to find that our piece was somewhat hopeful—in large part due to the incredible courage we found among people with AIDS."

"This is the kind of work that can generate thought and conversation about AIDS, and people with AIDS," said Collins. "It has the kind of human impact that a brochure or pamphlet cannot achieve. It is also a very positive work, and a work worth seeing for its beauty and power."

At this point, the work has only been performed in Philadelphia, where it received favorable audience response.

Brad Rosenstein, Philadephia's reviewer for City Paper, wrote, "Before Forever is an eloquent, sometimes beautiful work combining theater, dance and music to give a kaleidoscopic treatment of a disease which goes beyond disease...never preachy or pretentious...the work is often funny, always hopeful, and profoundly human. The piece is subtitled 'a work about people living with AIDS,' and what it makes clear is that means all of us, whether afflicted or not."

Founded in 1975 Danceteller has performed some 800 concerts for audiences numbering more than a half million people in theatres throughout the eastern U.S.

During the regular concert season, the company spends half its time in Philadelphia creating new works, rehearsing and performing. The remaining half of the season is spent on the road. Since moving to Philadelphia in 1985, Danceteller has greatly increased artistic interaction with other artists including composers, musicians, visual artists, dancers, actors, playwrights and conceptual artists.

Admission to Before Forever is free and the public is invited. Due to the strong language in the performance piece, it may not be suitable for young children.

For more information call the Public Relations Office at (301) 543-6030.

'Backstage' as University Dining Prepares an Evening Worthy of the Phantom of the Opera

With the 10th annual SSU Foundation Gala only two days away, members of the University Dining Services staff are busy preparing for an evening of French cuisine, as part of festivities inspired by the Gaston Leroux novel, several generation of movies and a lavish Broadway musical celebrating the Phantom of the Opera. Simultaneously, UDS will be serving a surf and turf dinner for students in the University Center.

SSU Dance Company Presents a 'Really Different' Concert May 13 and 14

What do a prominent Washington, D.C., choreographer with a national reputation, some 30 members of the local Eastern Shore community, the Salisbury State Concert Choir and a professional juggler all have in common?

Each is collaborating with the SSU Dance Company on its spring concert, titled "This One is Really Different," which plays May 13 and 14 in Holloway Hall Auditorium. In the words of Dance Company director, Susan Turner, this concert "really is different." As its rehearsals progressed, "things kept getting zanier and zanier."

Choreographer Liz Lerman, who has received accolades from newspapers as diverse as The New York Times, Los Angeles Times and the Cleveland Plain Dealer as well as prestigious Dance Magazine, comes to Salisbury for the first time to choreograph her "Fanfare for the Common Man." Lerman, who has been called the "Ms. Dance of Washington" by the Washington Post critic, Alan M. Kriegsman, is founder of her own company, Dance Exchange, which has toured both nationally and internationally. In her "Fanfare," which uses Aaron Copeland's beloved music, she creates an ensemble piece not just for professional dancers, but non-dancers of all ages. In the SSU performance the student dance company will perform with faculty members and their children as well as senior citizens.

"All people should have access to dance, no matter what their age, ability or body type," said Lerman, who has brought this philosophy to nursing homes, elderly housing projects and hospitals as well as theatres and universities across

Caruthers Speaker at Honors Convocation

The Honors Convocation of the University Forum has selected Dr. J. Wade Caruthers as speaker for the Convocation ceremony. Caruthers, an outstanding alumnus, graduated in the class of 1938 from then Salisbury State Teachers College. He continued his education at the University of Missouri and received a doctorate from Columbia University.

His teaching and community contributions are both varied and noteworthy. Caruthers taught social studies and directed the band at Cambridge High School. He was a professor of history, department chair and graduate studies director at Keene State College and Southern Connecticut State University.

He served in WWII as a minesweeping officer in the United States Navy. He is the author of numerous articles, reviews and a biography in his major discipline of U.S. 19th century intellectual history.

Caruthers served on the SSU Alumni Board and is a past president of this organization.

The title of his address is "Some Things are Better Than Others."

Honors Convocation is Friday, May 5, at 3:30 p.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium. A reception in the Social Room for honor recipients and their guests immediately follows the ceremony.

Research Center Receives Collections

The Research Center for Delmarva History and Culture at SSU received several important new collections relating to the diverse historical development and growth of the Peninsula.

A collection of family letters written by Eastern Shoremen in the 1830s through the Civil War era, donated by Mrs. Emily Jefferson Fox, reveal interesting trade ties with the Caribbean, as well as local perspectives on the War. One local resident unashamedly chose Canada rather than the battlefront! Also included in the Fox collection were numerous materials and photographs concerning the early years in Federalsburg.

Another collection of early 19th century letters, business records and deeds offer particularly interesting revelations about an early Wicomico County family and the church named for them, Mills Chapel. This collection also contains intriguing brochures and advertisements for cures for a host of medical ailments.

These documents are the latest additions to a treasure trove of 18th and 19th century

Wellness Day May 1

The University is planning its fifth annual Wellness Day on Monday, May 1, from 10 a.m. - 3 p.m. The festival will be held either in Red Square, which is in front of Caruthers Hall, or on University Hill, behind the University Center. The rain date is Monday, May 8. The Wellness Day Festival focuses on health and fitness promotion, and includes both campus and community participation.

For more information contact Cathy Lynch at 543-6209 or John Fields at 543-6080.

Medical Technology Applications Due

Students who intend to register for upper division medical technology courses are reminded that applications are due in the Department of Medical Technology by Monday, May 1. Those who apply should have reached sophomore standing and will seek admisison effective in the fall of the junior year. Students who have previously declared the medical technology major will be given the application form when they see their individual advisors for program planning. Others, who have not previously declared the major and wish to seek application or information regarding the program should phone 543-6364 or 543-6331 for more information.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Department of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or whereever you may reside. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep your first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away from alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit area or a place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you need an escort to or from your car, call the Department of Public Safety, 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Department of Public Safety, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

SSU News Guidelines

The SSU News is a newletter for the campus community published by the Public Relations Office each Thursday during fall and spring semesters, unless noted. The deadline is 4:30 p.m. on the Friday prior to publication.

Any story relating to the life of the campus, whether it be of interest to students, faculty or staff, is welcomed. Newsletter items should be typed and double-spaced.

Because stories are usually proofed and typeset on a first come, first served basis, don't feel you have to wait until Friday to get your article to Public Relations (HH 264).

Because the PR cannot canvas the campus personally, the staff is grateful to those who keep it current on the activities and issues affecting University life. Public Relations looks forward to hearing from you.

Canoe Race

The Pocomoke River in Worcester County will be teeming with canoes during the first annual Pocomoke River Canoe Challenge on June 24.

The race route will be the Pocomoke River between the towns of Snow Hill and Pocomoke City and will challenge all hardy canoeists with its 12 miles of scenic riverfront.

Recreational and flatwater racing canoes will compete for prizes in several classifications.

Teams will be classified by canoe type, recreational or flatwater racing and age of participants. Age classifications will be determined by the younger team member.

Canoeists 16 years of age and over will compete for prizes in six categories and a grand prize for the first canoe to cross the finish line. Prizes for each category winner and the grand champion will be waterfowl decoys from Stoney Point Decoys in nearby Oak Hall, VA.

For more information or copies of rules and entry forms call Mark Harrison at 957-1334 or write to Canoe Challenge, P.O. Box 348, Snow Hill, MD 21863.

The Salisbury State Wind Emsemble

Wind Symphony Concert

The Salisbury State Wind Symphony will present a spring concert at Asbury United Methodist Church on Monday, May 8, at 8 p.m. Admission is free and open to the public.

The performance will primarily feature traditional sacred music edited, arranged and transcribed for the contemporary wind medium. Selections include O magnum mysterium(1587) by Giovanni Gabrieli which has been transcribed for double brass choir and organ by Richard L. Johnson of the SSU Music Department and director of the Wind Symphony.

Other selections include Canzon XXIX (1608) by Girolamo Frescobaldi, Variations on an Advent Hymn (1962) by Fisher Tull; Trauersinfonie (1844) by Richard Wagner; Songs of Praise(1983) by Vaclav Nelhybel; Eternal Father, Strong to Save (1975) by Claude T. Smith; and Concertino for Tuba and Band (1981) by James Curnow.

The concert features the talents of guest artists Taylor Harvey and Scott Tarabour. Harvey is director of music at Asbury United Methodist Church in Salisbury. In addition to conducting five choirs, Harvey arranges and edits organ and choral music for all services at the Asbury Church and teaches organ and piano. He has been widely received for his organ recitals and has given performances in Baltimore, Roanoke, VA, Washington, D.C. and New Jersey.

Tarabour joined the studio faculty at SSU in 1987 teaching tuba and low brass techniques. Prior to his affiliation with Salisbury Tarabour performed with the Navy Academy Band in Annapolis. Tarabour also is a free-lance artist in the Baltimore area.

For more information regarding performances from the Department of Music call 543-6385.

Voice Recitals

On Monday, May 1 , at 8 p.m. in Caruthers Auditorium Voice Classes I and II and private voice students of Dr. Duane Karna and Katherine Turner will give recitals.

The program will feature a variety of styles of vocal literature and will be accompanied by Dr. Nancy J. Cooper.

Piano Recitals

The Music Department invites all to attend two upcoming piano recitals.

Joan Dirska, a junior who is majoring in music, will be performing a solo piano recital on Thursday, May 4, in Caruthers Auditorium at 8 p.m. The program will consist of pieces by Bach, Beethoven, Mozart, Mendelssohn and Ginastera. Dirska is a student of Linda Cockey. She is from Clinton, MD and is a graduate of Surrattsville High School.

On Tuesday, May 7, at 8 p.m. in Caruthers Auditorium, students of Linda Cockey and Dr. Nancy Cooper will perform a solo piano recital. The program will be varied with works from all periods of music history.

The events are free and open to the public.

Memorial Scholarship

The Alvin J. and Margaret J. Van der Bogart Memorial Scholarship in the amount of approximately $10,000 will be awarded in the spring of each year to assist in or provide for the higher education of a resident of Wicomico County.

In addition to the residence requirement, the applicant must be in the top 10 percent of the class at the high school or college which the applicant is currently attending and must have applied for admission to a college or university as a full-time student.

The recipient of the Alvin J. and Margaret J. Van der Bogart Memorial Scholarship shall be chosen on the basis of merit from among all of the applicants, and not need. If the qualified applicants are relatively equal in their merits, preference will be given to a member of St. Peter's Episcopal Church.

Applications should be submitted to the Rector of St. Peter's Episcopal Church in Salisbury. The Rector, with the assistance of an advisory committee, will select as the recipient of the Memorial Scholarship that young person who, among the applicants, has best shown academic capabilities for higher education and who best embodies the principles of Christian ideals and living.

Applications are available from St. Peter's Episcopal Church. Deadline for submission is May 6. For additional information contact the Dean of Students Office, University Center, room 212.

Soroptimists Scholarship

The Anne Matthews Scholarship will be awarded this spring by the Soroptimist International of Salisbury. Applications must be submitted by May 12 to Mrs. Henrietta Moore, P.O. Box 907, Salisbury, MD 21801.

The scholarship fund was established in 1962 in memory of Matthews, a former member of the service organization and a teacher at Salisbury State.

The $500 scholarship will be awarded to a woman resident of Wicomico County for use in attending an accredited college or university in the field of education on either an undergraduate or graduate level.

Applications are available at the Financial Aid Office. They may also be secured from Mrs. Moore by calling 546-3700.

Rubin Lecture

Sharon Rubin, dean of the School of Liberal Arts, gave the luncheon address, "Success and Failure: Three Cautionary Tales," at the National Conference for Campus Liaisons of the Washington Center for Internships and Academic Seminars in Washington, D.C. recently.

She also gave an address Brevard Community College, Cocoa Beach, FL, as part of their National Trends in Education series. The presentation was on "The Second Wave of Community Service: Reflections on the Way We Were, the Way We Are, and the Way We Might Be."

Jazz Concert

The Salisbury State Jazz Ensemble will present a spring performance on Wednesday, May 3, in Caruthers Auditorium at 8 p.m. Admission is free and open to the public.

The 20-member group, founded four years ago, continues to gain in reputation throughout the Eastern Shore. The Jazz Ensemble has once again been invited to perform at the Salisbury Festival on May 6. Performance time is 1 p.m. at the Downtown Plaza.

The Ensemble combines both community and University players who share an interest in performing a wide variety of styles in jazz literature. It emphasizes the study and performance of jazz repertoire from the "Big Band" era to more progressive Fusion styles.

The organization is under the direction of Richard L. Johnson, director of bands at Salisbury State. For further information regarding future performances from the Department of Music, call 543-9465.

Personnel Notes

Alumnae Exhibit

Lynne Lockhart, a 1984 Salisbury State alumnae, will be the featured artist in the 1989 Spring Alumnus Show in the Atrium Gallery of the University Center. This show will run concurrently with the Student Senior Art Show in the main University Gallery in Blackwell Library.

While at Salisbury State, Lockhart received the Art Meritorious Award and the Wicomico Art League Scholarship. After graduating summa cum laude with a double major in art and biology, she studied part time at the Corcoran School of Art, Washington, D.C. and the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, Philadelphia. She now resides in Tampa, FL.

Lockhart has exhibited mostly on the Eastern Shore as well as in Tampa. She will participate in her first national show this spring with "Assateague" in Art for the Parks, a landscape show featuring our nation's parks and preserves.

In addition to exhibits, she has illustrated two books, "The Oyster, Life and Love of the Celebrated Bivalve," by Dr. Robert Hedeen, professor of biology at SSU, and "Rambling Raft," a pictorial children's story that takes place on a Chesapeake tidal river (the Choptank), to be published July 1.

The Alumnus Show opens Monday, May 1, and will remain open 9 a.m.-9 p.m. daily through Tuesday, May 16. There will be a special preview opening on Thursday, April 27, from 2-4 p.m. The public is invited to come and talk with the artist. The Atrium Gallery is located next to the bookstore.

At 2 p.m. weekdays, during the Lockhart exhibit, the Atrium Gallery will also feature videos about American born female artists. Georgia O'Keefe will run on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Mary Cassatt will run Tuesdays and Thursdays. Both the Atrium Gallery and the University Gallery, Blackwell Library, are free and open to the public.

Career Planning Workshops

SENIOR PLACEMENT AND INTERVIEW BRIEFING -This one-session workshop is designed to inform students and alumni of the career services, options and assistance available to them and is required of those who register with the Placement Services Office. Introductory level information will include resumes, graduate school, governmental employment and job campaign techniques. Intermediate level training is provided in interview skills. Students and alumni who wish to participate in on-campus interviews must complete this training.

Wednesday, May 3, from 3:30-4:30 p.m.

All workshops require sign-ups. Contact Placement Services Office, University Center, room 263, or call 543-6075.

SENIOR RESUME BOOK - CPPD often gets requests from employers who want to review resumes of Salisbury State seniors so they can contact those seniors about job openings. To participate, bring a resume to CPPD. It will be filed according to major; the book will be made available to interested employers.

RECRUITING FAIR

New Jersey Collegiate Career Day - June 1 at Rutgers University in New Brunswick, NJ.
South Carolina Expo for Teacher Recruitment - June 14-16 in Charleston, SC.

For more information on the recruiting fairs, contact the Placement Services in the University Center, room 263, or call 543-6075.

Hope and Glory

Hope and Glory, nominated for Best Picture in 1987, will be shown on Saturday and Sunday, April 29 and 30, at 7 p.m. and 9:15 p.m. in Devilbiss 149. Sponsored by the Salisbury State Program Board, admission is free.

Directed by John Boorman, whose other credits include Excalibur and Emerald Forest, the film is rated PG-13. A synopsis follows.

The London Blitz took World War II out of the battlefields and into the home. The nightly bombing raids by the Luftwaffe tore at the fabric of daily life and yet, stirred, united and exhilarated the British.

Drawn from writer/producer/director Boorman's memories of a bizarre wartime childhood, Hope and Glory re-creates the story of an ordinary family living in extraordinary times.

As shown through the eyes of 7-year-old Bill Rohan, the war became more than a battle—it was a glorious adventure filled with dog fights, barrage balloons, air raid shelters, gas masks and bombed-out ruins making for the greatest playground a young boy could possibly imagine.

Jardine Great Leader

John W. Jardine, Jr., president and chief executive officer of Chesapeake Utilities Corp., concludes this year's Great Leader Lecture series with a presentation on Tuesday, May 2, at 12:30 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the University Center.

Sponsored by the Perdue School of Business, the lecture is free and open to the public.

With a decade of gas industry experience behind him Jardine joined Chesapeake Utilities in 1961. He has held subsequent positions as assistant treasurer, assistant secretary, treasurer, secretary, vice president and executive vice president and was named to his current position in 1983. Jardine has been a member of the Board of Directors of Chesapeake Utilities Corporation since 1972.

Chesapeake Utilities Corporation is a natural gas distribution company serving southern Delaware, the Salisbury and Cambridge areas and central Florida. Under the leadership of Jardine, the company has made numerous acquisitions, including in the past year alone, the Plant City Natural Gas Company, Kellam Industries, Data Services and Currin & Associates.

In 1988, company operating revenues were $58.6 million and net operating income was $2.76 million. All of this was the result of the efforts of the more than 300 Chesapeake Utilities employees, according to Jardine.

Jardine is a graduate of Muskingum College in Ohio and attended University of Pittsburgh Graduate School.

For more information on the Great Leader series, contact the Perdue School at 543-6315.

Other Culture Workshop

The Office of International Programs at UMES and the Department of Sociology and Anthropology at Salisbury State are sponsoring a workshop on "Living and Working in Another Culture," on Thursday, May 11, from 5:30-9:30 p.m. at the University Center.

The purpose of the workshop is to provide information and guidance for persons going on or considering short-term or long-term assignments overseas, particularly into non-Western societies. An objective of the workshop is to enhance one's personal skills in adapting to a new cross-cultural setting with understanding and sensitivity.

Government agencies such as the Peace Corps and the U.S. Agency for International development, as well as business and industry, have recognized that a cross-cultural orientation or training session is more than a "pre-departure orientation" about living conditions abroad. This exposure may become one determinant of an individual's effective (or successful) performance overseas.

The session, in Nanticoke Room B, will consist of lecture/discussions; video and slide screenings; role playing; case studies; and informational handouts. The illustrations will be generic in nature, taken from the world of business and government agencies, to specific examples in West and Southern Africa and from personal experiences.

The chair of the workshop is Dr. Phillip Bosserman, Department of Sociology and Anthropology, SSU.

Topics discussed will include "The Importance of Global Awareness and the Challenges of Cross-Cultural Experiences," Dr. Getachew Metaferia, assistant professor, political science, UMES; "Staying Healthy and Health Conditions of the Population in East Africa: Experiences in Kenya," Dr. Karin Johnson, associate professor and head of the Nursing Graduate Education Program, SSU; "What is Important for Reading a Culture and its Setting? West Africa as an Illustration," Charles Petrocci, cultural anthropologist and former Peace Corps volunteer, Sierra Leone, West Africa (assisted by Bosserman); and "Learning from our experiences," discussed by faculty and staff who have lived and worked in cross-cultural settings.

Coordinating conclusions of the workshop will be Dr. C. Dennis Ignasias, director of international programs and assistant dean, UMES, and Bosserman.

The workshop is sponsored by the UMES Office of International Programs, with the cooperation of the UMES Department of Social Sciences, the SSU Department of Sociology and Anthropology and a cross-cultural training committee which includes the returned Peace Corps volunteers among the presenters in the program.

For more information call Bosserman at 543-6435.

across the country. As The Boston Globe noted in observing Lerman's work, "...dance is empowering, and dance is for everyone."

Another innovative piece is a collaboration between the dance company and the concert choir on two selections of modern liturgical music which are being used to explore nature and human nature. The choir, under the direction of Duane Karna, will be performing "In the Beginning of Creation" by Daniel Pinkham and "Collect" by Leslie Bassett. Said Turner, "I enjoy choreographing to voices." The musical selections themselves are a "challenge for me to interpret... I don't intend to have a specific religious point of view. I'm looking at them in a broader sense (as the dance relates to nature.)"

Assistant Dance Company director, Holly Boda, as well as students, also will be premiering new works which range from the humorous to the athletic. Tim Bowman's "Think a Thought" is acrobatic, abstract and Pilobolus-like, said Turner. Carol King and Jeanette Hillard have choreographed "The Chase" to music that includes Bon Jovi and Kenny G. With spies and intrigues, this comic piece tells a story with a surprise ending, said Turner. Choreographers Ron Armstrong and Brigette Tenor have created a multi-media work incorporating slides of the environment, spoken lines to accompany movement, and environmental sounds. Titled "Man's Nature," its characters and dancing chorus theatrically explore the nature theme.

Boda choreographs three pieces: "Flying Circus," a humorous travelogue based on dialogue used by airline stewardesses; "The Many Hats of Eve," as the title suggests, examining roles that women play; and "Electric Dawn," performed by Boda, a modern interpretation of sunrise.

Turner also performs a solo work to music by Neil Young. Throughout the concert, Paul Belanger, known locally as Paul. T. Juggler, will perform, seguing between the varied pieces," which range from the light-hearted to the thought-provoking," Turner noted.

Performances are at 8 p.m. Saturday, May 13, and 2 p.m. Sunday, May 14. Admission is free to SSU students, faculty and staff. For more information call 543-6353.

A Word of Thanks

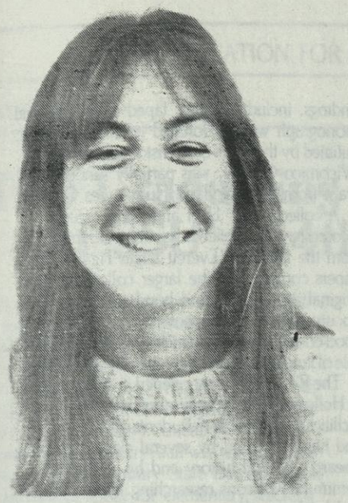
by Jim Welsh, Chair of Cultural Affairs Comm.

I would like to thank the faculty and students for their support of cultural programs this year at SSU, but especially for supporting the perhaps awkwardly named "Man and Nature" series during the spring term. In the past it has been a challenge to generate large audiences for speakers here. I was particularly impressed the night of Jacob Holdt's "American Pictures" program, which turned out between 500 and 600 people in Holloway Hall Auditorium. Meanwhile, across campus in the Wicomico Room of the University Center, between 300 and 400 people attended a lecture organized by the School of Education, and between 100 and 200 people attended a "Man and Nature" program upstairs. It is very encouraging to know that adequate audiences can now be generated for competing events on the same evening here.

Intellectual historian Roderick Nash filled Caruthers Auditorium when he gave his "Man and Nature" presentation on a Saturday evening. In the past hardly anyone would have dared to schedule a paid speaker for a weekend evening, since the perception was that our students generally commuted home on weekends. Even more surprising was the breakfast talk Nash gave on a Sunday morning to Joe Gilbert's "Wilderness in History" students, over 30 of whom attended.

Large numbers of people came to hear David Brower and other speakers in the "Man and nature" series. Syndicated Washington Post columnist Colman McCarthy had an audience in the University Center for a Sunday evening lecture the day before his "Man and Nature" scheduled appearance, which was also well attended, even though it was in competition with a piano recital by Mark Clinton, which filled Holloway Hall.

The Cultural Affairs Committee is now working and will continue to work through the summer on next year's cultural program. Contacts have already been made with composer Lee Mitchell, who will be touring Switzerland this summer as a concert pianist. We have approached Mitchell about scheduling a concert here next year, and contacts have also been made with the Music Department to see if his "Christmas Oratorio," in 12 movements for organ, choir and orchestra, a work that will be performed elsewhere next Christmas, in two cities in Switzerland, in St. Louis and in Baltimore, can also be arranged for Salisbury, either for 1989 or for 1990. Speakers already suggested as possibilities for next year are James McPherson, whose Battle Cry of Freedom just won the Pulitzer Prize for history, and Southern writers Clyde Edgerton (Raney and Walking Across Egypt) and Lee Smith. Anyone who has suggestions for next year's cultural program is invited to send them on to the Cultural Affairs Committee, care of my attention.



Carol Leether, a senior working toward her Bachelor of Fine Arts, wrote the following essay as an assignment for Marie Tater Quillen's Ceramics II class. The essay was to describe her first experience on the potter's wheel—"The Trials and Tribulations of the Throwing Experience." Leether, who is a 1976 graduate of Bennett Senior High School, had her essay published in the National Council on Education for the Ceramic Arts (NCECA) newsletter which is distributed internationally.

The Cylinder Chronicles: Beyond the Dog Dish

Somewhere, centuries ago, our forefathers conceived the potter's wheel and began the ancient rite, the carefully guarded secret, which our teacher has tried to pass on to us in this class—the secret of the cylinder. The notion that a lump of clay can take on the dimensions of a 3 1/2 inches by 5-6 inches, tall cylindrical form is really quite absurd, but it is true, it can be done. I have witnessed this marvel with my own eyes.

The first task in my quest for the cylinder was to create a dog dish, a cylinder with a height of not more than 3 inches. This was simple, but disaster struck with my first attempt at the perfect cylinder. My teacher explained as she demonstrated the technique with ease, "according to ancient law a cylinder must be 5-6 inches tall." The potter's wheel turned against me. As my cylinder grew in height it began to wobble until finally, to my despair, it flopped. Undaunted, I tried again and again, but when I tried hurrying past my teacher with my board of 4 inch cylinders, she knew that it was time for me to gather all my resources and to use my ruler.

I was determined to realize my quest. Ruler beside me, I centered my lump of clay. Slowly, I opened the center and undercut it, then carefully began to pull the side up. It didn't wobble. I measured it—3 inches. I pulled it up a little more—4 3/4. This was cruel! One more pull should do it. Once again I slowly pulled the clay between my fingers—5 1/4 inches! I made it! Finally I had my full size cylinder. I managed to make a few more that day, and throughout the semester, along with mugs and bowls, I managed to create the assigned ten cylinders according to the ancient law—3 1/2 x 5-6 inches.

materials donated to the Center by John Jacob. An invaluable collection of rare historical maps, most of Maryland, Delmarva and nearby areas, donated to the University by Jacob in 1987, will be transferred to the Center from the Geography Department. Such collections are most unusual and will be only the second cartography collection of its kind in any university in Maryland, other than a more general one in Johns Hopkins.

In addition to providing special archival storage facilities, the Center will make them available to students and other scholars for research and will periodically exhibit them for the public.

The largest collection received in recent weeks is the Tilghman Fertilizer Co. papers. This company which recently closed its doors after 125 years of doing business donated a collection of some 800 business records, company newsletters, photographs and other items chronicling the growth of agriculture and the poultry industry on Delmarva. Several artifacts and related objects were included in the collection which has been assessed at a value of some $6,000. A display of some of the objects in the collection can be seen in the Center.

A major project scheduled to begin in the near future will be the cataloging and preparing of a descriptive users' brochure of the extensive folklore holdings in the Center. The bulk of this collection, formerly known as the Delmarva Folklore Archives and originated by Dr. Polly Stewart (now a co-director of the Center), consists of written folklore manuscripts. However a number of taped oral histories have recently been added.

Dr. William H. Wroten, former chair of the History Department at Salisbury State and retired professor of history, recently donated a collection of some 15 taped interviews with Dorchester County residents; six oral history interviews with Wicomico County residents were donated by Sharon Jones.

Jones recently presented a slide-lecture at the University on the growth and demise of the willing business in the area. Much of her research was conducted at the Center, which co-sponsored her presentation, and copies of her findings, including slides, taped interviews and monograph will be donated to it. The project, initiated by the West Side Historical Society in Wicomico County, was partially funded by a grant from the Maryland Humanities Council.

A collection of 18th and 19th century Worcester County deeds has also been received from the family of Everett Elijah Hearn. The papers comprise on the larger collections of original deeds, plats and bonds to date. The documents are, for the most part, in extremely good condition and chronicle in great detail the sale of land from one family member to another.

The Research Center opened in new quarters in Holloway Hall in September 1988. Its new facilities are available to students and the public and has been used by several classes doing research in local history and by a number of community patrons researching family history and land records.

The Center is open Monday through Friday, 9:30 a.m. - 3:30 p.m.

Two Graduating Seniors to Receive $5,000 Gifts At SSU's 64th Honor's Convocation Friday

The University will honor some 300 outstanding scholars and student leaders at its 64th Honors Convocation on Friday, May 5, at 3:30 p.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium.

For the first time, the E. Pauline Riall Award, $5,000 gift to an outstanding graduating senior majoring in elementary education, will be presented. For 40 years Riall was teacher, then principal of the Salisbury State Demonstration School, a laboratory for elementary teaching and innovation on campus. She willed the bulk of her estate for scholarships and educational programs at the University. The Wicomico Woman's Club will also award a $1,500 scholarship to an outstanding junior in education, made possible by a Riall bequest to the club.

The third annual Richard Bernstein Award for Excellence, which also includes a $5,000 check, will be presented to the most prominent senior in the Franklin P. Perdue School of Business. The award was established to recognize students who display outstanding academic abilities and show evidence of an entrepreneurial spirit.

J. Wade Caruthers, former professor of history, department chair and director of graduate studies at Keene State College and Southern Connecticut State University, will be the speaker this year. A graduate of SSU when it was known as Salisbury State Teachers College and past president of the SSU alumni board, he is the author of The American Seaborne Frontier in the Pacific, Octavus Brooks Frothingham, Gentle Radical, and numerous magazine articles and book reviews.

> "Honors Convocation is both a symbolic and substantive way for the University to express its reason for being."
> –Dr. K. Nelson Butler

This years Honors Convocation, which dates back to the founding of the University in 1925, will recognize students in more than 40 separate areas of academic life. The different awards reflect organizations whose diversity ranges from international honor societies, to the Wall Street Journal, to local patrons and clubs saluting civic leaders such as Sam and Marilyn Seidel and the late Doris G. Calcott.

According to Dr. K. Nelson Butler, vice president of Academic Affairs, "Honors Convocation is both a symbolic and substantive way for the University to express its reason for being. It obviously is an honor for those students who are recognized for their accomplishments, but it is also an opportunity for the University to emphasize and reinforce the necessity for scholarship and learning. The process goes on every day in classes but this is a particular significant symbolic occasion to have the entire University campus proclaim the importance of education in its highest sense."

Here is a listing of awards: recognition of Dean's List Students, Phi Kappa Phi Initiates, Phi Eta Sigma Initiates, Departmental Societies Initiates and Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges; the

SSU Students to Work With Internationally Known Choreographer

The University will bring Salisbury into the heart of national and international contemporary dance at its Dance Company's annual Spring Concert on May 13 and 14.

Liz Lerman, internationally known choreographer from Washington, D.C., is coming to the campus to recreate for local performance her "Fanfare for the Common Man" to the music of Aaron Copland.

It is a work originally called, "May Dance on the Mall," and performed by 800 dancers on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial to kick off Washington's City Dance Festival in 1980. A crowd of 10,000 watched that performance.

For the version to be presented here, the dynamic Lerman will combine the talents of the young dancers in the University's dance company and the previously untapped talents of volunteers ranging in age from seven to that vague category known as senior citizen.

Susan Turner, the University's director of dance, said she has had good response to her call for performers, especially from faculty couples and their children.

A member of Lerman's troupe has already been on campus to teach the dance to members

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Department of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or whereever you may reside. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep your first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away from alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit area or a place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you need an escort to or from your car, call the Department of Public Safety, 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Department of Public Safety, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

SSU News Guidelines

The SSU News is a newletter for the campus community published by the Public Relations Office each Thursday during fall and spring semesters, unless noted. The deadline is 4:30 p.m. on the Friday prior to publication.

Any story relating to the life of the campus, whether it be of interest to students, faculty or staff, is welcomed. Newsletter items should be typed and double-spaced.

Because stories are usually proofed and typeset on a first come, first served basis, don't feel you have to wait until Friday to get your article to Public Relations (HH 264).

Because the PR cannot canvas the campus personally, the staff is grateful to those who keep it current on the activities and issues affecting University life. Public Relations looks forward to hearing from you.

Assistant Manager

The Book Rack, the Salisbury State bookstore, has an immediate opening for an assistant manager position responsible for the point of scale computer system and supervision of the evening and weekend operations.

A bachelor's degree is required with an emphasis on accounting and computer science. Previous experience in a college bookstore or retail store is preferred. Salary is competitive based on education and experience. This is a 12 month contractual position reporting to the book store director.

Interested applicants should send resumes with a cover letter and three references to: Allan Williams, Book Store Director, The Book Rack, 1101 Camden Ave., Salisbury, Md 21801. Application deadline is Tuesday, May 9.

Salisbury State is an affirmative action/equal opportunity employer. Qualified women, minorities and the disabled are encouraged to apply.

Poet to Read

Poet Marilyn Nelson Waniek reads from her books and collections of verse on Thursday, May 11, at 7:30 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the University Center.

Her books are For The Body (1978) and Mama's Promises (1985), both published by Louisiana State University Press, and two collections of verse for children.

Waniek was born in Cleveland, OH in 1946, and spent her childhood as an Air Force brat in Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Colorado, California, New Hampshire and Maine. She graduated from the University of California, Davis and holds postgraduate degrees from the University of Pennsylvania (M.A.) and the University of Minnesota (Ph.D).

Married and the mother of two young children, she is a professor of English at the University of Connecticut, Storrs.

Summer Jobs At Aquatic Center

Full-time and part-time lifeguards and swimming instructors are needed May 28 - August 31 at the Salisbury State pool. Starting pay is $4 for guards, $5 for instructors.

Submit letter of application, proof of Certification in Advanced Lifesaving and/or Water Safety Instructor, and two references to Rosie Barretta, Aquatic Director, Maggs Physical Activity Center, SSU, Salisbury, MD 21801 on or before May 15.

Salisbury State is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer. Qualified women, minorities and the disabled are encouraged to apply.

Athletic Trainer Grad Assistant Sought

Salisbury State is seeking two graduate assistant athletic trainers. Desirable applicants should possess or be eligible for NATA Certification, CPR Instructor Certification and Red Cross Certification. Salary or stipend will be $5,500 for the year.

The Department of Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics services the University through instruction, recreation and athletic programs encompassing 18 varsity sports. Salisbury State is a member of the NCAA-Division III, has an excellent internship program and is committed to academic integrity and personal growth among student-athletes. The campus recreation program services over 1,500 students annually.

To apply, send a letter of application, resume and three letters of recommendation to: Athletic Training Search, Department of Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics, Salisbury State University, Salisbury, MD 21801.

The application deadline is May 30; in person interviews are optional, but desirable. Salisbury State is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer. Qualified women, minorities and disabled are encouraged to apply.

Director of Field Experience

Salisbury State's School of Education and Professional Studies seeks an individual to fill the position of director of field experiences. Responsibilities include teaching one course each semester, fostering relationships with school systems in Maryland, Delaware and Virginia, and coordinating the placement of professional education students in school settings for the purpose of observation, participation and student-teaching.

The director will play an active role in University and MSDE projects such as the Teacher Effectiveness Network and the Clinical Classroom Project, and will assist in staff development activities for supervisors and cooperating teachers.

The position is a 12-month administrative appointment with full state and University benefits. The successful candidate will possess at least a master's degree, relevant experience in the Delmarva region and the ability to teach effectively in the professional education curriculum.

Review of applications will commence on May 8 and continue until the position is filled. Please submit letter of application and vita to Dr. John T. Wolinski, Assistant Dean, School of Education, Caruthers Hall, SSU, Salisbury, MD 21801.

Salisbury State is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer. Qualified women, minorities and the disabled are encouraged to apply.

Kimmel Addresses NAEA

Dr. Kent Kimmel, professor of Art, recently returned from the annual National Art Education Association convention in Washington, D.C., where he presented papers on his research and curriculum development.

Kimmel's research presentation was titled "Color in Art and Applied Design: Perceptual Studies," which reported on his collaboration with an education psychologist at the Institute for Child Study, University of Maryland College Park, and a Dr. Harry Suber, a computer specialist at Salisbury State, in the design of a new visual perception test using hidden color figures. The test is considered a potential measure for spatial intelligence and personality, deductive reasoning, and most importantly as a true test of right hemispheric brain measures.

In his second presentation titled "Teaching Color Principles: A Comparison of Methodologies," Kimmel presented a comparison of a post-secondary level curriculum in pigment color principles, on which he completed development in 1983, as used at SSU and at Shepherd College in West Virginia. The presentation focused on the different methodologies used in presenting the same series of practical color exercises in two undergraduate art studio settings, and included the presentation of student solutions to practical color problems as defined by the curriculum.

In addition to his own presentations, Kimmel was invited to introduce Dr. Laura H. Chapman, a specialist in art education. Dr. Chapman is nationally known as an art educator, researcher, author, editor, advisor, curriculum and teacher preparation evaluator and artist.

Social/Environmental Group is Planned

Anyone interested in forming a social and environmental awareness group on campus is invited to attend an informal meeting to discuss plans to initiate this program. The meeting will be held on Tuesday, May 9, at 8 p.m. in the Pocomoke Room of the University Center.

For more information, please call James Rapp at 742-5961 or Blake Benn at 873-2961.

MCEA Bus Trip

MCEA Chapter No. 72 is going to Atlantic City, NJ, on Saturday, June 3. The bus leaves from Maggs Gym at 7 a.m. and returns at 9:30 p.m. that same evening. The cost to MCEA chapter members is $7, non-members $17. Participants receive $9 in coins and a $5 deferred voucher at the casino. "It is guaranteed to be a fun-filled trip," said Barbara Keene. Call her at 543-6350 to reserve a seat. Food and beverages are allowed on this bus.

Senkbeil Participates in Lab Safety Workshops

Dr. Ed Senkbeil, associate professor of chemistry, recently attended two workshops in laboratory safety.

On April 21, Senkbeil atended a three-day workshop at Curry College in Boston, MA, under the direction of Dr. James Kaufman, a nationally known laboratory safety instructor/consultant. Dr. Senkbeil was one of 50 participants chosen for the workshop designed to discuss the OSHA Hazard Communication Standard, safe laboratory practices, and how to institute complete laboratory safety programs in high schools and colleges. Dr. Senkebil is planning to initiate similar workshops for area high school teachers as part of his 1989 fall sabbatical goals.

On April 25, Dr. Senkbeil ws also an instructor for a one-day workshop in Baltimore, sponsored by Clean Harbors Inc., a chemical waste disposal contracting company. The workshop was titled, "Developing a Chemical Management System." Dr. Senkbeil presented four talks on handling of chemicals, proper storage of chemicals, methods for avoiding waste formation, and teaching the Home Application for Using Hazardous Chemicals. Such workshops have been instrumental in making laboratories aware of federal safety rules and regulations, and how to create a safer working environment in the laboratory.

SSU News Final Spring Issue

The final issue of the semester for the SSU News is Thursday, May 18. The deadline for that issue is Friday, May 12, a 4 p.m. The publications and Public Relations staff thanks all who have so cordially supported the SSU News in the past year. Best wishes for a relaxing and happy summer!

Doctoral Program in Human Development

Plans are in the works for the University of Maryland, College Park, to offer a doctoral program in Human Development on the SSU campus. Classes for this program will begin in September 1990.

An informational meeting regarding this opportunity will be held on Monday, May 8, at 6 p.m. in the Pocomoke Room of the University Center.

For additional information, contact Terry Clay in the Center for Personal and Professional Development at 543-6070.

P/T Aquatic Director Sought for Summer

Part-time assistant aquatic director is needed May 28 - August 31, minimum 20 hours per week.

Qualifications include current Advanced Lifesaving, Water Safety Instructor, First Aid and CPR. A Pool Operation Certificate is desirable. Previous experience in pool management and teaching at all levels of swimming is desired.

Schedule is variable. Must be available for some weekends and evenings. Pay is commensurate with experience, starting at $6 hour.

Submit resume, letter of application, proof of certifications and three references to Rosie Barretta, Aquatic Director, Maggs Physical Activity Center, SSU, Salisbury, MD 21801 on or before May 15. Phone 543-6357.

Salisbury State is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer. Qualified women, minorities and the disabled are encouraged to apply.

Wind Symphony Concert

The Salisbury State Wind Symphony, directed by Richard Johnson, will present a spring concert at Asbury United Methodist Church on Monday, May 8, at 8 p.m. Admission is free and open to the public.

The performance will primarily feature traditional sacred music edited, arranged and transcribed for the contemporary wind medium.

The concert features the talents of guest artists Taylor Harvey and Scott Tarabour. Harvey is director of music at Asbury United Methodist Church in Salisbury. He has been widely received for his organ recitals and has given performances in Baltimore, Roanoke, VA, Washington, D.C. and New Jersey.

Tarabour joined the studio faculty at SSU in 1987 teaching tuba and low brass techniques. Prior to his affiliation with Salisbury Tarabour performed with the Navy Academy Band in Annapolis.

For more information regarding performances from the Department of Music call 543-6385.

Piano Recitals

The Music Department invites all to attend two upcoming piano recitals.

Joan Dirska, a junior who is majoring in music, will be performing a solo piano recital on Thursday, May 4, in Caruthers Auditorium at 8 p.m. The program will consist of pieces by Bach, Beethoven, Mozart, Mendelssohn and Ginastera. Dirska is a student of Linda Cockey. She is from Clinton, MD and is a graduate of Surrattsville High School.

On Tuesday, May 7, at 8 p.m. in Caruthers Auditorium, students of Linda Cockey and Dr. Nancy Cooper will perform a solo piano recital. The program will be varied with works from all periods of music history.

The events are free and open to the public.

Soroptimists Scholarship

The Anne Matthews Scholarship will be awarded this spring by the Soroptimist International of Salisbury. Applications must be submitted by May 12 to Mrs. Henrietta Moore, P.O. Box 907, Salisbury, MD 21801.

The scholarship fund was established in 1962 in memory of Matthews, a former member of the service organization and a teacher at Salisbury State.

The $500 scholarship will be awarded to a woman resident of Wicomico County for use in attending an accredited college or university in the field of education on either an undergraduate or graduate level.

Applications are available at the Financial Aid Office. They may also be secured from Mrs. Moore by calling 546-3700.

Memorial Scholarship

The Alvin J. and Margaret J. Van der Bogart Memorial Scholarship in the amount of approximately $10,000 will be awarded in the spring of each year to assist in or provide for the higher education of a resident of Wicomico County.

In addition to the residence requirement, the applicant must be in the top 10 percent of the class at the high school or college which the applicant is currently attending and must have applied for admission to a college or university as a full-time student.

The recipient of the Alvin J. and Margaret J. Van der Bogart Memorial Scholarship shall be chosen on the basis of merit from among all of the applicants, and not need. If the qualified applicants are relatively equal in their merits, preference will be given to a member of St. Peter's Episcopal Church.

Applications should be submitted to the Rector of St. Peter's Episcopal Church in Salisbury. The Rector, with the assistance of an advisory committee, will select as the recipient of the Memorial Scholarship that young person who, among the applicants, has best shown academic capabilities for higher education and who best embodies the principles of Christian ideals and living.

Applications are available from St. Peter's Episcopal Church. Deadline for submission is May 6. For additional information contact the Dean of Students Office, University Center, room 212.

Jazz Concert

The Jazz Ensemble has once again been invited to perform at the Salisbury Festival on May 6. Performance time is 1 p.m. at the Downtown Plaza.

The Ensemble combines both community and University players who share an interest in performing a wide variety of styles in jazz literature. It emphasizes the study and performance of jazz repertoire from the "Big Band" era to more progressive Fusion styles.

The organization is under the direction of Richard L. Johnson, director of bands at Salisbury State. For further information regarding future performances from the Department of Music, call 543-9465.

Alumna Exhibit

Lynne Lockhart, a 1984 Salisbury State alumnae, will be the featured artist in the 1989 Spring Alumnus Show in the Atrium Gallery of the University Center. This show will run concurrently with the Student Senior Art Show in the main University Gallery in Blackwell Library.

The Alumnus Show will remain open 9 a.m.-9 p.m. daily through Tuesday, May 16. There will be a special preview opening on Thursday, April 27, from 2-4 p.m. The public is invited to come and talk with the artist. The Atrium Gallery is located next to the bookstore.

At 2 p.m. weekdays, during the Lockhart exhibit, the Atrium Gallery will also feature videos about American born female artists. Georgia O'Keefe will run on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Mary Cassatt will run Tuesdays and Thursdays. Both the Atrium Gallery and the University Gallery, Blackwell Library, are free and open to the public.

Other Culture Workshop

The Office of International Programs at UMES and the Department of Sociology and Anthropology at Salisbury State are sponsoring a workshop on "Living and Working in Another Culture," on Thursday, May 11, from 5:30-9:30 p.m. at the University Center.

The purpose of the workshop is to provide information and guidance for persons going on or considering short-term or long-term assignments overseas, particularly into non-Western societies. An objective of the workshop is to enhance one's personal skills in adapting to a new cross-cultural setting with understanding and sensitivity.

Government agencies such as the Peace Corps and the U.S. Agency for International development, as well as business and industry, have recognized that a cross-cultural orientation or training session is more than a "pre-departure orientation" about living conditions abroad. This exposure may become one determinant of an individual's effective (or successful) performance overseas.

The session, in Nanticoke Room B, will consist of lecture/discussions; video and slide screenings; role playing; case studies; and informational handouts. The illustrations will be generic in nature, taken from the world of business and government agencies, to specific examples in West and Southern Africa and from personal experiences.

The chair of the workshop is Dr. Phillip Bosserman, Department of Sociology and Anthropology, SSU.

Topics discussed will include "The Importance of Global Awareness and the Challenges of Cross-Cultural Experiences," Dr. Getachew Metaferia, assistant professor, political science, UMES; "Staying Healthy and Health Conditions of the Population in East Africa: Experiences in Kenya," Dr. Karin Johnson, associate professor and head of the Nursing Graduate Education Program, SSU; "What is Important for Reading a Culture and its Setting? West Africa as an Illustration," Charles Petrocci, cultural anthropoligist and former Peace Corps volunteer, Sierra Leone, West Africa (assisted by Bosserman); and "Learning from our experiences," discussed by faculty and staff who have lived and worked in cross-cultural settings.

Coordinating conclusions of the workshop will be Dr. C. Dennis Ignasias, director of international programs and assistant dean, UMES, and Bosserman.

The workshop is sponsored by the UMES Office of International Programs, with the cooperation of the UMES Department of Social Sciences, the SSU Department of Sociology and Anthropology and a cross-cultural training committee which includes the returned Peace Corps volunteers among the presenters in the program.

For more information call Bosserman at 543-6435.

Man and Nature Group

The Man and Nature group will meet at 8 p.m. on Thursday, May 4, in the University Center Pocomoke Room (second floor, west).

The agenda will include a vote on the name, a look back and a look ahead.

1989 Commencement Information

Please Read Carefully

1. Commencement will be held at 10 a.m., Saturday, May 27, in the Wicomico County Youth and Civic Center. No tickets will be required, but it is suggested that graduates limit their number of guests to no more than eight. All graduates are requested to form for processional at 9 a.m. in the side corridors adjacent to the main arena on the first floor of the Civic Center.

2. The Commencement speaker will be Dr. Max Kaplan.

3. Caps, gowns, master's hoods, nursing pins and caps will be distributed through the University bookstore beginning May 1. These may be retained by the graduates and need not be returned following the ceremony. Announcements may be purchased in the bookstore beginning April 10, but quantities are limited and will be sold on a first come, first served basis. Problems with caps and gowns will be corrected prior to the ceremony by the bookstore employees at the Civic Center, in Flanders Room No. 1 near the snack bar to the left of the arena entrances. Bookstore hours Monday through Friday are 9 a.m. -7 p.m. The bookstore will be open on Friday, May 26, from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. Graduates must pick up the necessary items before 7 p.m. on that date.

4. The faculty marshals will give each graduate a 3x5 card containing his/her name and the School (e.g. Perdue School of Business). You will be asked to stand by School and degree as you are presented to President Bellavance by your School Dean for the conferring of the degree. The card is then given to Dr. Nelson Butler when the graduate reaches the stage, and at the same time, the graduate is to announce his/her name. Dr. Butler will then know who the person is and how to pronounce the name correctly. The name on the card must not be changed for any reason.

5. During the recessional graduates and faculty are to return to the area where they assembled prior to the ceremony. They should not stop or congregate in the lobby.

6. Degree candidates who do not plan to participate in the Commencement Exercise must notify the Registrar's Office by calling 543-6150 no later than Monday, May 22. All graduates will receive a blank folder at Commencement, and all diplomas will be mailed approximately six weeks after the ceremony.

7. Faculty and staff are requested to form the processional at 9:15 a.m. in the Midway Room of the Civic Center. Faculty members are required to attend; those who are unable to do so should so inform their respective School dean.

8. The first aid staff of the Civic Center will be on duty in the office on the right side of the foyer entrance just outside the main arena.

9. A brief reception for graduates and their guests will be held immediately following Commencement in the Midway Room of the Civic Center. The reception is being sponsored by the Salisbury State University Alumni Association and at the conclusion of the ceremony you will be an official alumnus of Salisbury State University.

10. The ROTC Commissioning Ceremony will take place at 2 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the University Center on Saturday, May 27. The University community is cordially invited to attend.

11. The School of Nursing will hold a Pinning Ceremony on Friday, May 26 at, 8 p.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium.

12. Bachelor of Science candidates will assemble in the north corridor of the Civic Center (to the left when entering from the front doors and on the side nearest the Mall). Candidates with last names beginning with the letters A through M, Kenneth William Mann, will report to Drs. Bozman and Shaffer and will line up alphabetically along the inside wall, facing east (the rear of the building). You will sit in Section 1 on the seating chart. Bachelor of Science candidates beginning with Christopher Peter Manouse through the letter Z will report to Drs. Wulff and Rossi, and will line up alphabetically along the windows, facing west (the front of the building). You will sit in Section 7 on the seating chart.

13. Bachelor of Arts candidates will assemble in the south corridor of the Civic Center (to the right after you enter the front doors on the side nearest to the park). Candidates with last names beginning with the letters A through M, James Todd McCauley, will report to Drs. Basehart and Delpaz at the rear of the corridor and will line up alphabetically facing east (the rear of the building). You will sit in Section 2 on the seating chart. Bachelor of Arts candidates with last names beginning with M, Brian Edward McClellan, through the letter Z, will report to Dr. St. Martin and will line up alphabetically in the corridor toward the Midway Room (against the wall nearest the rear of the building). You will sit in Section 3 on the seating chart.

14. Bachelor of Arts in Social Work candidates will assemble in the south corridor of the Civic Center (to the right after you enter the front doors and on the side nearest the park). You will report to Dr. Arlene White and line up alphabetically in the corridor toward the Midway Room (against the wall nearest the front of the building) You will sit in Section 3 on the seating chart, behind the B.A. candidates.

15. All Master's Degree candidates (M.Ed., M.A., M.B.A., M.S.) will enter the Civic Center at the Midway Room front entrance (not the entrance leading to the main arena), and report to Drs. Hedeen and Lewis in that corridor near the Midway Room. They will direct you into a line according to your degree. You sit in Section 4 on the seating chart.

16. Dress Code

This is a formal academic occasion and should be viewed as such in dress and demeanor.

The academic robe is black and the recommended dress, therefore, is:

A. Women

1. Black dress shoes (or some other dark color) - no white or other light color.

2. Dress hose.

3. A dress which does not have a high neckline or stand-up collar. It should not show above the V-neckline and white collar on the robe. Since the academic robe has a zipper front closing, the dress will show only near the lower hem and therefore, preferably should be a dark color, rather than white or very light.

4. No visible jewelry. Fraternity or sorority pins/ribbons may be worn; these are academic emblems and are not considered jewelry as such.

5. No flowers on the academic robe, and no flowers are to be carried to the stage.

B. Men

1. Black dress shoes (or some dark color) - no sneakers or light color sport shoes with thick rubber soles.

2. Dark color socks - no white athletic socks.

3. Dress slacks, preferably a dark or neutral color.

4. Dress shirt, preferably white, or a light color.

5. Dress tie (four-in-hand tie with windsor knot). (Shirt collar and tie will show above the V-neckline of the academic robe.)

6. Suit coat or sport coat will not be seen under the robe and is, therefore, optional (the Civic Center is air-conditioned).

7. No visible jewelry. Fraternity or sorority pins/ribbons may be worn; these are academic emblems and are not considered jewelry as such.

C. Both

1. The mortarboard (academic hat) is to be worn with the front point over the forehead below the front hairline, and so the flat board is parallel to the floor. (Not worn on the back of the head with the board pointing upward.) No decoration of any kind is to be placed on the mortarboard.

2. Candidates for the bachelor's degree should come into the auditorium with the tassel on the right, hanging near the right eye. After the degrees are conferred the tassel is shifted to the left side. The signal for shifting the tassel will be given by the President and Vice-President for Academic Affairs when they touch their mortarboards.

3. Candidates for the master's degree should place the tassel at the left front of the mortarboard prior to entering the auditorium and should not shift it.

4. Master's degree candidates will wear the robe, but will carry the hood over the left arm until they reach the stage, where it will be placed on the candidate.

17. Graduation Decorum—Graduation ceremonies are by their very nature festive occasions. The festivity manifests itself in many ways including the dress of the students and faculty adorned in academic regalia and the warmth, joy and satisfaction of accomplishment. The ceremonies are also marked by seriousness where the actual conferring of degrees signifies long hard work on the part of everyone involved: students, faculty, administrators, parents and spouses. As a consequence of the serious nature of the ceremony, students are expected to maintain a measure of decorum consonant with the occasion. Applause and other recognition of the conferring of degrees should be limited to a joint effort at the conclusion of each graduation group, (e.g., B.S., B.A., etc.).

International Films On Campus

Devilbiss Auditorium
Screenings at 7 p.m.

MAY 9

STAND BY ME - Rob Reiner directs the adaptation of Stephen King's short story "The Body," about four pre-adolescent boys coming to grips with life and death. A likeable and entertaining film.

MAY 10

KING LEAR - (Jean-Luc Godard, 1988) In Godard's updating of Shakespeare, which baffled most of the "critics," Lear becomes an aging Mafioso (Burgess Meredith). Molly Ringwald is his Cordelia. Theatrical whiz-kid Peter Sellers plays a post-apocalyptic Shakespeare. Cameos by Norman Mailer, Woody Allen, and Godard himself. Not for purists.

The films are free and open to the public.

A CLOCKWORK ORANGE, sponsored by the SSPB will be shown on Friday and Saturday, May 6 and 7, in Devilbiss 149. Showtimes are 7 and 9:20 p.m.

Sign Language Concert Friday

Belinda Cathey, president of the University Sign Language Club, and "the Gang," an Ocean City Mennonite youth group, present a Sign Language Concert on Friday, May 5, at 7:30 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the University Center. This concert is free and open to the public, both hearing impaired individuals and the hearing community as well. A donation will be collected to support a youth ministry in Ocean City this summer.

"You don't have to know any sign language to enjoy this event, we guarantee it," said Cathey. "It is dramatized signing to contemporary Christian music featuring Carman, David Meece, Truth and Gospel Rap."

For more information call the SSU Public Relations Office at 543-6030.

Mescon Addresses ADK

Dr. Timothy Mescon, dean of the Franklin P. Perdue School of Business recently addressed the Tau Chapter of ADK. The topic of his presentation was "Innovation, Creativity and Entrepreneurship" and took place in the Nanticoke Room of the University Center.

Mescon is a member of the University Speaker's Bureau. The Bureau offers area organizations several speakers discussing a variety of subjects. There is no charge for the service.

Any civic, service or education organization desiring a speaker should contact the Public Relations Office at 543-6030.

Announcer/Music Librarian

Announcer for WSCL-FM, Delmarva Public Radio, to host program Saturday and Sunday mornings. Serve as backup announcer for air shifts during the week. Must have previous broadcast experience. Knowledge of classical music and/or news helpful. Other duties as assigned. Music Librarian to input music cataloging into computer systems and assist with various functions related to on-air support of WSCL. Typing skills and some knowledge of computers preferred. Salary range: $5.50-6.50 per hour.

Application deadline is May 8. Send resume, a non-returnable air-check tape and three current letters of recommendation to: Announcer/Music Librarian Search, WSCL-FM, P.O. Box 2596, Salisbury, MD 21801.

The above position may be split into two part-time positions.

Salisbury State University Foundation, Inc. licensee of WSCL-FM, is an affiliated foundation of Salisbury State University. SSU is an EEO/Affirmative Action Employer. Qualified women, minorities, and disabled persons are encouraged to apply. All applications held in confidence.

Jewish Student Association Interest Meeting

Wednesday, May 10, at 7 p.m. in Choptank Room on the second floor of the University Center.

Bring your thoughts, suggestions and ideas.

For the social weekend, the Outdoor Club will be canoeing at Janes Island State Park near Crisfield on Friday, May 12, and Saturday, May 13. All graduating members are urged to attend.

All meetings are on Mondays at 6 p.m. in Nanticoke Room A of the University Center. For more information contact Holly McComas at 742-9874.

Stress Management

The SSU Faculty/Staff Wellness Program is sponsoring a seminar on Stress and Stress Management, Wednesday, May 10, at 7:30 p.m. in Maggs 205. The seminar will be given by Dr. Bob McBrien, director, Center for Personal and Professional Development.

Everyone is welcome to attend.

PARENTS' CLUB FORMS The recently formed SSU Parents Association hopes to increase the interaction between parents of students and the institution's administration and faculty. Discussing strategies to implement that goal at a recent meeting are (left to right): Jerry Christian, co-chair of the Parents Association Advisory Council; Dr. Carol Williamson, Dean of Students and campus coordinator for the new organization; Jimmie Christian, co-chair of the Advisory Council; Mrs. Elizabeth Bellavance, who has provided key leadership in association formation; and President Thomas E. Bellavance.

Parents Association Formed

In an effort to better inform parents about their children's college experience, a Salisbury State University Parents Association was recently formed.

"Parents of Salisbury State students are a significant part of the University community," said Dr. Carol Williamson, dean of students and campus coordinator of the new organization.

"While not participating daily in this community," continued Williamson, "parents have significant impact upon their students and most often pay a significant part of the students' bill for attendance here. It is important that we at the University strengthen the ties with parents and offer increased involvement with the University community."

Chairing the SSU Parents Association Advisory Council are Jimmie and Jerry Christian of Salisbury, whose daughter, Michelle Rene, is a junior communication arts major.

"We got involved," said Jimmie Christian, "because we've always been actively involved in our children's lives and we wanted to maintain that involvement. Even though Michelle has a more independent lifestyle now that she's attending Salisbury State, we wanted to continue to be aware of the environment she is living and working in and who the people are that she's dealing with.

"By talking to faculty and administrators at the University the communication channels for parents and their students remain clear," she said.

In addition to maintaining open lines of communication between parents of students and administrators, Jimmie also sees the association playing other key roles in the educational experience of SSU students.

"I would like to see the association have an impact on the job placement of Salisbury State graduates," said Jimmie Christian. "Parents can not only offer career planning advice, but we can also serve as a network to advise others in our respective career fields of the quality of education that a Salisbury State graduate receives.

"At the other end of the spectrum," said Jimmie Christian, "the association can assist the University in continuing to attract top caliber students, to enlarge the population of prospective students.

"And," said Jimmie Christian, "perhaps to a lesser degree, we can assist in raising private funds for the University."

Other members of the Advisor Council include: Senator & Mrs. Raymond Beck, Westminster; Mr. & Mrs. William Berkman, Watertown, NY; Mr. John and & the Rev. Betty Berlenbach, Princeton, NJ; Mr. & Mrs. Morris Bourne, Arnold; Mr. & Mrs. Reid Harrison, Annapolis; Dr. & Mrs. Gerald Johnson, Salisbury; Mr. & Mrs. Howard McComas, Abinton; Senator and Mrs. Michael Miller, Clinton; Delegate and Mrs. Clayton, Mitchell, Kennedyville; Mr. & Mrs. Charles Paul, Hagerstown; Mr. & Mrs. Eugene R. Reckner, Severna Park; Ms. Nanci Saltzman, Niskayuna, NY; Mr. & Mrs. Ricks Savage, Berlin; Ms. Claudia Sitrick & Mr. Don Mitchell, Ellicott City; Mr. & Mrs. Philip Wissner, Wexford, PA; and President & Mrs. Thomas Bellavance, Ex Officio.

All parents are encouraged to attend Parents Weekend on October 13 and 14.

For more information on the SSU Parents Association, call the Dean of Students at 543-6080.

SSU Professor Publishes Fourth Volume of Poetry

The Burden Lifters by Dr. Michael Waters, associate professor of English, has just been published by Carnegie-Mellon University Press. The book contains more than 30 poems written in the last four years in such varied locations as Greece, Costa Rica, Thailand and Salisbury.

This is the fourth volume of poetry published by Waters, whose previous work, Anniversary of the Air, won the Towson State University Prize for Literature. The Baltimore Sun praised that collection as being "generous in spirit" and "exquisitely crafted."

Waters also has been honored with The Pushcart Prize, one of this nation's highest poetry awards, and received England's National Young Poets Award.

"I'm much more a poet of eyesight than vision," Waters said about himself. "Responding to the physical world...shopping malls and all...not going beyond or through or pretending it (physical reality) doesn't exist..." his works instead explore "experiences triggered by the senses."

This April, an interview titled "A Poet of Eyesight: a Conversation With Michael Waters" appeared in Post-Confessionals: Conversations With American Poets of the Eighties, published by Fairleigh Dickinson University Press. Waters was the youngest male poet to be included in this anthology of interviews which included Pulitzer Prize winner, Rita Dove, Charles Wright, William Matthews, Gregory Orr and Stephen Dunn.

No armchair traveler, in recent years Waters has been a participant in the Al-Merbid International Poetry Festival in Baghdad, Iraq; co-director of the Catskills Writer's Workshop at Hartwick College in Oneonta, NY; a fellow at Yaddo, the writers' colony in Saratoga Springs, NY; and contributing editor of The Pushcart Prize.

Waters also has been asked to read his work at several colleges and universities recently, including, Hollins College, VA, Washington and Lee University, Memphis State University, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the State University of New York (SUNY) at Stony Brook, SUNY at Farmingdale and St. Andrews College, NC. He will again be reading at Salisbury State in the fall.

Waters is now working on his fifth volume, Bountiful. New poems have been appearing in Poetry, The American Poetry Review and other journals. Critical essays and reviews also have been appearing in North Dakota Quarterly, The Ohio Review and other publications.

The Burden Lifters was written with the support of a fellowship in creative writing awarded by the National Endowment for the Arts, and with the support of a literary work-in-progress grant from the Maryland Arts Council. All of the poems had appeared in such journals at Poetry, The Georgia Review, The Missouri Review, The Ohio Review and The North American Review before inclusion in this collection. It is available at the SSU Book Rack.

This summer he, his wife, Robin, and their daughter, Kiernan, will be traveling in Greece where the SSU professor has written much of his poetry.

Championships Make Perfect Weekend in Women's Sports

by Barry Packer

Too often, and undeservedly so, women's spots take a back seat.

But, the "Dawn"ing of championship caliber teams and championships themselves have brought Salisbury State's women's teams to the forefront. This past weekend, behind coaches Dawn Chamberlin and Dawn McCrumb, the Sea Gull women's lacrosse and softball teams won nine out of ten games and two championships.

Chamberlin's lacrosse team closed out its regular season with a 14-5 win against St. Mary's before heading into the Maryland State Tournament. A round robin affair it had teams from seven schools going head-to-head for a total of six games in two days.

On Saturday, before the rains came, the Gulls beat Essex 8-6 and nationally ranked Frostburg for the second time in just over a week, 4-2. And, with that momentum, the Gulls headed into Sunday ready to take on the remaining four challengers.

First, the Gophers of Goucher College fell 11-2. Then the Gulls avenged their loss to Georgetown by beating the Hoyas 7-5. Notre Dame was next to fall at 6-5, followed by Anne Arundel, 10-5, giving SSU a perfect 6-0 mark, the title and 11 all-stars.

Selected for the first team was offensive powerhouse Andie Phillips. In the six games she scored 16 goals and dishes off two assists. Joining Phillips on the first team were defense Sue Siok and goalie Lisa Kallis. The second team included Cyndee Van Derbeek, Stephanie Ellsworth, Kim Marlatt and Niki Dorn, while the third team featured Becky Clark, Michele Ghezzi and Teresa Kelly, with freshman Cheryl Ish being selected as an alternate.

And, as Chamberlin's success just had the proper combination of offense and defense, so too did McCrumb's gem on the diamond.

The clutch hitting of lead-off hitter Karen Sipple, catcher Debe Clarke and centerfielder Kristy Keil, the aggressive play of left fielder/designated hitter Tracey Short, and the total domination of pitchers Amy Geppi and Terri Sharpless, were the perfect recipe for cooking Marywood's Pacer's.

Consider the fact that in the three games against Marywood, SSU's two pitchers, allowed only 11 singles. Sharpless only allowed a single to left to the fourth batter in the opener; that was it. Yet, she lost 2-1 in a game that started Saturday and finished Sunday. While she struck out nine, the Gull offense could only muster five hits off Marywood starter Lauri Schlauch.

But that changed in game two when the Gulls pounded out 17 hits in the 12-2 win. Sipple, Diane Bickford and Short all had three hits, while Keil, Clarke and Julee Taylor each had two. Geppi scattered eight singles and issued nary a walk in going the distance.

In the final game of the series, Sharpless was her ususal dominant self, mixing up her pitches superbly, coming with her 70 mph fast ball on occasion.

On the offensive side of the ledger, Short scored three times, while Christie Ivison chipped in with a multi-hit game, in the 6-0 conference-clinching shutout, teamed up with field hockey, volleyball and men's tennis they gave the Gulls the Eastern States Athletic Conference All-Sports Trophy for the second straight year.

A weekend that was so close to perfect.

The "Dawning"ing of the awareness that the women's sports teams can come through in the clutch, too.

Health Center Bulletin Board Display Missing

Within the past year the display board used by the Health Center has disappeared. It was used for orientation programs, Parent's Weekend and other occasions, so it was often out of the Health Center.

If anyone has seen it, please contact the Health Center at 543-6262.

Microelectronics, SSU and NASA

The world of microelectronics may exist in a realm of high-technological mystery for most of us but, you may be assured, it affects virtually every aspect of our daily lives.

Chances are your car, television and household appliances are controlled by a covey of microprocessors small enough to fit into a matchbox. The rapid strides taken by this new field of technology results in the replacement of cumbersome electrical and mechanical parts by ever smaller components that provide the "organs" for everything from radios to rockets.

The Richard A. Henson School of Science and Technology has been quick to recognize a need created by this burgeoning field. "Back in the early 1980s we decided to look into the feasibility of creating a course that would educate physics majors in the design and application of microprocessors," said Dr. Frederick Kundell, chair of the Chemistry and Physics Department.

"We had a hunch that there was a lack of qualified engineers in the field and, if our assumptions proved correct, we wanted to be quick off the mark in providing a training ground to fill the demands being made by local companies," said Kundell. "To our amazement we found such a course would be one of the first if not the first in the world!"

With funding from the state of Maryland and from local industry, Kundell and his associates set about installing a program. Dr. Charles R. McKenzie is the head of the project.

"Our first task was to set up a laboratory providing students with a thorough basic knowledge of microelectronics," said McKenzie. "We purchased a variety of basic microprocessor trainers, microcomputers and testing equipment."

Within this concentrated program students who have graduated high school with good science and math grades are groomed in the complexities of a world peppered with terms like analog, digital, integrated circuit, semi-conductor, linear and non-linear. They become familiar with the "languages" of microprocessing, and at ease with interfacing.

"We realized early on that the most effective way of providing our students with state of the art experience—essential in such a rapidly changing field—was to integrate with local industry," said Kundell. "I'm pleased to say that interpret in movement two contemporary choral works which are accompanied by electronic tape. These two choral works, "In the Beginning of Creation" by Daniel Pinkham and Leslie Bassett's "Collect," were both composed in 1970. A third sacred text, "First Corinthians 13," completes the contemporary choral trio of related works.

Other choral works to be featured are two of Gabriel Faure's most popular choral compositions his "Ave Maria" Opus 93 for two-part women's voices, and the very beautiful "Cantique de Jean Racine" which will be sung in French. Robert Schumann's "Zigeunerleben" (A Gypsy's Life) will be performed with piano accompaniment and percussion and will be sung in German.

Accompanists for the evening's performance are Wynel Cooper, a freshman from Snow Hill, majoring in music, and Scot Hawkins, a junior from Salisbury majoring in English. Hawkins was the accompanist for the Wicomico High School Concert Choir while a student there under the direction of Phyllis Oldham.

The choral program concludes with folk songs from around the world accompanied by Randy Ashcraft (guitar), Mickey Justice (mandolin and banjo) and Mark Jensen (string bass). Three folk songs arranged by Robert DeCormier will be sung in Italian, Yiddish and English. Respectively, they are "Bella Bimba," Tumbalalaika" and "Raise a Ruckus Tonight!" "Down in the Valley," a Kentucky folk song arranged for men's double tenor-double bass (TTBB) voices and a choral scherzo based on the well-known tune "Oh, Dear! What Can the Matter Be?" will complete the program.

The Concert Choir is a non-auditioned ensemble of mixed soprano-alto-tenor-bass (SATB) voices which performs a variety of choral literature from all musical periods and styles. The choir's membership is open to all undergraduate and graduate students with vocal singing ability and those who have some understanding of musical notation.

Membership does not require an advance audition, however, each singer is expected to sing an informal and private voice placement interview with the conductor. One-third of the choir's personnel are majoring in music performance and music education and the other two-thirds of the choir represent such diverse disciplines as communication arts, psychology, education, business administration and sports medicine.

Karna is a member of the Department of Music faculty. He is responsible for private voice and class voice instruction, fundamentals of music and conducting. Most recently Karna sang the role of Aeneas in the SSU Collegium performance of Henry Purcell's "Dido and Aeneas" and was one of the choral adjudicators at the All-Shore High School Choral Festival held at Easton High School as well the Tri-County High School Choral Festival held at Leonardtown High School, St. Mary's County.

On Saturday, May 13, at 1:30 p.m. the Choir will perform for the Maryland American Choral Directors Assocation Conference at Chesapeake College in Wye Mills.

There is no admission charge to the May 15 concert and the public is invited. For more information call the Department of Music at 543-6385.

of the company. The student dancers will teach the movements to the community volunteers at an initial rehersal. The interaction of the two groups is "part of the whole experience," Turner explained.

Lerman will be at the University for final rehearsals before the performances.

Lerman, at age 41, has been described in Dance Magazine as "one of our younger living national dance treasures." Her concepts of dance and some of her works have been shown and discussed on national television networks because of her insistence that "dancing...is a natural activity for all human beings...All people should have access to (dance) no matter what their ages, abilities or body types."

In Washington she is the founder and artistic director of a non-profit organization called the Dance Exchange. This is an umbrella which includes her main performing ensemble, the Liz Lerman/Exchange.

Her core performing troupe often works in concert with another called Dancers of the Third Age, a group which is in heavy demand across the country and is composed of dancers ranging in age from 60 to over 80.

The members of Dancers of the Third Age had little or no stage training before falling under the spell of Lerman's teaching and choreography.

It is choreography which does not, as one critic wrote, "make a sideshow" of the abilities of the elderly performers, but makes use of the confidence and expressiveness they can give to simple movements as they relate to the theme of the dance.

Lerman explains that the use of the word "Exchange" for her organization reflects the idea that "the creative experience can be shared by everyone and the sharing or exchange can strengthen the arts."

By combining the elderly dancers with her core group of young professionals, she sets neither group apart from the other and creates a whole new world of modern dance.

A picture in Life magazine in 1962 shows Lerman at age 14 dancing on the White House lawn in traditional white satin and tulle with a group of students from the Interlochen arts camp in Wisconsin.

She was reared in that state with her mind set on a career in classic ballet. She studied and taught dance in Washington and elsewhere and as she matured as a person and as a dancer, began to turn in new directions.

A woman of intelligence, wit and energy, she has not only opened new doors to older people who have never danced before, but uses dance to express ideas about life, personal experience and even such issues as environmental pollution or the defense budget not usually associated with the world of dance.

For its Spring Concert the Salisbury Dance Company will also perform numbers which have been choreographed by some of its own members. This includes a multi-media work titled "Man's Nature," relating to this spring's series of environmental lectures and programs on the "Man and Nature" theme.

There will be two performances of the Spring Dance Concert, one of Saturday, May 13 at 8 p.m., and the other on Sunday, May 14, at 2 p.m., in Holloway Hall Auditorium. Admission is free to SSU students, faculty and staff.

the response has been terrific and of great advantage to both the University and the organizations working with us."

One such organization is the National Aeronautics and Space Administration at Wallops Island, where co-op students work 16 hours a week during term time and full time throughout breaks.

"This is a very beneficial program for both parties," said William W. West, head of the Telemetry Systems Department there. "The students from SSU are prepared and make a real contribution when they come here. We have been very pleased with the capability of the students to assist in the design and development of telemetry data handling devices which are used in the process of sending and receiving data from ground to space or space to ground."

Further integration with industry is anticipated from a proposal for a new $2 million electronic testing and research center on a two-acre site in Salisbury's Northwood Industrial Park which, if approved, will serve as an advance electronics training workshop for SSU students and a test center for local businesses.

The 10,000 square foot building will be owned and operated by the University and will house equipment for tests including pressure, temperature, sensitivity and vacuum. Local companies expected to use the facility include K&L Microwave and Grumman Electronics.

"With such a strong microelectronics program in place we expect to make a valuable contribution both locally and in the field in general," said Kundell.

A PUBLICATION FOR UNIVERSITY FACULTY, FRIENDS, STAFF AND STUDENTS

MAY 11, 1989 VOL. X NO. 28

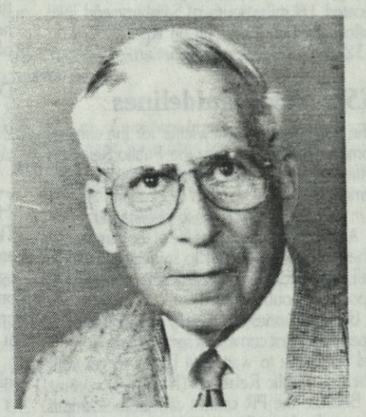
Kaplan Commencement Speaker

Dr. Max Kaplan, one of the country's leading scholars in the field of leisure studies, will address the 1989 graduating class at Salisbury State's Commencement Exercises on Saturday, May 27, at 10 a.m. at the Wicomico County Youth and Civic Center.

Kaplan's teaching career spans 43 years, including 12 years at the University of Illinois in the Sociology and Music Departments, six years at Boston University as the director of the Arts Center and 10 years at the University of South Florida where he founded and directed the Leisure Studies Program.

A resident of Auburn, AL, Kaplan was named the 1988 Jay B. Nash Scholar by the American Association for Leisure and Recreation. AALR is a professional organization dedicated to the development of school and community programs of leisure services and recreation education. It is one of the six associations making up the American Alliance for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance.

Perhaps best known of Kaplan's 25 books are Leisure in America: A Social Inquiry, Leisure: Theory and Policy, Lifestyle and Lifespan: Perspectives for Gerontology and Foundations and Frontiers of Music Education. Additional writings include 40 chapters in other books and some 200 articles and book reviews in U.S. and foreign journals.



Dr. Max Kaplan

He has lectured on leisure studies, as well as the arts in society and aging, in all Western and most Eastern European countries. His consulations have included governmental bodies in Iran, Israel, Puerto Rico, Canada, Denmark and the U.S., and with educational and corporate bodies such as the Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts, several state arts councils, the World Leisure and Recreation Association, the National Council on Aging and, presently, the Barbershop Harmony Society.

He was co-founder of the Greater Boston Youth Symphony, organizer of Community Arts (a pioneer arts council in Champaign, IL), president of the Research Commission on Leisure for the International Sociological Association and is on several dozen "Who's Who" lists.

His musical activities include several solo recitals, a member of the faculty quartets at the University of Colorado and the University of South Florida and concertmaster of the Pueblo (CO) and Montgomery (AL) symphonies.

For more information on Commencement, call the Public Relations Office at 543-6030.

Faculty Accomplishments

Dr. Edna Quinn

Dr. Thomas Erskine

Erskine, Quinn, Fulbrights

Dr. Thomas Erskine and Dr. Edna Quinn, who are husband and wife, have recently been selected to participate in the prestigious Fulbright Lecturer Program.

Erskine, a professor of English, will teach English and American literature at Yarmouk University in Irbid, Jordan. Quinn, an associate professor of nursing, will teach nursing theory and maternal/child nursing at the Jordan University of Science and Technology, a branch of Yarmouk also in Irbid.

They leave for Jordan in August and begin teaching in September. The two semester program concludes in June.

Some 3,500 college and university faculty vie each year for some 1,000 Fulbright Scholarships. Since the Fulbright program began in 1947, over 24,000 American scholars have taught, conducted research, lectured and traveled abroad, nurturing their professional growth and gaining personal satisfaction.

The benefits of the Fulbright experience, however, are not limited to the grantee only. The home and host institutions as well as their students benefit from the experience by becoming more international in their outlooks.

Distinguished Faculty Awards

The names of the three faculty members who will receive the 1989 Distinguished Faculty Award were announced at the May meeting of the University Forum.

Winners of the award must have demonstrated excellence in teaching, scholarship and service during the previous year.

This year's award recipients will be: Dr. Francis Kane, chair of the Philosophy Department; Dr. Andrew Pica, Chemistry and Physics Department; and Dr. Marvin Tossey, Social Work Department.

Formal presentations of the awards will take place early in the fall. The three winners will receive engraved plaques and will be honored at a reception. Details of their accomplishments will be published in the SSU News at that time.

Finals Schedule Conflict

A student who has more than two final examinations scheduled for the same day need not take more than two of these exams on that day. If the student wants to reschedule examinations, then the following procedure must be completed no later than May 15.

The student must provide each of the professors involved with a written copy of the complete examination schedule, including course numbers, section numbers and names of professors.

The professors whose final examinations are scheduled third, fourth, fifth, etc. on the day in question will then reschedule their exams for that student, choosing days in the final examination period on which the student has fewer than two exams. The professors will also inform the student prior to May 19 when and where the examinations will be given.

In the event that a professor finds it particularly difficult to reschedule an examination, that professor may contact the other professors involved to make alternate arrangements so that all exams are given to the student while meeting the above requirements.

Any student who has more than one examination scheduled for the same time period should contact the professors involved to make alternate arrangements.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Department of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or whereever you may reside. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep your first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away from alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit area or a place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you need an escort to or from your car, call the Department of Public Safety, 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Department of Public Safety, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

Furnace Town Festival

Furnace Town presents its May County Music Festival on Sunday, May, 14, from 1-6 p.m.

Featured will be the bands Almost Country and Homespun, an antique car show and an assortment of food including crab cakes and oyster fritters.. Admission is $3 per person or $5 per family.

Furnace Town, the 19th century industrial village site of the Nassawango Iron Furnace, is located 16 miles south of Salisbury and five miles north of Snow Hill on Rt. 12. Call 632-2032 for more information.

SSU News Guidelines

The SSU News is a newletter for the campus community published by the Public Relations Office each Thursday during fall and spring semesters, unless noted. The deadline is 4:30 p.m. on the Friday prior to publication.

Any story relating to the life of the campus, whether it be of interest to students, faculty or staff, is welcomed. Newsletter items should be typed and double-spaced.

Because stories are usually proofed and typeset on a first come, first served basis, don't feel you have to wait until Friday to get your article to Public Relations (HH 264).

Because the PR cannot canvas the campus personally, the staff is grateful to those who keep it current on the activities and issues affecting University life. Public Relations looks forward to hearing from you.

Poet to Read

Poet Marilyn Nelson Waniek reads from her books and collections of verse on Thursday, May 11, at 7:30 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the University Center.

Her books are For The Body (1978) and Mama's Promises (1985), both published by Louisiana State University Press, and two collections of verse for children.

Waniek was born in Cleveland, OH in 1946, and spent her childhood as an Air Force brat in Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Colorado, California, New Hampshire and Maine. She graduated from the University of California, Davis and holds postgraduate degrees from the University of Pennsylvania (M.A.) and the University of Minnesota (Ph.D).

Married and the mother of two young children, she is a professor of English at the University of Connecticut, Storrs.

Athletic Trainer Grad Assistant Sought

Salisbury State is seeking two graduate assistant athletic trainers. Desirable applicants should possess or be eligible for NATA Certification, CPR Instructor Certification and Red Cross Certification. Salary or stipend will be $5,500 for the year.

The Department of Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics services the University through instruction, recreation and athletic programs encompassing 18 varsity sports. Salisbury State is a member of the NCAA-Division III, has an excellent internship program and is committed to academic integrity and personal growth among student-athletes. The campus recreation program services over 1,500 students annually.

To apply, send a letter of application, resume and three letters of recommendation to: Athletic Training Search, Department of Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics, Salisbury State University, Salisbury, MD 21801.

The application deadline is May 30; in person interviews are optional, but desirable. Salisbury State is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer. Qualified women, minorities and disabled are encouraged to apply.

SSU Students to Work With Internationally Known Choreographer

The University will bring Salisbury into the heart of national and international contemporary dance at its Dance Company's annual Spring Concert on May 13 and 14.

Liz Lerman, internationally known choreographer from Washington, D.C., is coming to the campus to recreate for local performance her "Fanfare for the Common Man" to the music of Aaron Copland.

There will be two performances of the Spring Dance Concert, one of Saturday, May 13 at 8 p.m., and the other on Sunday, May 14, at 2 p.m., in Holloway Hall Auditorium. Admission is free to SSU students, faculty and staff.

Other Culture Workshop

The Office of International Programs at UMES and the Department of Sociology and Anthropology at Salisbury State are sponsoring a workshop on "Living and Working in Another Culture," on Thursday, May 11, from 5:30-9:30 p.m. at the University Center.

The purpose of the workshop is to provide information and guidance for persons going on or considering short-term or long-term assignments overseas, particularly into non-Western societies. An objective of the workshop is to enhance one's personal skills in adapting to a new cross-cultural setting with understanding and sensitivity.

For more information call Bosserman at 543-6435.

P/T Aquatic Director Sought for Summer

Part-time assistant aquatic director is needed May 28 - August 31, minimum 20 hours per week.

Qualifications include current Advanced Lifesaving, Water Safety Instructor, First Aid and CPR. A Pool Operation Certificate is desirable. Previous experience in pool management and teaching at all levels of swimming is desired.

Schedule is variable. Must be available for some weekends and evenings. Pay is commensurate with experience, starting at $6 hour.

Submit resume, letter of application, proof of certifications and three references to Rosie Barretta, Aquatic Director, Maggs Physical Activity Center, SSU, Salisbury, MD 21801 on or before May 15. Phone 543-6357.

Salisbury State is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer. Qualified women, minorities and the disabled are encouraged to apply.

Summer Jobs

The Work Experience Office still has summer positions available for on-campus employment. Jobs are in all areas of the Physical Plant and Dining Services and assorted clerical positions.

For more information go to the Work Experience Office in the Maintenance Building, room 101, or call 543-6216.

Girl for Hardmans

Cpt. Sue Hardman gave birth to a baby girl on April 19 at PGHMC.

The baby's name is Marianne. She weighed 8 lbs, 2 oz. and was 19 inches. The proud father is Gene Hardman.

Cpt. Hardman is on a six-week maternity leave and is doing well. She teaches freshman and sophomore military science classes. This is the couple's first child.

Their address is R.D. 1, Box 98S, Laurel, DE 19956.

The successful candidate will work closely with University offices/committees such as Admissions, Campus Recreation, Program Board and the Cultural Affairs Committee. The position is within the Student Life Division and reports directly to the director of Student Activities and Organizations.

The salary is competitive and based on experience and qualifications. The position is available July 1. Letter of application and the names, addresses and phone number of three references should be sent to Dean of Students, Salisbury State University, Salisbury, MD 21801. Applicants whose resumes are received by May 27 will be given first consideration.

Salisbury State is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer. Qualified women, minorities, and the disabled are encouraged to apply.

1989 Commencement Information

Please Read Carefully

1. Commencement will be held at 10 a.m., Saturday, May 27, in the Wicomico County Youth and Civic Center. No tickets will be required, but it is suggested that graduates limit their number of guests to no more than eight. All graduates are requested to form for processional at 9 a.m. in the side corridors adjacent to the main arena on the first floor of the Civic Center.

2. The Commencement speaker will be Dr. Max Kaplan.

3. Caps, gowns, master's hoods, nursing pins and caps will be distributed through the University bookstore beginning May 1. These may be retained by the graduates and need not be returned following the ceremony. Announcements may be purchased in the bookstore beginning April 10, but quantities are limited and will be sold on a first come, first served basis. Problems with caps and gowns will be corrected prior to the ceremony by the bookstore employees at the Civic Center, in Flanders Room No. 1 near the snack bar to the left of the arena entrances. Bookstore hours Monday through Friday are 9 a.m. -7 p.m. The bookstore will be open on Friday, May 26, from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. Graduates must pick up the necessary items before 7 p.m. on that date.

4. The faculty marshals will give each graduate a 3x5 card containing his/her name and the School (e.g. Perdue School of Business). You will be asked to stand by School and degree as you are presented to President Bellavance by your School Dean for the conferring of the degree. The card is then given to Dr. Nelson Butler when the graduate reaches the stage, and at the same time, the graduate is to announce his/her name. Dr. Butler will then know who the person is and how to pronounce the name correctly. The name on the card must not be changed for any reason.

5. During the recessional graduates and faculty are to return to the area where they assembled prior to the ceremony. They should not stop or congregate in the lobby.

6. Degree candidates who do not plan to participate in the Commencement Exercise must notify the Registrar's Office by calling 543-6150 no later than Monday, May 22. All graduates will receive a blank folder at Commencement, and all diplomas will be mailed approximately six weeks after the ceremony.

7. Faculty and staff are requested to form the processional at 9:15 a.m. in the Midway Room of the Civic Center. Faculty members are required to attend; those who are unable to do so should so inform their respective School dean.

8. The first aid staff of the Civic Center will be on duty in the office on the right side of the foyer entrance just outside the main arena.

9. A brief reception for graduates and their guests will be held immediately following Commencement in the Midway Room of the Civic Center. The reception is being sponsored by the Salisbury State University Alumni Association and at the conclusion of the ceremony you will be an official alumnus of Salisbury State University.

10. The ROTC Commissioning Ceremony will take place at 2 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the University Center on Saturday, May 27. The University community is cordially invited to attend.

11. The School of Nursing will hold a Pinning Ceremony on Friday, May 26 at, 8 p.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium.

12. Bachelor of Science candidates will assemble in the north corridor of the Civic Center (to the left when entering from the front doors and on the side nearest the Mall). Candidates with last names beginning with the letters A through M, Kenneth William Mann, will report to Drs. Bozman and Shaffer and will line up alphabetically along the inside wall, facing east (the rear of the building). You will sit in Section 1 on the seating chart. Bachelor of Science candidates beginning with Christopher Peter Manouse through the letter Z will report to Drs. Wulff and Rossi, and will line up alphabetically along the windows, facing west (the front of the building). You will sit in Section 7 on the seating chart.

13. Bachelor of Arts candidates will assemble in the south corridor of the Civic Center (to the right after you enter the front doors on the side nearest to the park). Candidates with last names beginning with the letters A through M, James Todd McCauley, will report to Drs. Basehart and Delpaż at the rear of the corridor and will line up alphabetically facing east (the rear of the building). You will sit in Section 2 on the seating chart. Bachelor of Arts candidates with last names beginning with M, Brian Edward McClellan, through the letter Z, will report to Dr. St. Martin and will line up alphabetically in the corridor toward the Midway Room (against the wall nearest the rear of the building). You will sit in Section 3 on the seating chart.

14. Bachelor of Arts in Social Work candidates will assemble in the south corridor of the Civic Center (to the right after you enter the front doors and on the side nearest the park). You will report to Dr. Arlene White and line up alphabetically in the corridor toward the Midway Room (against the wall nearest the front of the building) You will sit in Section 3 on the seating chart, behind the B.A. candidates.

15. All Master's Degree candidates (M.Ed., M.A., M.B.A., M.S.) will enter the Civic Center at the Midway Room front entrance (not the entrance leading to the main arena), and report to Drs. Hedeen and Lewis in that corridor near the Midway Room. They will direct you into a line according to your degree. You sit in Section 4 on the seating chart.

16. Dress Code

This is a formal academic occasion and should be viewed as such in dress and demeanor.

The academic robe is black and the recommended dress, therefore, is:

A. Women

1. Black dress shoes (or some other dark color) - no white or other light color.
2. Dress hose.
3. A dress which does not have a high neckline or stand-up collar. It should not show above the V-neckline on the robe.

Since the academic robe has a zipper front closing, the dress will show only near the lower hem and therefore, preferably should be a dark color, rather than white or very light.

4. No visible jewelry. Fraternity or sorority pins/ribbons may be worn; these are academic emblems and are not considered jewelry as such.
5. No flowers on the academic robe, and no flowers are to be carried to the stage.

B. Men

1. Black dress shoes (or some dark color) - no sneakers or light color sport shoes with thick rubber soles.
2. Dark color socks - no white athletic socks.
3. Dress slacks, preferably a dark or neutral color.
4. Dress shirt, preferably white, or a light color.
5. Dress tie (four-in-hand tie with windsor knot). (Shirt collar and tie will show above the V-neckline of the academic robe.)
6. Suit coat or sport coat will not be seen under the robe and is, therefore, optional (the Civic Center is air-conditioned).
7. No visible jewelry. Fraternity or sorority pins/ribbons may be worn; these are academic emblems and are not considered jewelry as such.

C. Both

1. The mortarboard (academic hat) is to be worn with the front point over the forehead below the front hairline, and so the flat board is parallel to the floor. (Not worn on the back of the head with the board pointing upward.) No decoration of any kind is to be placed on the mortarboard.
2. Candidates for the bachelor's degree should come into the auditorium with the tassel on the right, hanging near the right eye. After the degrees are conferred the tassel is shifted to the left side. The signal for shifting the tassel will be given by the President and Vice-President for Academic Affairs when they touch their mortarboards.
3. Candidates for the master's degree should place the tassel at the left front of the mortarboard prior to entering the auditorium and should not shift it.
4. Master's degree candidates will wear the robe, but will carry the hood over the left arm until they reach the stage, where it will be placed on the candidate.

17. Graduation Decorum—Graduation ceremonies are by their very nature festive occasions. The festivity manifests itself in many ways including the dress of the students and faculty adorned in academic regalia and the warmth, joy and satisfaction of accomplishment. The ceremonies are also marked by seriousness where the actual conferring of degrees signifies long hard work on the part of everyone involved: students, faculty, administrators, parents and spouses. As a consequence of the serious nature of the ceremony, students are expected to maintain a measure of decorum consonant with the occasion. Applause and other recognition of the conferring of degrees should be limited to a joint effort at the conclusion of each graduation group, (e.g., B.S., B.A., etc.).

Kane Scholarship

Those wishing to make contributions to the Martin S. Kane Memorial Scholarship Fund should make them through the SSU Foundation. Contact the Office of Research and Development at 543-6175 for additional information.

Mrs. Robertson Dies

Dr. Harry J. Robertson, a clincial professor in the Perdue Shcool of Business, lost his wife, Thelma, to cancer on May 2. The University community sends its condolences to the Robertson family.

Lion's Fundraiser

The Snow Hill Lions Club will hold its annual chicken barbecue and auction on Saturday, May 20.

Chicken dinners may be picked up at the Lions Den from noon-5 p.m. Seating will be available for those who care to dine at the Lions Club. Tickets are available from any Lion at $5. A limited number of tickets will be available at the Lions Club on the day of the dinner.

Dinner will consist of half a barbecued chicken, real baked beans, applesauce and rolls.

The auction will start at 2 p.m. on the premises. A sampling of the items available are automobile services from local dealers, decoys from Bob Ross (Chincoteague show winner), dinner at many local restaurants, farm supplies and pet supplies.

The proceeds from the event will be used to sponsor the Lions' many charities.

Volunteers Needed

Please help. Salisbury State will host the League of American Wheelmen National Rally on June 30-July 4 and many volunteers are needed. The University will have some 1,200 bicylists on campus during that time, most from off the Shore.

Their daily itinerary will feature at least one ride, workshops, meals and a social event. Assistance in making our visitors stay an enjoyable one is needed in several areas.

Please call Joe Gilbert, vice president of Administration and general chairman of this year's rally, at 543-6012 for details.

University of Baltimore Scholarships Available

Several scholarships for Eastern Shore residents planning to attend the University of Baltimore in the fall are available.

Undergraduate scholarships are $500 per semester for four semesters, graduate scholarships are $1,000 a semester for two semesters and School of Law Scholarships are $500 per semester for six semesters. Minimum GPA to apply for the scholarships is 3.25.

Qualifed candidates should be accepted for admission to the University of Baltimore for the fall semester and obtain a scholarship application from The University of Baltimore, 1304 St. Paul St., Baltimore, MD 21202.

The scholarship application should be received by the University of Baltimore prior to June 1. The application will be forwarded to the Eastern Shore Chapter of the University of Baltimore Alumni Association for interview of the applicants.

Health Insurance Info

Attention Health Insurance Program Members- If you have had trouble with your particular health insurance company Shirley King in the Personnel Office would like to hear from you.

A report is being compiled to see if there are common re-occuring problems which might be resolved by better education of program users or if the problems are of such a nature they should be brought to the attention of program administrators.

Your particular problem may not be resolved, but it might point out a weakness in the manner in which information is dispensed which could be corrected for future open enrollment periods.

If possible, please write the details of your problem and include copies of any statements you received from the health program relating to the incident. You may also call 543-6035 and tell Shirley King your complaint if you prefer.

Technical Analyst Opening

Salisbury State has an immediate opening for a technical analyst in the Department of Computer Services.

The person in the position will be responsible for technical support in many areas. The primary areas will be VAX/VMS system management and networking. The University is expanding its Ethernet network using fiber optic, coaxial and twisted-pair mediums. Existing terminals and 3-Com LANs will be connected to the network using DECnet and LAT protocols. Future expansion may consist of UNIX (TCP/IP), DEC PCSA and Macintosh based systems.

The candidate should have a bachelor's degree in a computer related field with two to four years experience with hardware, software and wiring in a VAX minicomputer and IBM microcomputer environment. The candidate should also be conscientious, self-motivated and possess good communication skills.

This is a permanent state position with benefits. Starting salary range is $27,000-$35,000. All applicants must submit a letter of application, resume and a list, with addresses and telephone numbers, of at least three references, no later than June 2 to Department of Computer Services, Attn: Maxine Fox, Salisbury State University, 1101 Camden Avenue, Salisbury, MD 21801-6837.

Salisbury State University is an affirmative action/equal opportunity employer. Qualified women, minorities and the disabled are encouraged to apply.

SSU Catholics at Regional Conference

On the weekend of April 7-9, the first annual Delmar Organization of Catholic Students (DOCS) conference was held. Students attended this conference from colleges and universities throughout the Wilmington Diocese.

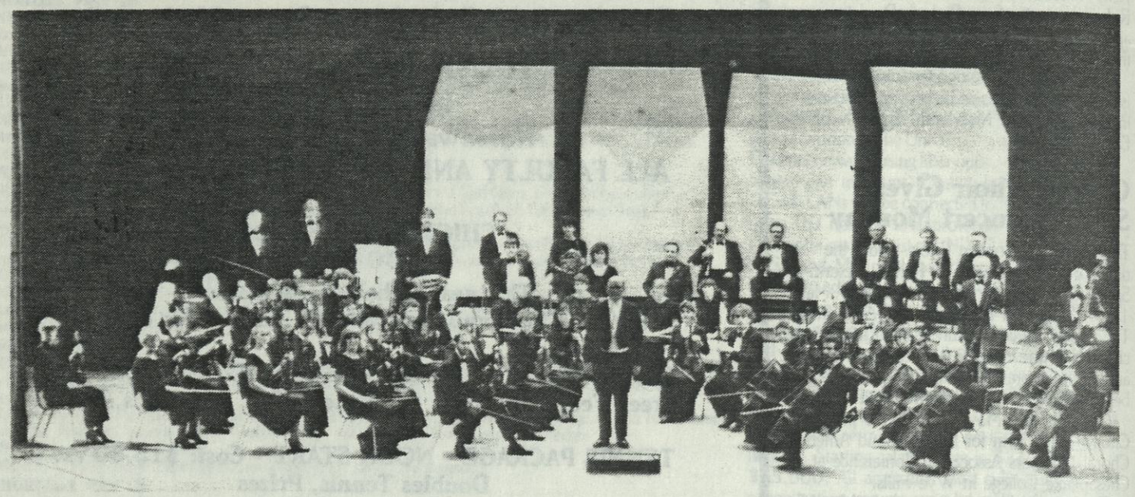
Salisbury State was represented by Kathie Gers, Joey Hagee, Christine Kavolyak, Yvonne Minor, Jennifer Quick, Tracy Spinwebber, Dawn Spranger and John Staiger. The purpose of the conference was to provide a "network" among the college students from all the different schools in the diocese.

At the conference, the constitution was ratified, various speakers were heard and representatives were elected from each of the campuses. The DOCS representatives from Salisbury State were chosen; Gers and Hagee will represent Salisbury at all DOCS meetings next semester.

A the end of the conference awards were handed out to the various campuses for their achievements during the school year. Salisbury State's Newman Club won the coveted "Experience the Movement" award for the most growth and accomplishment in its club.

The Newman Club meets every Wednesday at 7:15 p.m. in the Pocomoke Room of the University Center. Catholic masses are held every Sunday at 3:30 p.m. in the Nanticoke Room of the University Center.

Symphony Orchestra Concert Features New World Symphony



The Salisbury Symphony Orchestra at Salisbury State presents a concert on Friday, May 19, at 8 p.m. in Holloway Hall.

"Our feature work of the evening will be Symphony No. 9 in e minor: From the New World, by Czech composer Antonin Dvorak," said Dr. Thomas G. Elliot, Music Department chair and Symphony conductor. "It's a big, dramatic work that allows all sections of the orchestra room to shine."

Written in 1883, during a period of time that Dvorak was director of the National Conservatory of Music in New York, "The New World" was originally intended as a sketch or study for an American opera based on the story of Hiawatha. Although the complete opera was never written, references to Americana themes such as the dance of Pau-Puk-Keewis and Minnehaha's funeral are present in the symphony. Most will recognize the Negro spiritiual theme in the Largo second movememnt as "Goin' Home." While music critics over the years have debated the nationalistic influence of American music in Symphony No. 9, few can deny the electrifying impact of the work.

The concert also features the debut solo performance of Carrie Work, a senior at Wicomico Senior High School. Work has been playing the French horn since the fifth grade, and has studied with a number of accomplished French hornists, including private lessons with Elliot, Arthur Brooks from the Annapolis Brass Quintet, and David Bakkegard, principal horn with the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra. She was recently awarded a scholarship to continue her study of music at the Peabody Conservatory of Music in Baltimore.

The beloved Mozart Horn Concerto No. 3 in E-flat, K447, is the vehicle for Work's performance. There is a beautiful cadenza at the end of the first movement that gives a glimpse of the true accomplishment of Work's playing.

But the romantic, emotional second movement is the pièce de résistance in this performance.

"I try to put myself in Mozart's place when I play this piece," Works said in a recent interview. "It's an emotional piece that shows off the beautiful timbre of the horn." When asked if she was nervous about the upcoming debut, Work responded, "I'm anxious to bring this music to the audience. I really love to play for people."

Also of special note in the program is Aaron Copland's "Quiet City." It presents a departure from the rest of the program, in that it is "American classical music." As such, it presents a very different feeling from the European-dominated classical music that is usually heard at concerts. Though it contains none of the folk themes so often associated with Copland's music, the orchestration and themes remind the listener of that most American of music, jazz.

The opening solo of the trumpet, lamenting and lonely, has a distinctly blues sound. And the "call and response" technique between the solo instruments and the orchestra is a direct influence of American gospel music.
The trumpet, played by Michele Gullo, band director at Woodbridge Junior/Senior High School in Bridgeville, DE, and the English horn, played by Julie Barton, an intensive care nurse at Nanticoke Hospital, take the spotlight in "Quiet City." Against the backdrop of the strings, the two wind instruments soar in high clear tones above the busy streets of "The Quiet City" at night.

Other pieces are the "March and Procession of Bacchus," from the ballet "Sylvia" by French composer Leo Delibes, and a selection of songs performed by soprano Katherine Turner. They include two "Lieder" by Richard Strauss, and two arias by Giacomo Puccini. The well-known aria "Un bel di," from the opera "Madam Butterfly," is performed by Turner.

Tickets are $6 and are available at all Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council outlets, at the Arts Council Office in the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center, and at the door on the night of the concert.

For more information about the SSO or the concert, call Lacey Work at 742-3671.

A PUBLICATION FOR UNIVERSITY FACULTY, FRIENDS, STAFF AND STUDENTS

MAY 18, 1989 VOL. X NO. 29

Six Hundred Nine to Graduate

Salisbury State's Class of 1989, with 554 bachelor's degrees and 55 master's degrees candidates, will be recognized for its academic achievements at the University's 66th Commencement on Saturday, May 27, at 10 a.m. in the Wicomico County Youth and Civic Center.

The class of 1989 includes 322 receiving Bachelor of Science degrees, 202 receiving Bachelor of Art degrees and 30 receiving Bachelor of Arts in Social Work. In addition, 55 students will receive master's degrees; 29 the Master of Education, 13 the Master of Arts, three the Master of Science and 10 the Master of Business Administration.

On Friday, May 26, at 8 p.m., a pinning ceremony will honor the University's Nursing graduates in Holloway Hall Auditorium. On Saturday, May 27, at 2 p.m., 14 cadets from the University Reserved Officers Training Corps will be commissioned second lieutenants in the U.S. Army in a ceremony in the Wicomico Room of the University Center.

Dr. Max Kaplan, one of the country's leading scholars in the field of leisure studies, will deliver the Commencement address.

Kaplan's teaching career spans 43 years, including 12 years at the University of Illinois in the Sociology and Music Departments, six years at Boston University as the director of the Arts Center and 10 years at the University of South Florida where he founded and directed the Leisure Studies Program.

A resident of Auburn, AL, Kaplan was named the 1988 Jay B. Nash Scholar by the American Association for Leisure and Recreation (AALR). AALR is a professional organization dedicated to the development of school and community programs of leisure services and recreation education. It is one of the six associations making up the American Alliance for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance.

Perhaps best known of Kaplan's 25 books are Leisure in America: A Social Inquiry, Leisure: Theory and Policy, Lifestyle and Lifespan: Perspectives for Gerontology and Foundations and Frontiers of Music Education. Additional writings include 40 chapters in other books and some 200 articles and book reviews in U.S. and foreign journals.

Symphony Orchestra Concert

The Salisbury Symphony Orchestra at Salisbury State performs its second concert of the 1988-89 season on Friday, May 19, at 8 p.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium.

The program includes the Mozart Horn Concerto No. 3 in E-flat, K447, featuring the debut solo performance of Carrie Work, a senior at Wicomico Senior High School. Work has received a scholarship to the Peabody Conservatory of Music in Baltimore, where she plans to continue her study of the French horn.

There also will be two songs and two opera arias sung by popular soprano Katherine Turner, a voice instructor at Salisbury State. Turner, who has a master's degree in opera from the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia, has appeared in a wide variety of local productions, as well as under the baton of such conductors as Max Rudolf, Zubin Mehta, Lorin Maazel, Erich Leinsdorf and Leonard Bernstein.

Featured work of the evening is Symphony No. 9 in E minor: "From the New World," by Antonin Dvorak. One of Dvorak's best loved works, the "New World" Symphony is recognized by many for its use of the American folk song "Goin' Home" as the motto theme for the second movement.

The Salisbury Symphony Orchestra was established in 1986 by Dr. Thomas Elliot, chair of the Department of Music at SSU. Elliot has brought the musicians along with progressively more difficult and complex music, much to the delight of both the players and the audience. Of the December 16, 1988 concert performance, R. Scott Wilson wrote in his critique, "...the audience was convinced that this group had come a long way...This was a well-coached group playing beautiful music...The Salisbury Symphony has arrived."

Tickets are $6 and are available at all Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council outlets, at the Arts Council Office in the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center, and at the door on the night of the concert.

For more information call Lacey Work at 742-3671.

Nurses Celebrate 10th Anniversary May 26

Salisbury State and the Peninsula General Hospital Medical Center will jointly celebrate on Friday, May 26, the 10th anniversary of the first class to graduate from the University's School of Nursing and Health Sciences.

Invitations to a day-long program of activity have gone out not only to graduates of the University's comparatively new nursing school but all over the country to nurses who had previously graduated from the nursing program which had been in existence at Peninsula General Hospital since 1905.

Phyllis Banks, assistant professor who heads the anniversary committee, said that the number of nurses educated in this community and now living in California alone would be enough to

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Department of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever you may reside. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep your first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away from alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit area or a place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you need an escort to or from your car, call the Department of Public Safety, 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activities or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Department of Public Safety, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

Summer Jobs

The Work Experience Office still has summer positions available for on-campus employment. Jobs are in all areas of the Physical Plant and Dining Services and assorted clerical positions.

Attention Student Organizations

Now is the time to register for the Student Organization Showcase to be held on Monday, September 18, in Red Square.

This will be a great time to show off your organization and recruit new members! Check your mailbox for registration materials and send them back as soon as possible.

Education Honorary Initiates

The University Kappa Delta Pi Honor Society in education held its annual initiation Monday, May 1, in the University Center. Forty-three undergraduate and 16 graduate students and two faculty members were inducted into the Rho Eta Chapter.

Kappa Delta Pi is an international honor society for prospective and active teachers. Undergraduates must have a grade point average of 3.0 or better and demonstrate leadership ability. Graduate students must have a grade point average of 3.5 and evidence leadership in the field of education.

Dr. Thomas E. Bellavance, president of Salisbury State, welcomed the initiates and their families. A video titled "We are Kappa Delta Pi," prepared by the national society, was presented by Dr. Geraldine Rossi, associate professor of education and Kappa Delta Pi counselor.

The initiation ceremony was handled by the retiring officers: Jane Long, of Delmar, president; Linda Outten, of Millsboro, DE, vice president; and Tammy Johnson, of Salisbury, secretary. Rossi installed the new officers: Laura Foley, of Ocean Pines, president; Danielle Hoageson, of Georgetown, DE, vice president; Marcia Weber, of Smyrna, DE, secretary; Laurie Boyd, of Pickerington, OH, treasurer; and David English, of Delmar, historian/reporter.

The keynote address was given by Dr. Michael Hickey, superintendent of the Howard County Public Schools. Dr. K. Nelson Butler, vice president of Academic Affairs, concluded the meeting.

Tuition Assistance Program

Applications for the Eastern Shore Tuition Assistance Program are available in the Financial Aid Office for the 1989-90 academic year.

This scholarship is for juniors and seniors who are commuting to Salisbury State from either Northampton or Accomack counties in Virginia.

The deadline is August 11.

Wilderness Photos

Photographs taken during the past Salisbury State Wilderness Orientation Programs will be exhibited in the Atrium Gallery May 29 - June 27.

The Atrium Gallery is located in the University Center main concourse, next to the bookstore. The show will be open to the public daily form 9 a.m. - 9 p.m.

The Gallery in Blackwell Library is closed for the summer.

Most of the photographs will feature Algonquin Provincial Park in Ontario, Canada where students canoe through crystal lakes and camp and cook by a wood fire. Other photos show students backpacking and cycling in Maine which is another option provided for students to satisfy the fall orientation requirement for freshmen. All photographs were taken by students or staff.

Algonquin '89 will be the sixth year the program was offered by the University.

For more information call the University Center at 543-6100.

Poetry Reading

To celebrate the publication of The Scarab, the University's literary magazine, poet David Rivard with student authors from SSU will read from their works in Nanticoke Room A of the University Center on Thursday, May 18, at 7:30 p.m.

Rivard, winner of the 1987 Agnes Lynch Starrett Poetry Prize for his first book, Torque, was born in Fall River, MA. He studied anthropology at Princeton University and received his MFA from the University of Arizona. The National Endowment for the Arts awarded him a 1986 Creative Writing Fellowship, and he has twice been a fellow at the Fine Arts Work Center in Provincetown. He currently teaches at Tufts University near Boston.

Of Rivard's poetry, the poet Michael Ryan has said, "The best of these poems are deeply moving and combine a fine ear for contemporary idiom with a startling narrative gift: wonderful stories wonderfully told, and thought about, and made into poetry."

The reading, sponsored by The Scarab, is free and open to the public.

Non-Golfers Wanted

Totally incompetent so-called golfers are wanted to help form a foursome for the Whack & Hack Open.

Quality control is being exercised, and if you have any real ability, this foursome isn't for you. Most importantly, they don't want you to embarrass them! Ideally, the square root of your age (in years) should exceed the total number of times you have played golf.

If your golfing skill level is sufficiently low, get out your golf racquet and give Dave Parker a call at 543-6141.

Student Leaders

Yes, you know who you are; officers, would-be-officers and other motivated students who are interested in extracurricular activities.

"Leading is the Power to Change" is the name of the next Student Leadership Development Workshop to be held on Saturday, September 16, from 9 a.m. - 4:30 p.m.

Registration information is in your mailbox. Please send it back by the end of this semester. The workshop, which includes breakfast and lunch, is free and all interested students and advisors are encouraged to attend.

Arts Grants

The Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council has announced a June 9 deadline for grant applications for arts programs. Any arts projects taking place between January 1 - June 30, 1989 are eligible for funding consideration. Also, any organization wishing to apply for a grant for an entire season of performances or exhibits taking place between July 1, 1989 - June 30, 1990 should apply at this time.

To be considered for a grant an organization must show that the activity is in the field of the arts, of community benefit, is fiscally sound and has the potential for self-support in the future. The applicant organization must be a not-for-profit tax-exempt organization.

A packet of information including application forms is now available at the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council, located in the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center, or by calling 543-ARTS.

Lide at Forum

Dr. William E. Lide, chair of the Department of Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics, attended The Roundtable National Forum on Education on April 12-14 in Indianapolis, IN.

He was elected secretary of the National Organization of "The Roundtable Associates," which sponsors this forum annually. As an associate or member of this organization, Lide moderated a session lead by college and university presidents.

Grogan Book Published

Dr. William Grogan, associate professor with the Department of Biological Sciences, recently published a book dealing with entomology titled, The Predaceous Midges of the World.

Grogan co-authored the book with Dr. Willis Wirth, retired from the Systematic Entomolgy Laboratory, United States Department of Agriculture, Beltsville, MD. The technical book was published as Flora and Fauna Handbook No. 4 by E.J. Brill, NY.

The book deals with the classification and identification of all 45 groups of predaceous midges of the true fly family Ceratopogonidae, tribe Ceratopogonini on a worldwide basis. Wirth and Grogan describe in the book 10 new groups and eight new species of Predaceous midges as well as providing illustrations of all groups and keys for identification.

In addition the book provides a radical new classification scheme for these tiny insects in that it combines two tribes into one large tribe, the Ceratopogonini.

The book will be used by entomologists and aquatic biologists to assist them in identifying these small 1-3 millimeter insects that they commonly collect and study during the course of their research on freshwater wetlands. These small flies are also important pollinators of cacao or chocolate in South America and as predators in controlling rice crop insect pests of southeast Asian countries like Thailand.

Critical Thinking Seminar Evaluated by Welsh

James Welsh, associate professor of English and editor of Literature/Film Quarterly, served as an outside consultant recently to evaluate a faculty development program funded by a New Jersey Humanities grant at Sussex County Community College (SCCC) in Sparta, NJ.

The purpose of the program was to teach faculty from several different academic disciplines "Methods and Applications of Critical Visual Thinking." The program was proposed by Dr. Terence Ripmaster, assistant to the academic dean at the SCCC, and designed by Dr. John O'Connor, an expert in the history of technology and professor of history at the New Jersey Institute of Technology.

O'Conor, the founding editor of Film & History, has specialized in the critical use of film and television materials in the teaching of history. He edited American History/American Film: Interpreting the Hollywood Image (Frederick Ungar, 1979), a groundbreaking study for the historical applications of cinema, and American History/American Television: Interpreting the Video Past (Frederick Ungar, 1983), which Warren Sussman of Rutgers considered the "starting point . . . for anyone interested in understanding how television shaped our history and our history shaped television."

O'Connor is also the author of Teaching History with Film and Television, published by the American Historical Association in 1987.

Working with the Historians Film Committee of the American Historical American Association, O'Connor has recently produced a teaching package designed for close visual analysis in the classroom, available in two formats, but most effective on laser video discs, which give the instructor complete control over the visual examples, enabling the teacher to recall individual frames and images for scrutiny.

O'Connor presented his methodology to the faculty at Sussex Community College and then asked them to design their own classroom applications in courses as varied as business, psychology, foreign languages and comparative religion. At the seminar, Welsh was called upon to evaluate the results of these teachings experiments, which had been funded by a $6,000 grant.

"The results were impressive," Welsh noted. "All of the faculty had made intelligent applications, and all of them reported enthusiastic responses from their students." In fact, Welsh believes that a similar program could be very beneficial at Salisbury State.

The O'Connor program incorporates many of the concerns administrators at Salisbury State have articulated," Welsh said, "in particular, methods of critical thinking and analysis, intensive writing, and writing across the curriculum. O'Connor's approach combines these elements in ways that both faculty and students will find interesting."

O'Connor, who will be teaching this summer in Scotland, would like to try his approach at other colleges and universities outside New Jersey. "It's an opportunity waiting to be tapped," Welsh said.

Malone and Dillon Computer Bowl Judges

Mary Lou Malone and Tom Dillon of the Computer Science Department were selected to judge at the fourth annual Maryland Computer Bowl at the University of Maryland Baltimore County on April 22.

The Maryland Computer Bowl is an academic computer competition for high school students throughout Maryland. Teams of students were judged on general computer literacy and programming abilities. Trophies and scholarships were awarded to the winning teams.

Judges were selected from colleges, universities, industry and the public school systems. In addition to evaluating student performances, judges were treated to a Judge's Luncheon where they met with colleagues and shared topics of interest.

The Maryland Computer Bowl is sponsored by the Maryland electric utility companies, the Maryland Council of Teachers of Mathematics, the Maryland Association of Science Teachers and the Maryland Instructional Computer Coordinators Association. Plans are underway for an Eastern Shore Computer Bowl.

Tardiff Lecture

Dr. Robert M. Tardiff, associate professor of mathematical sciences, recently delivered a lecture to the Mathematics Colloquium of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

The colloquium is a regularly scheduled event during which an expert in a field of mathematical research addresses the department. "U. Mass.'s mathematics department, some 60 strong, is nationally ranked in several areas," Tardiff said. I felt honored to be invited to speak."

Tardiff received his Ph.D. in mathematics from U. Mass. in 1975 and was lecturing several of his former professors. His presentation was titled "Transitivity of Dominates." This is a problem in theoretical mathematics connected to the construction of natural methods for measuring distances—an abstract branch of geometry. The complete solution is still unknown.

Tardiff is spending a portion of his sabbatical leave at U. Mass. He has been working closely with Professor B. Schweizer, a recognized world expert in probabilistic metric spaces, which have had applications in physics.

"Contrary to popular belief, mathematics is a science which continues to expand as we explore areas heretofore not considered, or had thought insoluable," said Tardiff. Applications range from the physical to the metaphysical, including ways not yet known."

Ehrhardt at Conference

Ursula Ehrhardt, assistant professor of art history and director of the University Gallery, recently took part in a statewide conference on the French Revolution for Delaware high school teachers and students. The day-long conference, held at Dover High School, was sponsored by the Delaware Committee on the French Revolution and the Delaware Humanities Forum.

Ehrhardt spoke on "The Art of the Revolutionary Era." Other participants, from the faculties of the University of Delaware and Delaware State College, discussed the history, philosophy and music of the period, the rights of women and French-American relations.

The conference was organized by Charlotte M. Ward, who teaches French at Dover High School and is vice-chairwoman of the Delaware Committee on the French Revolution, and Brigitte H. Smith, the committee's chairwoman.

Phi Kappa Phi Holds 15th Annual Initiation

Academic excellence was in the spotlight on Sunday, May 7, to climax Student Recognition Weekend. The event was the 15th annual initiation ceremony of the Salisbury State University chapter of the Honor Society of Phi Kappa Phi.

Thirty-seven undergraduates were recognized as having achieved the highest academic records at Salisbury State. Membership in Phi Kappa Phi is the highest academic award which the University grants. It is reserved for seniors who are in the top 5 percent of their class and for juniors who are in the top 2.5 percent of their class. The new members are: Charlotte F. Baker, Janet W. Bell, Elizabeth F. Cassidy, Nancy J. Chernoff, Monica E. Cofiell, Jeffrey S. Dail, Maureen E. Demarest, Peter J. Engler, Brenda Figgs, Michael R. Forbush, Jeffrey T. Greenwood, Emily E. Griffith, Karen S. Griffith, Shelley A. Hubbell, Jo Ann Johnson, Wayne A. Judkins, Susan E. Karhu, Debra L. Kent, Patricia A. Keyes, Susan L. Maddox, Bon E. Mattax, Cecilia A. Myers, Anita A. Robinson, Patti A. Schlegel, John G. Shortt, Jean M. Shumate, Robert E. Simms, David V. Smullen, Leslie A. Stufft, Scott P. Sweitzer, Jeri L. Tankersley, Dale S. Tremper, Kathy A. Ward, Robyn L. Wesley, Lisa S. Wilcox, Thomas C. Williamson, Jr. and Brian J. Withnell.

Dr. Bellavance was the guest speaker at the ceremony. He addressed the question, "What is academic excellence?"

The initiation ceremony was followed by a banquet. Among the honored guests were Dr. K. Nelson Butler, vice president of Academic Affairs, and Rev. Clifton Hope, emeritus minister at Asbury United Methodist Church who has been a member of Phi Kappa Phi since he was a member of the faculty at Virginia Polytechnic Institute in 1943. He recently joined the Salisbury State chapter.

Nursing Honor Society Induction

The Salisbury State University Nursing Honor Society inducted 13 new members in a ceremony held Tuesday, April 4. They will join the organization as it seeks to be a charter member of the international honor society Sigma Theta Tau which recognizes academic excellence and professional leadership in the areas of education, research, publication, administration and clinical practice in nursing.

The ceremony's keynote speaker was Adelaide Eckardt, Master of Science in Nursing, president-elect of the Maryland Nurses' Association.

Other honored guests included Dr. Vickie Lambert, associate dean of nursing at Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, OH, and Dr. James Vail, associate professor, George Mason University, who were present to evaluate the honor society's activities and give suggestions for further development.

The SSU Nursing Honor Society was established in 1979 and has inducted over 140 members including new inductees and alumni from the nursing community. The 13 new members are: Susan Bailey, R.N.; Sally Bennett; Clara Colwell, R.N.; Mary Elliott, R.N., B.S.N.; Robin Ford, R.N.; Nancy Flurer, R.N., B.S.N.; Karen Griffith; Jeanne Scharf Hornick, R.N.; Donna Horsey, R.N.C.; Laura Mahan; Donna Stubbs, R.N., B.S.N.; Ruth Sullivan, R.N.; and Renee Valliant, R.N.

Nurse Practitioner Sought

Salisbury State invites applications for the position of nurse practitioner.

As a member of the University Health Care staff responsibilities include providing for the health care needs of University students. Present staff includes two nurse practitioners, two R.N.s, a part-time physician and a medical aide/secretary. The Health Center operates with the Student Life Division. Starting date is July 1.

Candidates must be licensed or eligible for licensure in Maryland.

Salary range is $28,000 - 32,000 with excellent benefits.

Candidates should send a resume, cover letter and the names of three references to Barry M. King, Office of the Dean of Students, Salisbury State University, Salisbury, MD 21801. Applications received by June 2 will receive first consideration by the search committee.

Salisbury State is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer. Qualified women, minorities and the disabled are encouraged to apply.

1989 Commencement Information

Please Read Carefully

1. Commencement will be held at 10 a.m., Saturday, May 27, in the Wicomico County Youth and Civic Center. No tickets will be required, but it is suggested that graduates limit their number of guests to no more than eight. All graduates are requested to form for processional at 9 a.m. in the side corridors adjacent to the main arena on the first floor of the Civic Center.

2. The Commencement speaker will be Dr. Max Kaplan.

3. Caps, gowns, master's hoods, nursing pins and caps will be distributed through the University bookstore beginning May 1. These may be retained by the graduates and need not be returned following the ceremony. Announcements may be purchased in the bookstore beginning April 10, but quantities are limited and will be sold on a first come, first served basis. Problems with caps and gowns will be corrected prior to the ceremony by the bookstore employees at the Civic Center, in Flanders Room No. 1 near the snack bar to the left of the arena entrances. Bookstore hours Monday through Friday are 9 a.m. -7 p.m. The bookstore will be open on Friday, May 26, from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. Graduates must pick up the necessary items before 7 p.m. on that date.

4. The faculty marshals will give each graduate a 3x5 card containing his/her name and the School (e.g. Perdue School of Business). You will be asked to stand by School and degree as you are presented to President Bellavance by your School Dean for the conferring of the degree. The card is then given to Dr. Nelson Butler when the graduate reaches the stage, and at the same time, the graduate is to announce his/her name. Dr. Butler will then know who the person is and how to pronounce the name correctly. The name on the card must not be changed for any reason.

5. During the recessional graduates and faculty are to return to the area where they assembled prior to the ceremony. They should not stop or congregate in the lobby.

6. Degree candidates who do not plan to participate in the Commencement Exercise must notify the Registrar's Office by calling 543-6150 no later than Monday, May 22. All graduates will receive a blank folder at Commencement, and all diplomas will be mailed approximately six weeks after the ceremony.

7. Faculty and staff are requested to form the processional at 9:15 a.m. in the Midway Room of the Civic Center. Faculty members are required to attend; those who are unable to do so should so inform their respective School dean.

8. The first aid staff of the Civic Center will be on duty in the office on the right side of the foyer entrance just outside the main arena.

9. A brief reception for graduates and their guests will be held immediately following Commencement in the Midway Room of the Civic Center. The reception is being sponsored by the Salisbury State University Alumni Association and at the conclusion of the ceremony you will be an official alumnus of Salisbury State University.

10. The ROTC Commissioning Ceremony will take place at 2 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the University Center on Saturday, May 27. The University community is cordially invited to attend.

11. The School of Nursing will hold a Pinning Ceremony on Friday, May 26 at, 8 p.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium.

12. Bachelor of Science candidates will assemble in the north corridor of the Civic Center (to the left when entering from the front doors and on the side nearest the Mall). Candidates with last names beginning with the letters A through M. Kenneth William Mann, will report to Drs. Bozman and Shaffer and will line up alphabetically along the inside wall, facing east (the rear of the building). You will sit in Section 1 on the seating chart. Bachelor of Science candidates beginning with Christopher Peter Manouse through the letter Z will report to Drs. Wulff and Rossi, and will line up alphabetically along the windows, facing west (the front of the building). You will sit in Section 7 on the seating chart.

13. Bachelor of Arts candidates will assemble in the south corridor of the Civic Center (to the right after you enter the front doors on the side nearest to the park). Candidates with last names beginning with the letters A through M. James Todd McCauley, will report to Drs. Basehart and Delpaz at the rear of the corridor and will line up alphabetically facing east (the rear of the building). You will sit in Section 2 on the seating chart. Bachelor of Arts candidates with last names beginning with M. Brian Edward McClellan, through the letter Z, will report to Dr. St. Martin and will line up alphabetically in the corridor toward the Midway Room (against the wall nearest the rear of the building). You will sit in Section 3 on the seating chart.

14. Bachelor of Arts in Social Work candidates will assemble in the south corridor of the Civic Center (to the right after you enter the front doors and on the side nearest the park). You will report to Dr. Arlene White and line up alphabetically in the corridor toward the Midway Room (against the wall nearest the front of the building) You will sit in Section 3 on the seating chart, behind the B.A. candidates.

15. All Master's Degree candidates (M.Ed., M.A., M.B.A., M.S.) will enter the Civic Center at the Midway Room front entrance (not the entrance leading to the main arena), and report to Drs. Hedeen and Lewis in that corridor near the Midway Room. They will direct you into a line according to your degree. You sit in Section 4 on the seating chart.

16. Dress Code

This is a formal academic occasion and should be viewed as such in dress and demeanor.

The academic robe is black and the recommended dress, therefore, is:

A. Women

1. Black dress shoes (or some other dark color) - no white or other light color.

2. Dress hose.

3. A dress which does not have a high neckline or stand-up collar. It should not show above the V-neckline on the robe.

Since the academic robe has a zipper front closing, the dress will show only near the lower hem and therefore, preferably should be a dark color, rather than white or very light.

4. No visible jewelry. Fraternity or sorority pins/ribbons may be worn; these are academic emblems and are not considered jewelry as such.

5. No flowers on the academic robe, and no flowers are to be carried to the stage.

B. Men

1. Black dress shoes (or some dark color) - no sneakers or light color sport shoes with thick rubber soles.

2. Dark color socks - no white athletic socks.

3. Dress slacks, preferably a dark or neutral color.

4. Dress shirt, preferably white, or a light color.

5. Dress tie (four-in-hand tie with windsor knot). (Shirt collar and tie will show above the V-neckline of the academic robe.)

6. Suit coat or sport coat will not be seen under the robe and is, therefore, optional (the Civic Center is air-conditioned).

7. No visible jewelry. Fraternity or sorority pins/ribbons may be worn; these are academic emblems and are not considered jewelry as such.

C. Both

1. The mortarboard (academic hat) is to be worn with the front point over the forehead below the front hairline, and so the flat board is parallel to the floor. (Not worn on the back of the head with the board pointing upward.) No decoration of any kind is to be placed on the mortarboard.

2. Candidates for the bachelor's degree should come into the auditorium with the tassel on the right, hanging near the right eye. After the degrees are conferred the tassel is shifted to the left side. The signal for shifting the tassel will be given by the President and Vice-President for Academic Affairs when they touch their mortarboards.

3. Candidates for the master's degree should place the tassel at the left front of the mortarboard prior to entering the auditorium and should not shift it.

4. Master's degree candidates will wear the robe, but will carry the hood over the left arm until they reach the stage, where it will be placed on the candidate.

17. Graduation Decorum—Graduation ceremonies are by their very nature festive occasions. The festivity manifests itself in many ways including the dress of the students and faculty adorned in academic regalia and the warmth, joy and satisfaction of accomplishment. The ceremonies are also marked by seriousness where the actual conferring of degrees signifies long hard work on the part of everyone involved: students, faculty, administrators, parents and spouses. As a consequence of the serious nature of the ceremony, students are expected to maintain a measure of decorum consonant with the occasion. Applause and other recognition of the conferring of degrees should be limited to a joint effort at the conclusion of each graduation group. (e.g., B.S., B.A., etc.).

PE Students Join YMCA to Help Those With MS

Until recently, those suffering from multiple sclerosis (MS) were unable to participate in any organized form of exercise and physical therapy. Multiple sclerosis is an often disabling condition of the central nervous system that most frequently strikes white women between the ages of 20 and 40. There is no known cure, and its causes are not known. It often leaves sufferers confined to a wheelchair or without the use of their hands or arms.

However, a new program conceived by the Mid-Delmarva YMCA and Salisbury State's Physical Education Department has helped to change some of that. Twice a week, multiple sclerosis (MS) patients spend an hour involved in activities which they never believed they could do again—swimming, playing and exercising in the YMCA pool.

The program was developed when Carol Largey, aquatics director at the YMCA, wanted to "provide an outlet for the 'special populations' who had no other form of exercise." Her experience as a fundraiser for the MS Society and a lifetime of lifeguarding and swim team coaching provided the perfect background for the project. However, it took the aid of others to actually allow Largey's idea to bear fruit. She first contacted DeAnn Koehler, a physical education instructor at SSU. The idea was to initiate a student intern program from SSU to staff the program. Koehler, recognizing the potential of such a program, enlisted the aid of one of her students, Cathy Bryan, who had a special interest in working with the handicapped. Among the three, the current program began to take shape.

Students in Koehler's Adaptive Physical Education class have two training sessions in which, Largey said, "they learn what it's like to be impaired and in the water." They are blindfolded, have one arm tied behind their backs, or have their legs tied together so that they can better understand and assist "clients," or handicapped individuals. The students have an option of working with either adults or children; especially on Saturdays when children with handicaps ranging from epilepsy to autism come to the YMCA.

The benefits for the clients are enormous. Mae Bringenber, a 64-year-old MS sufferer joyously proclaimed, "When you're in the pool, you're a whole person again. I can be myself!" She added, "I can't say enough about the kids. They're not condescending at all, they're just so helpful." Another client, Marion Causey, has suffered from MS for 40 years and has been "pushing for this (type of program) for a long time." Although she relies on a motorized wheelchair for transportation, she is able to walk in the pool, without assistance. As she said, "I've walked the length of a football field in the pool before, but I can't take a step out of it. I can lift my legs easier with the buoyancy of the water." Causey said that she actually needs the physical therapy the program provides because "what you don't use you lose."

"Personal satisfaction" is what SSU junior Lisa "Fuzz" Kallis receives from working with the clients. She likes to "get them to do what they can and possibly more, with help." Senior Tim Berquist of Towson, MD enjoyed "seeing them get in the water, especially the ones in wheelchairs. They get so excited. If I can help them do that, it's enough fulfillment for me." A predominant feeling among the students is of wanting to share their own good fortune and good health. Koehler reveals that they learn to appreciate their own abilities more instead of taking their talents for granted.

The Saturday program with children is equally valuable. Bryan emphasizes that handicapped children are often "ignored or put in the corner...(Here) they have people who want to be with them. They're just in awe." The children look up to the student helpers as heroes, said Koehler, because they help to "take away the stigma of being handicapped." Although the children's activity is mostly play, there is some therapy involved. Angie Phillips, a 16-year-old girl with epilepsy, spent most of one Saturday morning tossing a ball into the center of an inner tube; this helps her coordination and motor skills, which her mother, Carolyn Phillips, terms as "poor." Carolyn Phillips said that Angie, who suffered brain damage at birth and was diagnosed with epilepsy at nine months of age, loves the water and looks forward to being around the other children. Bryan confirms this feeling, remarking that "the kids may be of different ages, but they relate to each other because they're all handicapped in some way."

Largey and Koehler have plans for continuing the program in the fall semester, but wish that there could be facilities for such a project year-round. Even though there is a summer retreat for MS patients at SSU, they still want to see a permanent program implemented. When asked if she would go to the YMCA on a regular, year-round basis, Causey exclaimed, "I'll be here!"

Graduates returning for the homecoming and celebration will begin the day at 8:30 a.m. with a continental breakfast at the University Center. There will be a banquet at the center at 6 p.m. for returning alumni and guests.

A pinning ceremony for the 1989 graduates of the School of Nursing and Health Sciences is scheduled for 8 p.m. at Holloway Hall. The next day, May 27, the nursing graduates will receive their Salisbury State degrees at the University's commencement ceremonies.

In 1979 Salisbury State awarded Bachelor of Science degrees to the first students to complete a four-year undergraduate program in the newly established nursing school. Since then the School of Nursing and Health Sciences has been fully accredited and has had 500 graduates.

The University's four-year degree program replaced the two-year program for nurses which had been attached to Peninsula General Hospital for almost 75 years.

When the two-year diploma program ended and the new four-year degree program began to be phased in in 1977, alumni of the long-established PGH nursing school were also recognized as alumni of Salisbury State.

The anniversary celebration is being planned jointly by the University and the hospital as a homecoming for both schools.

Banks is being assisted in the planning by Carolyn Fitzgerald and Jane Malone, both members of the hospital staff who are alumni of the old PGH nursing school, as well as faculty from the Salisbury State school.

A featured speaker for the May 26 breakfast will be Margaret C. Jopp, a member of the first graduating class of the Salisbury State School of Nursing and Health Sciences in 1979. She has gone on to earn three graduate degrees including a doctorate in human development from the University of Maryland.

Jopp was already a registered nurse when she enrolled in the new school's second class and earned the baccalaureate degree in nursing.

She represents a notable trend at the School of Nursing and Health Sciences. About one-third of this year's graduating class will be registered nurses taking the opportunity to earn college degrees and open the door to professional advancement.

Virginia Layfield, former director of nursing services and of the School of Nursing will also speak.

Graduates of both the former PGH and the present Salisbury State nursing schools have been asked to bring pictures, books, old nurses' caps, uniforms or other historic items for display at the Atrium Gallery at the University Center during the anniversary celebration.

Edna B. Quinn, a professor of nursing at the school, heads a committee to establish a permanent archive at the Hall of Education Building at PGHMC.

Phi Mu Installation

Phi Mu sorority, the nation's second oldest college organization for women, was recently installed at Salisbury State. This is the third national sorority to form there.

The 32 Salisbury State initiates join over 110,000 collegians and alumnae nationwide as the sorority continues in it's 137th year of existence.

Phi Mu colonized on the SSU campus in April 1988. The sorority accepted the petition of the former SAE Little Sister group.

Recent installation ceremonies included Phi Mu members from across the country. Installing officers were Mrs. Ruth Proctor, National Council member-at-large of Silver Spring; Mary Jane Johnson, National Council colony director of Livonia, MI; and Mrs. Beth Hershey, chapter advisor. Rhonda Russell, membership advisor, and Nancy Cowall, all of Salisbury. Other Phi Mu collegians from Drexel University were in attendance. A reception hosted by Phi Mu followed at the Embers Restaurant in Ocean City. Parents, university administrators and fellow Greeks attended.

SSU Phi Mu members are active in all aspects of campus life, including the Salisbury State Program Board, WSUR student radio station, the Student Senate and University judicial boards, the Dance Company, and various other academic and faculty committees.

Special community service programs sponsored by the SSU chapter have included fundraising for Project Hope, one of Phi Mu's national philanthropies, and the Children's Miracle Network Telethon, which is held annually. Its members have received the Campus Life Award, and been named to the Dean's List, Phi Eta Sigma (the freshman honor society), the honors program and "Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities."

The new Phi Delta chapter at SSU is Phi Mu's fourth chapter in Maryland. The others are located at Johns Hopkins University, the University of Maryland Baltimore County and Western Maryland College.

Founded in 1852 at Wesleyan College in Georgia, Phi Mu is committed to a philosophy of academic excellence and personal and social development.

For more information on Phi Mu activities at SSU, contact Lisa Fossett, public relations chair, at 742-5435.

Volunteers Needed

Please help. Salisbury State will host the League of American Wheelmen National Rally on June 30-July 4 and many volunteers are needed. The University will have some 1,200 bicylists on campus during that time, most from off the Shore.

Their daily itinerary will feature at least one ride, workshops, meals and a social event. Assistance in making our visitors stay an enjoyable one is needed in several areas.

Please call Joe Gilbert, vice president of Administration and general chairman of this year's rally, at 543-6012 for details.

University Center Director's Hours

The University Center director's office will be open from 8 a.m. - 4 p.m., Monday - Friday, beginning May 30. The office will resume regular hours on Tuesday, September 5.

School of Business Position Available

The Franklin P. Perdue School of Business is seeking a full-time contractual faculty member to teach courses in business law.

The candidate must have a J.D. from an A.B.A. accredited law school and preferably an M.B.A. and/or B.S. in business administration.

To apply, send resume to Professor Debbie L. Mescon, The Franklin P. Perdue School of Business, Salisbury State University, Salisbury, MD 21801-6860. Deadline for applications is June 1, 1989.

Salisbury State University is an affirmative action/equal opportunity employer and encourages qualified women, minorities and disabled persons to apply.

Technical Analyst Opening

Salisbury State has an immediate opening for a technical analyst in the Department of Computer Services.

The person in the position will be responsible for technical support in many areas. The primary areas will be VAX/VMS system management and networking. The University is expanding its Ethernet network using fiber optic, coaxial and twisted-pair mediums. Existing terminals and 3-Com LANs will be connected to the network using DECnet and LAT protocols. Future expansion may consist of UNIX (TCP/IP), DEC PCSA and Macintosh based systems.

The candidate should have a bachelor's degree in a computer related field with two to four years experience with hardware, software and wiring in a VAX minicomputer and IBM microcomputer environment. The candidate should also be conscientious, self-motivated and possess good communication skills.

This is a permanent state position with benefits. Starting salary range is $27,000-$35,000. All applicants must submit a letter of application, resume and a list, with addresses and telephone numbers, of at least three references, no later than June 2 to Department of Computer Services, Attn: Maxine Fox, Salisbury State University, 1101 Camden Avenue, Salisbury, MD 21801-6837.

Salisbury State University is an affirmative action/equal opportunity employer. Qualified women, minorities and the disabled are encouraged to apply.

Mrs. Robertson Dies

Dr. Harry J. Robertson, a clincial professor in the Perdue School of Business, lost his wife, Thelma, to cancer on May 2. Mrs. Robertson, at age 64, was a 1979 graduate of SSU.

The University community sends its condolences to the Robertson family.

MCEA Bus Trip

MCEA Chapter No. 72 is going to Atlantic City, NJ, on Saturday, June 3. The bus leaves from Maggs Gym at 7 a.m. and returns at 9:30 p.m. that same evening. The cost to MCEA chapter members is $7, non-members $17. Participants receive $9 in coins and a $5 deferred voucher at the casino. "It is guaranteed to be a fun-filled trip," said Barbara Keene. Call her at 543-6350 to reserve a seat. Food and beverages are allowed on this bus.

Director, University Bookstore

Salisbury State invites applications and nominations for the position director of the University bookstore. Responsibilities include establishing management policies and procedures, determining staff needs, budgeting, controlling inventory, directing promotional efforts and maintaining a financially sound operation.

Qualifications include a bachelor's degree in business administration or related major, completion of NACS management seminars, advanced seminars and CSP certification, experience in retail operations, understanding of marketing, merchandising and inventory control and knowledge of textbook and used book market and point of sale computer systems. Interpersonal and supervisory skills are essential. Salary is competitive based on education and experience.

The 12-month position reports directly to the Dean of Students and is available July 1. Applications and names of three current references should be mailed to the Dean of Students, Bookstore Search Committee, Salisbury State University, Salisbury, MD 21801. The application deadline is May 25.

Salisbury State University is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer. Qualified women, minorities and the disabled are encouraged to apply.

Have a safe and relaxing summer!

A PUBLICATION FOR UNIVERSITY FACULTY, FRIENDS, STAFF AND STUDENTS

SUMMER 1989 VOL. X NO. 38

Perdue School Construction

Construction began in January, on the renovation of Salisbury State University's Holloway Hall so that it will house The Franklin P. Perdue School of Business.

The $2.2 million project, due to be completed and operational by the spring semester of 1990, was funded through state appropriations approved at last year's General Assembly. The main portion of School will be located on the first floor of the north and east wings of Holloway Hall facing College Avenue.

"Frank Perdue's $2.5 million endowment of the School of Business in 1986," said Dr. Thomas E. Bellavance, president of Salisbury State, "enabled us to begin fulfilling the enormous potential this School has to offer the region and the state. Now we will soon have a new facility, a community resource, which will reflect the caliber of programs offered at the School."

A unique feature of the renovated Perdue School will be computer instructional laboratories with software control centers. The computer labs will be used to keep students abreast of ever-developing technology and its application at all levels of business from the family farm to international marketing and investment. Also featured will be a large general purpose classroom and several case rooms, which will be central to the School's instructional program. The case rooms will be designed in tiers like small auditoriums to give opportunities to large groups of students for close association and discussion with professors and visiting lecturers.

The School will also have administrative offices for the dean of the School and staff, faculty offices, a student lounge and offices for area service organizations such as the Small Business Institute.

When the project is complete all of those rooms and offices will bear the names of businesses and individuals who have made a financial investment in the School.

"A major gift to the Perdue School is a solid and lasting investment in this region's future," said Dr. Gary L. Pielemeier, vice president of Research and Development at Salisbury State. "A named room secures that investment. It is visible assurance that the donor is a permanent shareholder in an historic venture."

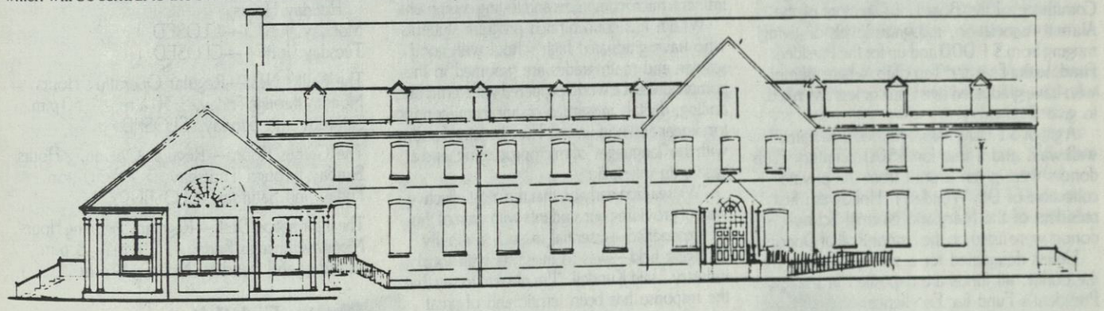
Dr. Timothy Mescon, dean of the Perdue School, expanded on the significance the multimillion dollar renovation project will have on SSU and the entire Eastern Shore. "Our new facility," said Mescon, "will offer research, continuing education and communication links between the University and the area's business and industry. It will give talented young people the opportunity to get a top level business education close to home.

"For local businesses," he continued, "it will mean that well-trained management personnel will no longer have to be recruited from out of the area. The Perdue School of Business will enrich this community with high quality graduates trained on the Shore to work on the Shore."

The Perdue School has some 1100 undergraduate and graduate students. Undergraduates pursue degree programs in accounting, business administration and economics as well as concentrations in finance, marketing, management and information systems management. The business administration major is the most popular on campus, attracting almost 20 percent of the undergraduate students.

A variety of options are available to the M.B.A. student, including the recently initiated and highly popular Executive M.B.A., an intensive 20-month program for individuals who currently hold management positions.

Architects for the project are Colimore/Clarke Associates of Annapolis and Baltimore. The general contractor is Gillis Builders, Inc. of Salisbury.



Research Center Opens

The Research Center for Delmarva History and Culture at Salisbury State University received several important new collections relating to the diverse historical development and growth of the Peninsula.

A collection of family letters written by Eastern Shoremen in the 1830s through the Civil War era, donated by Mrs. Emily Jefferson Fox, reveal interesting trade ties with the Caribbean, as well as local perspectives on the War. One local resident unashamedly chose Canada rather than the battlefront! Also included in the Fox collection were numerous materials and photographs concerning the early years in Federalsburg.

Another collection of early 19th century letters, business records and deeds offer particularly interesting revelations about an early Wicomico County family and the church named for them, Mills Chapel. This collection also contains intriguing brochures and advertisements for cures for a host of medical ailments.

These documents are the latest additions to a treasure trove of 18th and 19th century materials donated to the Center by John Jacob. An invaluable collection of rare historical maps, most of Maryland, Delmarva and nearby areas, donated to the University by Jacob in 1987, will be transferred to the Center from the Geography Department. Such collections are most unusual and will be only the second cartography collection of its kind in any university in Maryland, other than a more general one in Johns Hopkins.

In addition to providing special archival storage facilities, the Center will make them available to students and other scholars for research and will periodically exhibit them for the public.

The largest collection received in recent weeks is the Tilghman Fertilizer Co. papers. This company which recently closed its doors after 125 years of doing business donated a collection of some 800 business records, company newsletters, photographs and other items chronicling the growth of agriculture and the poultry industry on Delmarva. Several artifacts and related objects were included in the collection which has been assessed at a value of some $6,000. A display of some of the objects in the collection can be seen in the Center.

Welcome to Salisbury State University. We hope your visit here is a pleasant one. We pride ourselves on our friendliness and the attractiveness of our campus. If you encounter any problems whatsoever please contact our Public Relations Office on the second floor of Holloway Hall (the building with the bell tower). For that matter, we'd especially appreciate hearing about our successes!

Salisbury State, which achieved university status in 1988, is a member of the University of Maryland System. We have some 5,000 students who pursue degrees in the liberal arts and the professions through our five schools: The Franklin P. Perdue School of Business, the Richard A. Henson School of Science and Technology, the School of Education and Professional Studies, the School of Liberal Arts and the School of Nursing and Health Sciences.

To find out more about us, contact our Public Relations staff. I hope your visit is an enjoyable one. Please come again.

President, Salisbury State University

The League of American Wheelmen's 1989 National Rally from June 30 - July 4 at Salisbury State University promises to be an action-laden five days. Each day will bring with it an assortment of rides across sublime terrain, informative workshops and exhibits and funfilled special events.

Phonathon Nets $65,000

The Salisbury State University Alumni Association's sixth annual Phonathon has rung up a total of over $65,000 from its campaign, which ended April 5.

"Our goal was to match last year's $55,000, but we didn't dream we'd top it by more than $10,000," said Judy Pielemeier, executive director of the Alumni Association.

Throughout the month-long drive, members of SSU organizations staffed a bank of 18 phones installed in the University Center. Calling started at 6 p.m. and ran until 9:30 p.m., with a break for donated pizza and Pepsi at about 7:30 p.m. Each pledge was heralded by a ringing bell.

"We succeeded in reaching most of the 11,000 members of the Alumni Association," said John Awkward, phone coordinator. "One contact paid unexpected dividends when we phoned a member throwing a party for alumni friends, who were all called to the phone in turn to make a pledge."

A maroon leather paperweight with gold embossing was offered as a challenge gift to the first time pledgers or those increasing their donation over last year's.

Giving clubs, set up by the Fundraising Committee of the Board of Directors of the Alumni Association, recognize levels of giving ranging from $1,000 and up for the President Fund, to the Five and Ten Club, where alumni who have graduated five years or less are asked to give $10 per year.

A gift of $1,000 was rewarded by a named walkway, and a tree for $500. Century Club donors were given a print from the private collection of Dr. Wendell J. Holloway, first president of the Maryland Normal School. All donors were listed on the Honor Roll of Donors.

Unless designated for a specific purpose by the donor, all funds are deposited in the President's Fund for Excellence.

"Alumni donations have increased significantly over the years, rising from $45,000 in 1986," said Pielemeier. "The monies raised boost the funding of projects and scholarships where state grants are insufficient or unavailable.

"Our aim has been to broaden the base of donors, which had dwindled to a small number of people giving substantial amounts," said Pielemeier. "We emphasize that all donations, large or small, count and encourage regular giving. The Phonathon is also the best monitor of the pulse of our alumni. The students, who get a good training before making the calls, make wonderful callers. Alumni respond well to them and often ask about current campus life. It's a good way, too to update notes for the alumni Scene, and hear Alumni suggestions."

SSU organizations taking part in the Phonathon were Pi Lamda Phi, Phi Mu, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Student Nursing Association, Alpha Sigma Tau, Kappa Psi Kappa, Alpha Omega, Zeta Tau Alpha and TKE Little Sisters.

Microelectronics, SSU and NASA

The world of microelectronics may exist in a realm of high-technological mystery for most of us but, you may be assured, it affects virtually every aspect of our daily lives.

Chances are your car, television and household appliances are controlled by a covey of microprocessors small enough to fit into a matchbox. The rapid strides taken by this new field of technology results in the replacement of cumbersome electrical and mechanical parts by ever smaller components that provide the "organs" for everything from radios to rockets.

The Richard A. Henson School of Science and Technology has been quick to recognize a need created by this burgeoning field. "Back in the early 1980s we decided to look into the feasibility of creating a course that would educate physics majors in the design and application of microprocessors," said Dr. Frederick Kundell, chair of the Chemistry and Physics Department.

"We had a hunch that there was a lack of qualified engineers in the field and, if our assumptions proved correct, we wanted to be quick off the mark in providing a training ground to fill the demands being made by local companies," said Kundell. "To our amazement we found such a course would be one of the first if not the first in the world!"

With funding from the state of Maryland and from local industry, Kundell and his associates set about installing a program. Dr. Charles R. McKenzie is the head of the project.

"Our first task was to set up a laboratory providing students with a thorough basic knowledge of microelectronics," said McKenzie. "We purchased a variety of basic microprocessor trainers, microcomputers and testing equipment."

Within this concentrated program students who have graduated high school with good science and math grades are groomed in the complexities of a world peppered with terms like analog, digital, integrated circuit, semi-conductor, linear and non-linear. They become familiar with the "languages" of microprocessing, and at ease with interfacing.

"We realized early on that the most effective way of providing our students with state of the art experience—essential in such a rapidly changing field—was to integrate with local industry," said Kundell. "I'm pleased to say that the response has been terrific and of great advantage to both the University and the organizations working with us."

One such organization is the National Aeronautics and Space Administration at Wallops Island, where co-op students work 16 hours a week during term time and full time throughout breaks.

"This is a very beneficial program for both parties," said William W. West, head of the Telemetry Systems Department there. "The students from SSU are prepared and make a real contribution when they come here. We have been very pleased with the capability of the students to assist in the design and development of telemetry data handling devices which are used in the process of sending and receiving data from ground to space or space to ground."

Further integration with industry is anticipated from a proposal for a new $2 million electronic testing and research center on a two-acre site in Salisbury's Northwood Industrial Park which, if approved, will serve as an advance electronics training workshop for SSU students and a test center for local businesses.

The 10,000 square foot building will be owned and operated by the University and will house equipment for tests including pressure, temperature, sensitivity and vacuum. Local companies expected to use the facility include K&L Microwave and Grumman Electronics.

"With such a strong microelectronics program in place we expect to make a valuable contribution both locally and in the field in general," said Kundell.

University Center & Support Areas Summer Hours

The University Center will observe summer hours as follows:
Monday through Friday, 7 a.m. - 9 p.m.
Saturday and Sunday, Noon - 9 p.m.

Summer hours for individual support areas are as follows:

The Book Rack—Regular Operating Hours
Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. - 7 p.m.
Fridays, 9 .m. - 5 p.m.
Saturday and Sunday, CLOSED
Exception Saturday, July 1—Open 3 - 7 p.m.
Holiday Hours
Saturday, July 1—3 - 7 p.m.
Monday, July 3—Closed from 9 a.m. - 3 p.m.
Open from 3 - 7 p.m.
Tuesday, July 4—CLOSED
Wednesday July 5 through Friday, July 7—CLOSED for inventory

The Post Office—Regular Operating Hours
Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. - 4 p.m.
Saturday and Sunday, CLOSED
Holiday Hours
Monday, July 3—CLOSED
Tuesday, July 4—CLOSED

The Gull's Nest—Regular Operating Hours
Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m.
Saturday and Sunday, CLOSED

The Games Room—Regular Operating Hours
Sunday through Thursday, 3 - 8:30 p.m.
Friday and Saturday, CLOSED

The Information Desk—Regular Operating Hours
Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. - 8 p.m.
Saturday and Sunday, Noon - 8 p.m.

Photo Exhibit

Photographs taken during the past Salisbury State University Wilderness Orientation Programs will be exhibited in the Atrium Gallery May 29 - June 27.

The Atrium Gallery is located in the University Center main concourse, next to the bookstore. The show will be open to the public daily from 9 a.m. - 9 p.m.

The SSU Gallery in Blackwell Library is closed for the summer.

Most of the photographs will feature Algonquin Provincial Park in Ontario, Canada where students canoe through crystal lakes and camp and cook by a wood fire. Other photos show students backpacking and cycling in Maine which is another option provided for students to satisfy the fall orientation requirement for freshmen. All photographs were taken by students or staff.

Alquonquin '89 will be the sixth year the program has been offered by the University.

PE Students Join YMCA to Help Those With MS

Until recently, those suffering from multiple sclerosis (MS) were unable to participate in any organized form of exercise and physical therapy. Multiple sclerosis is an often disabling condition of the central nervous system that most frequently strikes white women between the ages of 20 and 40. There is no known cure, and its causes are not known. It often leaves sufferers confined to a wheelchair or without the use of their hands or arms.

However, a new program conceived by the Mid-Delmarva YMCA and Salisbury State's Physical Education Department has helped to change some of that. Twice a week, multiple sclerosis (MS) patients spend an hour involved in activities which they never believed they could do again—swimming, playing and exercising in the YMCA pool.

The program was developed when Carol Largey, aquatics director at the YMCA, wanted to "provide an outlet for the 'special populations' who had no other form of exercise." Her experience as a fundraiser for the MS Society and a lifetime of lifeguarding and swim team coaching provided the perfect background for the project. However, it took the aid of others to actually allow Largey's idea to bear fruit. She first contacted DeAnn Koehler, a physical education instructor at SSU. The idea was to initiate a student intern program from SSU to staff the program. Koehler, recognizing the potential of such a program, enlisted the aid of one of her students, Cathy Bryan, who had a special interest in working with the handicapped. Among the three, the current program began to take shape.

Students in Koehler's Adaptive Physical Education class have two training sessions in which, Largey said, "they learn what it's like to be impaired and in the water." They are blindfolded, have one arm tied behind their backs, or have their legs tied together so that they can better understand and assist "clients," or handicapped individuals. The students have an option of working with either adults or children; especially on Saturdays when children with handicaps ranging from epilepsy to autism come to the YMCA.

The benefits for the clients are enormous. Mae Bringenber, a 64-year-old MS sufferer joyously proclaimed, "When you're in the pool, you're a whole person again. I can be myself!" She added, "I can't say enough about the kids. They're not condescending at all, they're just so helpful." Another client, Marion Causey, has suffered from MS for 40 years and has been "pushing for this (type of program) for a long time." Although she relies on a motorized wheelchair for transportation, she is able to walk in the pool, without assistance. As she said, "I've walked the length of a football field in the pool before, but I can't take a step out of it. I can lift my legs easier with the buoyancy of the water." Causey said that she actually needs the physical therapy the program provides because "what you don't use you lose."

"Personal satisfaction" is what SSU junior Lisa "Fuzz" Kallis receives from working with the clients. She likes to "get them to do what they can and possibly more, with help." Senior Tim Berquist of Towson, MD enjoyed "seeing them get in the water, especially the ones in wheelchairs. They get so excited. If I can help them do that, it's enough fulfillment for me." A predominant feeling among the students is of wanting to share their own good fortune and good health. Koehler reveals that they learn to appreciate their own abilities more instead of taking their talents for granted.

The Saturday program with children is equally valuable. Bryan emphasizes that handicapped children are often "ignored or put in the corner...(Here) they have people who want to be with them. They're just in awe." The children look up to the student helpers as heroes, said Koehler, because they help to "take away the stigma of being handicapped." Although the children's activity is mostly play, there is some therapy involved. Angie Phillips, a 16-year-old girl with epilepsy, spent most of one Saturday morning tossing a ball into the center of an inner tube; this helps her coordination and motor skills, which her mother, Carolyn Phillips, terms as "poor." Carolyn Phillips said that Angie, who suffered brain damage at birth and was diagnosed with epilepsy at nine months of age, loves the water and looks forward to being around the other children. Bryan confirms this feeling, remarking that "the kids may be of different ages, but they relate to each other because they're all handicapped in some way."

Largey and Koehler have plans for continuing the program in the fall semester, but wish that there could be facilities for such a project year-round. Even though there is a summer retreat for MS patients at SSU, they still want to see a permanent program implemented. When asked if she would go to the YMCA on a regular, year-round basis, Causey exclaimed, "I'll be here!"

Erskine, Quinn to Participate in Fulbright Lecturer Program

Dr. Thomas Erskine and Dr. Edna Quinn, who are husband and wife, have recently been selected to participate in the prestigious Fulbright Lecturer Program.

Erskine, a professor of English, will teach English and American literature at Yarmouk University in Irbid, Jordan. Quinn, an associate professor of nursing, will teach nursing theory and maternal/child nursing at the Jordan University of Science and Technology, a branch of Yarmouk also in Irbid.

They leave for Jordan in August and begin teaching in September. The two semester program concludes in June.

Some 3,500 college and university faculty vie each year for some 1,000 Fulbright Scholarships. Since the Fulbright program began in 1947, over 24,000 American scholars have taught, conducted research, lectured and traveled abroad, nurturing their professional growth and gaining personal satisfaction.

The benefits of the Fulbright experience, however, are not limited to the grantee only. The home and host institutions as well as their students benefit from the experience by becoming more international in their outlooks.

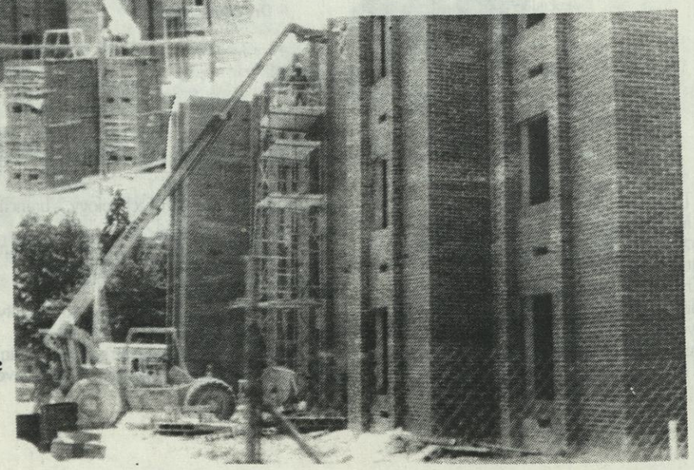
Construction of our newest residence hall, Severn Hall located at the south end of campus on Camden Avenue, is due to be completed this fall.



The $5 million facility will house 220 students.

Seidel Establishes Scholarships

Samuel W. Seidel announced his $50,000 endowment of scholarships for education majors.

Salisbury businessman and civic leader Samuel W. Seidel has donated $50.000 to the Salisbury State University Foundation to establish new scholarships for future teachers.

"Over the years Sam Seidel has given of himself unstintingly to make SSU the best it can be. This latest contribution by him in the form of a $50,000 endowment is clear evidence of his unflagging commitment to ensure an educated citizenry," said President Thomas E. Bellavance.

Seidel today, at ceremonies announcing the gift, said,"We want the brightest kids coming across the stage at their high school graduation to choose teaching as a career and Salisbury State as their college."

According to an agreement between the SSU Foundation and Seidel, the program officially begins in September when the first freshman student will enter the SSU School of Education and Professional Studies as a Seidel Scholar. That student will receive annually a stipend of $1,000 through the student's four years.

Each subsequent fall a Seidel Scholar shall be named until they represent each class year. Seidel said he envisions the scholarships ultimately ranging "from the freshman year to the graduate student."

Seidel always has had a keen interest in public school education. Previously, he endowed a nursing scholarship at SSU in honor of his wife, Marilyn, a registered nurse. For two years he served as president of the SSU Foundation Board. During those years the two largest gifts ever given to Salisbury State, the multimillion dollar Perdue and Henson endowments, were received and "...much credit belongs to Sam Seidel," said Robert Gearhart, executive director of the Foundation.

Seidel, who attended Salisbury State, taught and coached at Wicomico High School after World War II. In 1951 he coached the U.S. All Star basketball team on its South American tour. "A very good year," he said with a smile.

In 1952 he went into the insurance business and established three companies which became the largest privately owned insurance operation in Maryland. Last year he sold the business to British International Insurance Co., but continues as president.

Throughout his professional career Seidel has been a popular public figure. "He always has been known as a friend of the common man," said a colleague. For 20 years Seidel was Salisbury City Councilman and received numerous awards including the Martin Luther King Service Award, the Brotherhood Award from the National Council of Christians and Jews, the Rotary Four-Way Test Award and the Salisbury State Distinguished Alumni Award.

"It's great what's happened at Salisbury State," Seidel said, praising the better students and more highly degreed faculty the institution is attracting. "I'm very proud to be a little part of that...through the Foundation."

"We at the University are not only appreciative of this magnificent gift but feel deeply honored by Mr. Seidel's endorsement of our past efforts," Dr. Bellavance said.

A major project scheduled to begin in the near future will be the cataloging and preparing of a descriptive users' brochure of the extensive folklore holdings in the Center. The bulk of this collection, formerly known as the Delmarva Folklore Archives and originated by Dr. Polly Stewart (now a co-director of the Center), consists of written folklore manuscripts. However a number of taped oral histories were recently added.

Dr. William H. Wroten, former chair of the History Department and retired professor of history, recently donated a collection of some 15 taped interviews with Dorchester County residents; six oral history interviews with Wicomico County residents were donated by Sharon Jones.

Jones recently presented a slide-lecture at the University on the growth and demise of the willing business in the area. Much of her research was conducted at the Center, which co-sponsored her presentation, and copies of her findings, including slides, taped interviews and monograph will be donated to it. The project, initiated by the West Side Historical Society in Wicomico County, was partially funded by a grant from the Maryland Humanities Council.

A collection of 18th and 19th century Worcester County deeds has also been received from the family of Everett Elijah Hearn. The papers comprise on the larger collections of original deeds, plats and bonds to date. The documents are, for the most part, in extremely good condition and chronicle in great detail the sale of land from one family member to another.

The Research Center opened in new quarters in Holloway Hall in September 1988. Its new facilities are available to students and the public and has been used by several classes doing research in local history and by a number of community patrons researching family history and land records.

The Center's summer hours are Tuesdays and Thursdays from 10 a.m.-3 p.m., or by appointment.

SSU has 18 sports for men and women, many of which rank among the NCAA Division III's best.
